M'KONE ONLY NEW MEMBER ELECTED TO SCHOOL BOARD; ALL OLD MEMBERS GO BACK

Mrs. Morris Polls 947 Votes but not Enough for Election—W. H. Pretty Defeated—Mr. Gordon Heads Poll with Mr. Fowler a Close Second.

As a result of the elections for the Board of Education, held yesterday, only one new member will serve in that body, Mr. J. A. McKone. The other three are Messrs G. N. Gordon, A. A. Fowler and Roland Deane.

Mr. McKone himself an educationalist, having been principal of the Peterborough Business College for many years is eminently qualified for a seat on the Board. His practical experience should prove of value when a great many problems connected with educational development will require consideration. Mr. McKone polled a creditable vote yesterday when the fact of its being the first time his name has appeared before the electorate of the city and his competitors who piled up bigger votes are all members of several year's standing.

Mrs. Morris, the first woman candidate to offer herself in this city was not successful at the polls, although she was only 114 beneath the record of her nearest competitor. Entering the race upon short notice and without having had time to organize properly for the campaign and without the advantages offered by an organization already in existence she made an excellent showing and will come back next year stronger as a result of having placed her name before the electors on this occasion.

An examination of the votes polled by Messrs Gordon, Fowler and Deane show them to be fairly close in their running. It is evident, then, that the male voters of the city must have given each of these three their support and divided their fourth vote amongst the remaining three candidates. The proportion of women who exercise the franchise in Peterborough is small and Mrs. Morris' defeat cannot be considered as a repudiation of the principles for which she stood.

As The Poll Stood

Gordon	1428
Fowler	1410
Deane	1256
McKone	1050
Mrs. Morris	945

MAY BE MINISTER

LENINE'S TROOPS MEET DISASTER IN THE URALS

WERE SURPRISED BY GENERAL GAUDA WHO CAPTURES 31,000 PRISONERS.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Vladivostok, Jan. 2.—By the Associated Press.)—In capturing Perm in the Ural mountains, Gen. Gaida at the head of the Czecho-Slovak and Siberian forces, virtually destroyed the Bolshevik third army from which he took 31,000 prisoners and much booty. Gen. Gaida's troops captured an armored train on which Nikolai Lenine, the Bolshevik premier, was directing operations in the region of Perm. Lenine himself escaped, but several members of his party were taken prisoners. The bulk of Gaida's force was made up of Siberian troops and Czechs. In addition to 31,000 prisoners reported, Gen. Gaida captured 5,000 railway cars, 120 field guns, 1,000 machine guns, 30 automobiles, an entire wagon transport several armored trains and several thousand horses. His manoeuvre was a complete surprise to the Bolshevik as proved by the fact that he captured several prominent Soviet leaders at the headquarters of the third Bolshevik army. Ten Bolshevik regiments are declared to have been annihilated, and the rest of the enemy army was driven across the Kama River.

Troops of Gen. Semehoff, the anti-Bolshevik leader in the Chita district, have occupied Verkhni Udinsk on the Siberian railway east of Lake Baikal.

LABOR MAKES CLEAN SWEEP AND MORRISON HEADS POLL; BOARD OF TRADE A WINNER

NEW LABOR LEADER

J. H. Thomas, M.P., Secretary of the General Railwaymen's Union of Great Britain, who is likely to be the leader of the Opposition in the New British House of Commons.

J. J. Turner and James Hamilton Elected by Big Vote—Edgar, McIntyre and Taylor of Old Council Are Returned—Dobbin, Jones and Saunders Defeated.

Labor not only swept the field yesterday but placed one of the candidates at the head of the polls by the biggest vote recorded during the day. Besides this, three of the labor aldermen, Morrison, Gainey and Murray, will hold office for two years. The other candidate to win this honor, by reason of the votes polled, are Messrs. Hamilton and Turner, the representatives of the Board of Trade.

Of the ten members of the former Council, four declined nomination. Of the six who ran yesterday, Edgar, McIntyre and Taylor were re-elected, while Jones, Saunders and Dobbin went down to defeat. It seems to have been a case in which Labor and every other distinct element in the fight combined to encompass the defeat of the old Council, and there is hardly a corporal's guard of that body left. The Council next year, with the vote polled by each candidate, will be composed of the following, besides Mayor Duncan, who was returned by acclamation:

Morrison	1887
Turner	1296
Hamilton	1272
Gainey	1274
Murray	1216
Carnike	1149
Edgar	1007
Phelan	1015
Taylor	949

Dr. Liebknecht advocated participation by the Spartacus element in the election of members of the national assembly on the ground that the party might be able to influence the composition of the assembly. Rosa Luxembourg, one of the Spartacus leaders, replied in a violent speech, declaring amid thunderous applause that "a meeting of the national assembly must be prevented at all costs."

Dr. Liebknecht's proposal was rejected by a vote of 63 to 23.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Jan. 2.—After an hour's discussion this morning as to the procedure, etc., the Government investigation by Justice Hedgins into the charges of the returned soldiers regarding their treatment on the transport Northland was adjourned this afternoon. The Dominion Government Counsel intimated that the charges summed up were, poor and dirtily served food, insufficient accommodation and lack of washing facilities and also that the stewards sold soldiers food that they should have served as regular meals.

It was intimated that the captain and other officers of Northland were on their way here to testify.

HEALTH RECORD FOR PAST YEAR

A surprising feature of the vital statistics for 1918 as compared with 1917 compiled from the records of the city clerk, is the slight raise in the death rate for the year just closed over that of 1917.

In 1918 one of the most dealy epidemics which ever afflicted the people of this continent, or for that matter, of the world, swept over the country taking a toll of human life greater than that of the recent war. Peterborough, in common with other cities and municipalities, had its visitation from the plague, though in a lighter degree than many other places, thanks to the preventitive measures and capable work of an efficient Board of Health and health officer. How fortunate this city was will be realized from a glance at the figures below, which show that there were only nine more deaths in Peterborough in the year just closed than in 1917:

For 1917.
Births	456
Deaths	347
Marriages	254
For 1918.
Births	457
Deaths	356
Marriages	190

In 1917 there were 347 deaths as compared with 356 in the following year.

For Dec., 1917.
Births	33
Deaths	32
Marriages	26
For Dec., 1918.
Births	41
Deaths	33
Marriages	20

TEARING RAID INTO GERMANY

THAT IS OBJECT OF POLISH ARMY MARCHING ON BERLIN.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Geneva, Jan. 2.—The Polish army, which is marching toward Berlin, has as its object "a tearing raid into Germany," according to the Polish agency at Lausanne. The infantry is well armed and is supported by artillery and cavalry. The infantry already has occupied important railway centres, including Kreuz-Driesen and Posnau, and has captured a large amount of railway stock with little resistance. The Germans are rearming the demobilized troops and fighting is expected, although many of the demobilized soldiers are refusing to serve. The agency says that as the German railways are disorganized there is a possibility of a well-organized Polish army reaching Berlin.

Huns Must Salute American Officers

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Coblenz, Jan. 2.—Beginning tomorrow all German civil employees in uniform and all German soldiers within the American area of occupation must salute American officers. Failure to comply makes the German liable to arrest. An order to this effect reached Coblenz today from American advance general headquarters at Treves.

Barnia and St. Catharines carried bylaws yesterday to abolish the ward system. The latter city also carried a bylaw to establish a board of education.

CELEBRATE THE SIGNAL VICTORY

LABOR HELD MASS MEETING AT HEADQUARTERS WHEN RETURNS WERE IN.

The Labor men of the city held a jubilation gathering at their headquarters in the Labor Hall last night when all the returns were in and it was apparent that their entire ticket had been elected and that one of the candidates, R. Morrison, headed the polls. Speeches were made by the four successful candidates, Sergt. Whatley, representing the Great War Veterans' Association, and by members of the Trades Council and other prominent Labor leaders.

A resolution tendering congratulations to the candidates was passed. Thanks and congratulations also were extended to A. J. Bolwell, chairman of the organization committee and to all those who worked so earnestly in the interests of Labor's cause.

MAY MAKE HUNS PAY PENSIONS

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Jan. 2.—Four hundred and forty million dollars will be required to pay pensions to Canada's soldiers returned or returning from war. This is the estimate made by the Minister of Finance and forwarded to Sir Robert Borden, in England for information of the peace conference. The hope is that Germany will be called upon to provide for this amount.

GAGGED GUNS

This unique surrender picture was taken on the quarter deck of the German battle cruiser Seydlitz, near the Firth of Forth after the surrender to Sir David Beatty. The guns, which were to have had the "day," were closed by tompions and will awake no more echoes. British officers at the right, Germans on the left—London Daily Mail.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

THURSDAY, JANUARY 2, 1919

THE NEW SCHOOL BOARD.

IT CAN HARDLY BE regarded as a new Board of Education, as the same members with one exception will compose that body for the current year, Mr. J. A. McKone taking the place of Mr. Vincent Eastwood. The latter has been a faithful and efficient servant of the people for years, one of the men whose foresight and tireless energy made the school system of Peterborough what it is today, and his retirement was altogether a matter of his own choice. In Mr. Eastwood, who for the past two years has acted as chairman of the Board, the city has lost a valuable worker, but it has been fortunate in securing another to replace him in the person of Mr. J. A. McKone. No better all-round man for the position could be obtained. He is equipped in every way for the responsible duties for which he has been chosen, as a practical teacher, a citizen of long and creditable standing in the community, and as one who combines business ability with scholastic attainments. Mr. McKone believes in practical education for the young, and the Board in his selection has secured another ardent advocate of the proposed Technical School for this city.

Mrs. W. S. Morris is to be congratulated upon the vote she polled, even if she failed of election. She went into the contest without an organization of any kind, and no attempt was made to get out the vote in her favor. Like some of the aldermanic candidates who went down to defeat, Mrs. Morris can now realize that it requires something more than personal popularity to win an election. The experience, however, has been valuable and will stand the women of the city in good stead in future elections. No woman, especially a woman pioneer in such a contest, can hope to win against men skilled in the arts of politics and with a political organization at their backs.

THE NEW COUNCIL.

THE VOTE YESTERDAY may have been light, but one thing is certain, the Labor men turned out, and as a result all four of their candidates were elected. Not only that, but one of their number heads the poll, and three of the Labor men, by virtue of the vote given them, will hold office for two years. James Garside alone will be called upon at the end of the present year to give an account of his stewardship.

Another feature of the election yesterday was the fact that what may be regarded as the extreme elements, the Laborites and the two candidates of the Board of Trade, were both successful and stood at the head of the list. Both J. H. Turner and James Hamilton, from standing of the list at the time of writing, will hold office for two years. The Board of Trade is to be congratulated not only upon its success, but upon the high character of the men who will represent that body on the Council next year. Labor's success, with that of Messrs. Turner and Hamilton, demonstrates the value of an organization in even a municipal election. Any man, no matter what his fitness for the position, no matter how well he stands in the community, can hope to succeed, except perhaps by a narrow margin, if he leaves everything to the interest of his friends and goes into the contest without enthusiastic workers. Labor men worked for their own candidates, the members of the Board of Trade did their utmost on behalf of Messrs. Turner and Hamilton, and the sequel appears in the election returns.

There has always been missing a connecting link between the Board of Trade and the City Council, but that has been supplied. Avoiding like friction between the two bodies, friction that has militated against the welfare of the city, should now disappear. There are representatives of the Board on the Council, and membership in the former body is open to every alderman in the city. If it requires unity between the two organizations to promote the interests of the city, that purpose has been achieved.

The Labor men who have been elected to the Council have been prolific in their promises, and much will be expected of them by the voters, by those who supported and those who opposed them. Their public acts will be closely scanned by all parties in the community. They have given their pledge that they will as aldermen work not for the welfare of Labor alone but for that of the city as a whole, and it is upon this plank in their platform that their services to the community will be judged.

Labor's surprising success is in a measure due to the assistance rendered by the G. W. V. A., and it is now apparent that here is a force existant in this city that will have to be reckoned with in all future campaigns, whether municipal, provincial or federal.

There is a further significance in yesterday's election which is apparent to every person who understands the situation. However that may be, it must be admitted that the new Council is more truly representative of the entire city, of every class and condition in it, than any that has been elected for years, if, indeed, any such body has ever chosen by the voters of Peterborough. Labor and the Veterans, the Board of Trade are represented, and three members of the old Council have been endorsed by the people. Ald.-Elect Phelan and Ald.-Elect Turner have had aldermanic experience, so that in the Council for 1919 fifty per cent. of the members are old hands in dealing with municipal matters.

The 1919 Council has important duties to perform and grave responsibilities to assume. They can succeed marking as a unit for the advancement of the city, but in the discharge of their duties the co-operation of the citizens is essential.

Let the men who have elected the aldermen for 1919 take an interest in the work that is to be performed by their representatives. One way to do this is to attend the meetings of the Council instead of relying altogether upon newspaper reports, full and complete as these may be, for their ideas as to what is actually going on.

CIVIC APATHY.

THERE IS ALWAYS a considerable percentage of the voting population of the city who fail to turn out to the polls on the day of the municipal election, and yesterday was no exception. Probably the fact that the election is now held on a holiday has something to do with this, as the class referred to are those most likely to be out of the city or entertaining friends at home and who cannot spare themselves from their social duties to meet their obligations as citizens.

It is more likely, however, that the non-voters are the men who are so assured of the success of those whom they favor for office and of whose fitness they are so convinced that they take their election as a matter of course, an easy proposition that does not require their assistance. They are wrong in their conclusions and that was demonstrated again yesterday. Very often equipment for office really proves a handicap for a candidate as his friends fail to turn out to work for his election.

Compulsory voting has been tried out in other places and has proved satisfactory. It at least does away with snap verdicts and assures the decree of the majority.

If it has been deemed advisable to insert a provision in the election law for aldermen to prevent plumping, then the same provision should be made to apply to the election for members of the Board of Education, so that anything like political chicanery can be eliminated from both alike.

THE COUNCIL'S PROGRAM.

THE MAJORITY of the new members of the City Council as well as those who have been re-elected now stand committed to a number of pledges in the fulfilment of which they are likely to be judged. Aside from the duties that are mandatory upon them, such as the construction of the Hunter street bridge and the sewage disposal plant, the newly-elected aldermen—at least the majority of them—have promised the people to provide public bathing facilities and to furnish the Veterans with a memorial hall. The year that lies ahead of us promises to be rich in municipal problems and the new Council has plenty of hard work cut out for it.

At the end of the year five of the members will be called to the bar of public account and forced to face the people again. The remainder will hold over. Experience has proved that in legislative bodies the most satisfactory results are obtainable when all the members are elected at the same time. If there be offenders among them, all can be reached by the dissatisfied people. At present half of these might easily escape and hold on in their course despite the attitude of the people with regard to their official acts.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

ONCE AGAIN the Veterans, reinforced by Labor, went over the top in dashing style.

THE VERY MEN who complain because the Government fixed the price of wheat are the very ones to call upon the same power to set the price of other commodities.

OPINIONS OF OTHER EDITORS.

Best or Worst.
(Detroit Free Press.)

An English paper says ex-Crown Prince Freddie is a worse liar than his father, meaning perhaps that he is not nearly so good a one.

The Home-Comers.
(Hamilton Spectator.)

Publication of the munificent action of the Government, in regard to post-discharge pay of soldiers, should bring joy into many a worthy, war-worn veteran's home.

Slow Knitting.
(New York Telegram.)

Some women are a bit disappointed because the war ended before they could finish knitting the mate to that sock they started when we first joined the Allies.

The Troubled Air.
(Vancouver Province.)

"Free as the air" is likely to become an obsolete phrase. Rules and regulations are already being planned for the control of aerial highways, and in time the freedom of the air may become the subject of as much controversy as the freedom of the seas.

Would Like Return to Patronage.
(Hamilton Herald.)

It is a significant fact that neither the Tory nor the Grit extremists make any specific charge of a serious character against the Union Government. We fancy that their chief ground for complaint against it is one about which they carefully maintain silence—the fact that the Union Government has swept away the evil of political patronage. That has cut all the extreme partisans to the quick, and one reason why they yearn for a return to party government is that they hope for the re-establishment of the patronage system, which makes it worth while for a fellow to work for his party.

No Longer a Game.
(Charlottetown Patriot.)

We do not desire that politics should ever again be classed as a game in this country. We shall always have our politics, and we shall always have our parties. But our politics should be what in the exercise of our best judgment we believe to be our country's best interests. Our parties should be the expression of our sincere and conscientious convictions to serve those best interests. It would be just as unhappy in the future to consider politics a game as it would be to believe the Christian religion a form of sport.

Union Government.
(The Sentinel, Toronto.)

It is interesting to observe that none of those who are now trying to bring about the disruption of the Union Government have been friendly to the Union idea at any time. Being sincere in their belief that party government is best, they naturally desire to restore the old conditions. Recent discussions by both Liberals and Conservatives, therefore, have no particular significance.

DRINKING CUSTOMS IN ENGLAND

(By Alice M. Archer.)

Since May, 1915, the sobriety of the Brish nation, owing to the enforcing of the liquor control regulations as a war measure has led to a striking change in the aspects of the streets of London and other great cities, and a still greater change in the habits, and, consequently, in the health of the people. Statistics quoted in this connection refer necessarily in great part to the women of England, Scotland and Wales, owing to the absence of their male relatives serving in the army and navy.

Since the control was assumed there has been a decrease in the number of convictions for drunkenness, deaths from cirhosis of the liver, and other diseases directly attributable to alcoholism. The number of inebriates admitted to reformatories in England and Wales in 1915, for instance, was seventy-eight, and in Scotland the number for the same period was twenty-one. During six months in 1918 ten inebriates were admitted in England and Wales and none in Scotland.

Lord d'Abernon, chairman of the liquor traffic central control board, stated recently at a meeting of the Royal Society of Arts that in England and Wales in the prewar year 1913 there was no fewer than 188,877 convictions for drunkenness—153,112 or men an d35,765 of women—the figures having steadily risen since 1900. The figures for women sank to 12,307 in 1917.

In dilitary circles also the opinion has been expressed that drunkenness as a serious military problem has ceased to exist. The deaths among wome nfro cirhosis of the liver showed in the same period a drop from 1,665 to 808. Certified deaths from alcoholism, which were 719 in 1913, were 222 last year. Cases of overlying of infants were reduced from 1,226 to 704, and cases of delirium tremens fell from 214 to forty-six.

A great decrease also has been noted in the nuncer of crimes hf violence, and there has been a diminution of illness directle resulting from excessive drinking.

Writing early this year on the efficacy of drink control, Sir Edward Henry, late chief commissioner of police for the metropolis of London, stated that the convictions for drunkenness fell from 67,103 in 1914 to 16,567 in 1917. These figures cover 700 square miles of the metropolitan police district, with its population of over 7,500,000.

In view of the good effect of war measures relating to drink restrictions it has been urged in a letter to the press signed by the archbishop of Canterbury, Cardinal Bourne, Principal Selbie and General Booth, that there shall be no relaxation during the period of demobilization.

It is pointed out that the consumption of alcoholic liquors in the united kingdom during 1917 shows a decline of approximately 38 per cent. as compared with the year 1916 and 50 per cent. as compared with 1913. Despite this decline a statement recently made in the British parliament shows the number of men of all ages still employed directly or indirectly in the manufacture and sale of intoxicants is 150,000 in addition to a very large number of women.

Tiresome Airs.

"Alice is so tiresome with her airs."

TODAY'S STORY

The town house of Prince and Princess Joachim Murat, placed at the disposal of President and Mrs Wilson during their stay in Paris at the request of the Government was completely renovated for the reception of the United States Chief Executive and his wife.

An army of workmen and servants were employed cleaning and replacing furniture, paintings, portraits and beautiful marble statuary

On the lower floor of the mansion an addition to salon, ballroom, dining and breakfast rooms there are a private study for the President and offices for his personal staff. The upper floors contain great high ceilinged sleeping chambers and other rooms wondefully decorated with priceless collections of antiques.

In the sleeping chambers are enormous four-poster beds, some of which require little steps to enable the occupant to climb in. Stern old gentlemen, some in uniform of the days that are past, and many beautiful women in the costumes of the times in which they lived, look down from nearly every wall. Golden cherubs peep from above the handsome tapestries in one chamber.

There is a profusion of ivory miniatures and all manner of vases and ornaments gathered from the world's four corners. Every room contains at least three long French windows, delicately curtained.

FEMININE LOGIC

The young lady across the way says it didn't take long after Gen Foch started his offensive to make the kaiser a kaiser emeritus.

"Yes, she's even worse than the phonograph next door."

Diagnosed.

He was a young doctor and he had been asked to break the news to the wife of the man who had been run over by an automobile.

"Is my husband really ill?" asked the lady.

"Ah-er-a little run down," said the young doctor hopefully.

Escaping Danger.

While visiting his nephew in the city Uncle Sam Shimmerpate stopped in front of a motion picture billboard on which were displayed pictures of lions, tigers, elephants and other African wild animals.

"Great guns, Henry," he said to his nephew, "I'm mighty glad I leave town Saturday afternoon."

"Why are you so anxious to get away?" asked the nephew.

Pointing to the billboard, Uncle Sam read aloud the words: "To be released Saturday night."

APSLEY

Apsley, Jan. 2.—A reception in honor of Pte. Frank Tanner was held in the Orange Hall on the evening of December 23. Pte. Tanner was the first boy to enlist from here, and is a son of Mr. Thos. Tanner of Chandos, and has just arrived from England with his bride. He belonged to the Apsley platoon and went overseas with the 93rd Battalion, and has seen much active service. The following was the program:

Chairman's Address—Reeve Lean.
Instrumental—Orchestra.
Address—Rev. Mr. Spence.
Song—Rev. Mr. Beck.
Instrumental—Orchestra.
Address of Welcome, read by Mrs. W. Staples, Apsley.

The address was as follows:

Apsley, Dec. 23, 1918.

To Private Frank Tanner:

Dear Friend: Your many friends of this neighborhood take very much pleasure in gathering together here this evening for the purpose of giving you a hearty welcome home and to show our appreciation of your heroic service in the great war that has at last come to a happy termination.

As we turn our thoughts backward to the autumn of 1915, oh you rests the honor of being the first among our young Canadian patriots who cheerfully accepted the call of duty and went bravely forth from home and friends to take your part in the great struggle for freedom.

Your brave act set other minds thinking, and before many months our village boasted of a platoon. How majestically they marched through our streets, those heroic homeland lads, to whom duty was ever sacred.

Since the day you marched away our thoughts have been continually with you, learning from time to time of our brave Canadian soldiers in the front of the battle bringing glory to their country and inserting its name in the honor roll of civilized nations.

We feel that we cannot repay you in any way for what you have done and suffered in our cause. You have spent about three years of your life in wet and muddy trenches, and on active duty at death grapple with the most murderous enemies that ever menaced our civilization, and you among the lion-hearted sons of Canada saved the situation on many a hard-fought front.

Although we will not have the pleasure of welcoming home some of our heroes who now sleep in Flanders fields and o'er whose graves from year to year the poppies will grow and bloom, the sacrifice has not been in vain. Their brave deeds and heroism of the past will become the soul food of the present generation with inspirations for similar deeds and greater achievements.

We sympathize with you in the wounds that you have received, but you will always have the satisfaction of a clear conscience, having done your duty faithfully and well. We extend to Mrs. Tanner and yourself our most hearty greetings at this Yuletide season, and that your lives may be long, happy and prosperous is the sincere wish of all.

Signed on behalf of your friends,
MRS. W. LEAN,
MRS. BECK,
MRS. JONES,
MRS. M'ILVENA.

DOWNEYVILLE

Downeyville, Dec. 31.—Corp. W. J. O'Neil and Pte. Peter Perdue, who returned from overseas on Monday last, were welcomed by their many friends and relatives.

Pte. Ronald Galvin, of Ennismore, who returned from overseas on Monday last, is visiting his brother and sister here, Rev. Father Galvin and Miss Lottie Galvin.

Pte. Peter Perdue was a Saturday visitor to Mrs. Alice Gosselin, telling of the last days on board ship "City of Cairo" with her son, Pte. Alphonse Gosselin.

Ptes. Ronald Galvin and Ambrose Crough, of Ennismore, chums of the deceased, Pte. Alphonse Gosselin, visited Mrs. Alice Gosselin on Monday sympathizing with her in the loss of her son.

Pte. Peter Perdue spent Saturday with Mrs. Alice Gosselin telling of his last days on board ship "City of Cairo," with her death hero son, Pte. Alphonse Gosselin.

Pte. Perdue tell as follows:

In Montreal, before we boarded the ship, the flu was very bad, but nobody seemed to have it, but at last some began to get sick and especially on th third day sailing, it began to get terrible wicked and the ship began to roll around. It would nearly throw us out of our beds. The result was a large crowd got sea sick, but poor Alphonse happened to be one of the unlucky ones to get it so terrible bad.

The fourth day sailing he was taken to the hospital and finally he got so run down, along with the dampness, he took pneumonia. He struggled between life and death with intense suffering without the slightest murmur of any kind, but bore it all.

A. A. McINTYRE

It very soon had him worn out as I expected because I knew he could not live in that terrible struggling. He soon had to give in to his Heavenly Father's call from above, and at one o'clock at night on the sixth day his sufferings were ended. He died a hard death.

His funeral hour was at four o'clock p.m. The same day, during the mean time, I was gathering up his personal belongings to send to you, which was very lonesome work to do. Many a tear I shed while at it when I thought he is really gone, gone for good, one of my best comrades.

At last the weariest of all came—his funeral hour—which grieved us all to the hearts. I, along with Ambrose and Herb. Crough, Ronald Galvin, James Harrington, Eugene Maloney, all of us as you know, were his comrades, along with four others, were his pallbearers. Phonse was carried with the heart-felt sympathy to the grave yard as you might call it. There were eight others to be buried at the same time we set him down. Ambrose, Crough and I were called on to be prepared to lower him into his watery grave, which was a hard hard task, because we thought as much of it. The band sounded a few burial notes and at last the terrible words came, "Lower them." We all did, but it was the hardest blow that any of us ever got. It made it so dreadful dreary for us because when we would be downhearted he would come along with a happy joke or rhyme and do his best to keep us all cheery. He also had so happy a disposition. The tears we shed for him I'm sure are numberless.

Some of the other boys who were lowering the other dead heroes said at the lowering moments, "O, how I'd like if we were only going with them."

So with parting words, Pte. Perdue said, "Mrs. Gosselin, do not worry for him. It may seem hard to think he died so hard a death, but from the time he was with us and even before when we used to be together around home, he led a pure Christian life, and will have nothing to answer for. So instead of being with you he will be enjoying his first Christian with his Almighty Father in Heaven as He seen fit to call him to Him."

Mr. Urban Lucas was a Lindsay visitor on Thursday last.

Mr. and Mrs. Dan Winn, of Toronto, are spending a short Christmas vacation with the latter's mother, Mrs. Crowley.

Miss Annie O'Brien, who had been teaching school in St. Catharines, is home for Christmas.

Mrs. Edward Houlihan entertained a few folks at her home on Friday evening and in honor of her nephew, Corp. W. O'Neil, who has returned from overseas.

Mr. Patrick Callihan received a letter from his son, Pte. Victor Callihan, telling that he is on his way from overseas.

Mr. and Mrs. John Perdue entertained a large crowd at their home on Monday, holding a card party and dance in honor of the former's returned hero brother Pte. R. Perdue. Pte. Ronald Galvin, of Ennismore, another returned hero, was there.

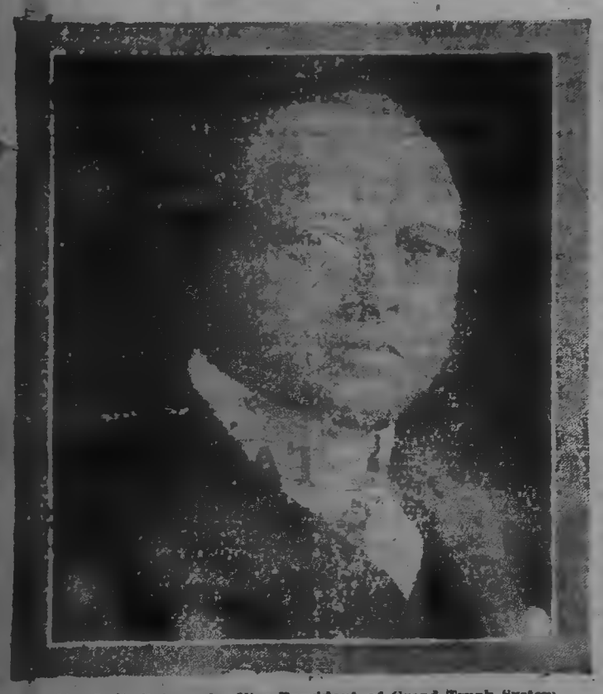
Mr. and Mrs. Percy Lucas were Christmas visitors with the latter's father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Simon Perdue, of Peterboro.

A large crowd from here attended to the denomination in Omemee Hall on Monday for the purpose of denominating a reeve and four councillors for the Township of Emily.

Mr. Albert Lucas was a Lindsay visitor on Saturday last with a load of hay.

A few of our old folks spent Sunday afternoon and evening with Mr. and Mrs. Henry Carroll.

FROM JUNIOR CLERK TO RAILWAY VICE-PRESIDENT



Mr. J. E. Dalrymple, Vice-President of Grand Trunk System

Montreal, January 1st.—Mr. J. E. Dalrymple, Vice-President in Charge of Traffic, Grand Trunk System, today received the congratulations of his railway associates and of the leaders in the business world upon the occasion of his fiftieth birthday. The anniversary was a double one, as it marked als the completion by Mr. Dalrymple of thirty-five and a half years of service with the Grand Trunk.

Mr. Dalrymple's record in the railway service is a splendid one. He has worked his way upward in the one company from a junior clerkship to an office of high executive responsibility, where he directs the traffic on the Grand Trunk and Grand Trunk Pacific Railways, Grand Trunk Pacific Coast Steamship lines and subsidiaries of the System. These rail and water lines serve eighty-nine per cent. of Canada's urban population grouped in its forty principal cities.

In addition to holding these offices Mr. Dalrymple is a member of the board of directors of other large organizations, such as the Canada Steamship Lines, and is regarded as one of the most able officers in the transportation field on this continent. Born at Montreal, it was in the Treasurer's office of the Grand Trunk in that city that he had his first railroad experience. Later he occupied the positions of Secretary to the Freight Traffic Manager of the Chicago and Grand Trunk Railway, and Secretary to the General Manager of the Grand Trunk Railway System. After doing notable work as Division Freight Agent of the Company at Hamilton and at Detroit, he was appointed General Freight Agent of the Central Vermont Railway in 1900. He was Assistant to the General Manager of the Grand Trunk System from March, 1901, to April, 1902, when he returned to the Central Vermont Railway to handle the growing freight traffic of that road. His success in that position led to his being chosen in 1905 as General Freight Agent of the Grand Trunk Railway System, with its great international traffic arteries. In May, 1908, he went to Winnipeg as Assistant Freight Traffic Manager of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway and Steamships.

The late Mr. Chas. M. Hays recalled Mr. Dalrymple, at the age of forty-three, to Montreal, as Vice-President of the Grand Trunk, Grand Trunk Pacific and Central Vermont Railways. In this vice-presidential office he has played a notable part in developing the traffic of the System to its present magnitude. How striking has been the increase in the business of the System since Mr. Dalrymple was appointed Vice-President in charge of Traffic is shown by the gross earnings, which have reached $95,000,000 in 1918 as against $53,000,000 in 1911, an increase of eighty per cent. in seven years.

During his career, and particularly in the last half dozen years, Mr. Dalrymple has been in close contact with the directing heads of Canadian industry, and has won a high reputation for the masterly manner in which he has outlined to the Railway Commissioners and to the business men of the Dominion the railroad problems as they affect the important question of railway revenues.

Got Complete Family Record.

Sugar records now being kept in grocery stores are causing some perturbation on the part of grocery men. Since the food administration limited the amount of sugar a family can use per month, the grocers have had to keep track of the amount sold to each customer.

For this purpose they use a sort of book, or ledger, in which the customer's name and address, and other information pertaining thereto, are recorded.

Since most of the purchasers are women, it can be imagined that the grocers' task, sometimes, is not so easy, but the women, realizing that the information must be given, have gracefully accorded it.

Nor is that all.

Grocers do tell that they get more information than they have any need for. Here's how it is:

"They insist on telling me all about little Johnny, and what little Susie is doing today, and—why, say, since we started this here sugar record, we know the complete family history of all our customers."

Now what do you know about that?

ALL HE CAN HANDLE.

Mrs. Henry—Mr. Swift never takes his wife out in his automobile.

Mrs. Henry—I guess he doesn't care to have two unmanageable things on his mind at one time.

Japanese Taught to Repress Emotion.

Until late years the repression of any appearance of strong emotion was carefully drilled into the mind and life of every Japanese child of the better class. There is much more freedom now than formerly, but the influence of past training is seen everywhere—in art, in literature, on the stage and in the customs of daily life. Artists paint the autumn moon, which every Japanese adores, but he wraps the brilliant disk within a veil of cloud.

Hemp Tree's Many Products.

The hemp tree is one of the most versatile plants in the world. From it comes, besides rope and wrapping paper, the drug hashish, called by its devotees "the joyous," obtained by boiling the leaves and flowers with fresh butter; a valuable vegetable oil, a cake used by the farmers for their stock, and the finer varieties are used for cloth, coarse laces and braids. A great deal of the seed is exported for canary seed.

Advice Soldiers Need Not Take.

Sergeant, the French for which is sergent, the Italian sergente, comes from the medieval Latin word serviens, meaning a servant, a vassal, or a vassal soldier who seems to have acted as an orderly or striker. Tell this to your sergeant some warm day when he criticises your appearance on parade in his coarse, unfeeling manner. It will soften him. It may even melt him.—New York Evening Post.

Not Originally Military Title.

General, the noun, and the adjective general, the antonym of particular, go back to the Latin generalis, meaning belonging to a race or kind, and itself tracing to genus genera, from gigners, to beget. Generalis in Caesar's and Pompey's day had nothing to do with the army; the Roman general was an imperator. The title general primarily means an officer holding a general command.

Protection From Live Wires.

For the sure protection of linemen handling live wires a pair of gloves inside and one outside of the rubber gloves have been recommended. The woven fabric inside glove takes up perspiration and shields the rubber from the finger nails and a leather gauntlet over the rubber glove protects from outside mechanical injury, aids in grasping tools and keeps the hands warm in winter.

Just What He Had Done.

Charlie, trying to amuse himself as best he could, came out of the garage dragging an old cobwebby umbrella, which after much exertion he was able to open over his head. His grandmother, coming to the door, called out, "Charlie, you put that umbrella right up this minute." Charlie piped back, "I has dot it up and I'se doin for a walk."

"Finality."

"Why are some of your colleagues so anxious to print their remarks in the Record?"

"I don't know," answered Senator Sorghum; "unless it's the only way they can feel that they have had the last word in an argument."

FALL AND WINTER WEARING APPAREL

New French and American Fashions Differ Only in the Details.

SHOW TWO TYPES OF CLOTHES

Slim Straight Line and Slim Draped Line Are in the Forefront—One-Piece Frock in Three Materials.

New York.—French and American gowns have both appeared in force since the first of October, notes a leading fashion correspondent. They were in existence since the first of September, but the public usually permits the people in the trade to use September for their own selection and purchasing, while it wears what it has on hand and looks at clothes with interest, but not always with the intention to buy.

The demand for conservation has struck to the heart of the public, and the month of September was their best chance to use their ingenuity in old costumes and see what could be done in the way of alteration and renovation.

It must be truthfully said that not much was done. It is difficult to tell of the process of re-establishing old clothes that goes on in small centers, but in the great cities the people who sell clothes report an extraordinarily good season beginning the first of September.

Behind this fact is a significant reason, and it has to do with the position of women in labor. It is a tremendous situation, and it has not been done full justice by those who reason out the processes of cause and effect.

The majority of women are too active today to feel that they have time to superintend the seamstress. Their advent into the business world has given them somewhat the point of view of a man concerning the alteration of clothes. They feel that time, vitality and money spent, with the result debatable, is not efficiency.

As an offset to this viewpoint there is the necessity for alteration in thousands of households, where the income has not been enlarged and where the clothes must be worn as they are, in and out of fashion, or altered with caution and care.

Need for French Gowns.

Then, if these conditions are true, asks the public, why the expensive French gowns? To serve as inspiration for the dressmakers, is the answer.

Since the day after Labor day those of us who are going through the semi-annual process of absorbing or buying the new fashions for purposes of trade have seen French and American gowns paraded before the eyes in numbers that soon lost their significance. The vision has become weary; the brain has refused to record impressions. The buyers brought home from France whatever they thought was available for inspiration or might serve as a copy outright, and the American dressmakers and designers, even those who have no idea of abandoning Paris for inspiration, turned out thousands of gowns in which there was no French label and no dishonest trick or unworthy lying about the origin. In truth, some of the importers who have the most powerful trade say that their best clientele were delighted to get and wear American gowns.

French and American gowns show two types of clothes—the slim straight line, and the slim draped line. America and France show the instep or toe-length skirt for house and evening, and America lengthens her tailored costumes for the street, while Paris shortens them.

Trim Coats With Fur.

America believes in the reinstating of the coat and skirt for everyday usage, and Paris, while agreeing to this idea, confined to create one-piece frocks of soft thin materials to be worn under heavy coats. America makes her coat suits of heavy materials and trims them with fur.

Both use a quantity of soft velvet more metallic fabrics for new kinds of cuirass bodices to join up with heavy street skirts. America relies more on the separate bodice, to be bought at the shops, made of georgette, fine tarlatan, chiffon or lace.

France uses more black, elaborately trimmed with metal and colors, for evening and afternoon, and America uses more soft, bright blue and flame color for evening gowns. France does not show as much gray as we expected.

It might be said that the only strong, essential point of difference is the draped skirt for evening instead of the straight line—the former American and the latter French; and also the shortness of the tailored suit as the French make it and its lengthened hem as the Americans make it.

Substitute for Tailored Suit.

As a compromise between the coat suit and the slim frock which many women choose for autumn street wear there is a costume which may soon be overridden by popularity. It consists of a narrow skirt and a tunic blouse that falls below the hips and is loosely girdled with a monastic cord. The blouse has no visible fastening. It apparently does not open. In truth some of them do not open. They slip over the head and adjust themselves with the effelegance of a peasant's smock. If they were tightly banded at the waistline with yards of brilliant material they would be definitely Arabian and quite brilliant in effect. They do not permit a girdle to touch them. They have a monk's cord carelessly twisted below the waistline, knotted, and dropped in tasseled ends at front or side.

Position of One-Piece Frock.

It is like discussing the war to touch upon the subject of the chances of the tailored suit as against the one-piece frock. The conservative people say that both types of street costume will be worn by the majority of women. Those, however, who feel that conservation in purchasing as well as in materials is needed, lean toward the one-piece frock if there is to be only one costume for the street in autumn. They feel that it can be worn now with a large neckpiece of fur, and all winter under a top coat of fur or velours.

There is not a good chance for last year's tailored suits to be worn this year, unless a woman was sufficiently fortunate then to buy an advance model. The changes, while they do not appear significant at first, are very much so when one gets into the swing of the season.

The one-piece frock is undoubtedly in fashion, and if you purchase one you can take your choice of these three materials—velours, trieotette, and serge. All the new designs seem to be based on these three foundation stones.

THE MAKING OF A FAMOUS MEDICINE

How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Is Prepared For Woman's Use.

A visit to the laboratory where this successful remedy is made would open the casual looker-on with the skillability, accuracy, skill and cleanliness which attends the making of this great medicine for women's ills.

Over 350,000 pounds of various herbs are used annually and all have to be gathered at the season of the year when their natural juices and medicinal substances are at their best.

The most successful solvents are used to extract the medicinal properties from these herbs.

Every utensil and tank that comes in contact with the medicine is thoroughly and as a final precaution in clarifying the medicine is pasteurized and sealed in sterile bottles.

It is the wonderful combination of roots and herbs, together with the skill and care used in the preparation which has made this famous medicine so successful in the treatment of female ills.

The letters from women who have been restored to health by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound which we are continually publishing attest to its virtue.

Is Life Insurance Safe?

How often we hear the question, "Would Life Insurance Companies stand the extra strain of a great epidemic?"

This question is now answered by experience. We have passed through the greatest war in history, and on its heels and overlapping it came the most malignant epidemic ever experienced on this Continent, one that claimed more victims in two months from the people of Canada and the United States than the war did in four and one-third years.

The fact that the surplus of every one of the old Established Companies of Canada has not only been maintained but increased, answers the above question most eloquently, and proves that Life Insurance is not only safe, but IMPREGNABLE.

Experience proves that it is as safe as a Victory Bond, and, in the event of death, infinitely better.

THE SUN LIFE OF CANADA has distributed more to compensate for the terrible wastage of the recent War and Epidemic than any other Company in Canada.

Is it not, then, a wise place in which to carry your Insurance?

Kings' Daughters' Entertainment

A New Year's entertainment and dance was held in the Conservatory last night under the auspices of the King's Daughters. Before the war this was one of the annual social events of the city, but for the last few years' war work, with its dislocation of many other social fetes had it effect upon this one.

There were about seventy-five couples present last night and a very pleasant time was spent, dancing and at cards. The musical part of the program was in charge of Mr. Snel of Toronto, a well-known musician of the Queen City.

Mr. T. H. Hooper was in charge of the catering last night, and the refreshments served were very dainty and everything was carried out in a most satisfactory manner.

The hall was beautifully decorated with bunting, which was very kindly loaned by J. J. Turner & Sons.

Mrs. A. Coulthard, Mr. W. A. Turner, Mrs. R. R. Hall, Mrs. Goodwill, Mrs. J. C. Smith and Mrs. Derrill.

Mrs. Rowand Now Reported Better

Mr. E. B. Fowler, one of the officers of St. Andrew's Church, telegraphed to Minneapolis this morning to Rev. W. L. H. Rowand, inquiring as to the condition of Mrs. Rowand, who is ill of the flu in that city, where she went to attend the wedding of their son.

Mrs. Rowand's friends will be pleased to learn from her husband's wired reply that the danger in her case is regarded as over. She is still very weak, however, and recovery will be slow.

Parting Tokens For Miss Crowley

A very enjoyable evening was spent by the Cavell Class of the Park Street Baptist Sunday School at the home of their teacher, Mrs. O. S. Matchett, 194 Rubidge street, last night. The evening was spent in games, after which refreshments were served.

Miss Myrtle O'Neill then called on Miss Kathleen Crawley, one of their members, to whom she read the following address, and at the proper moment Miss Netta Joliffe presented Miss Crawley with a beautiful comb and brush set. Miss Crawley leaves today for New Westminster to reside.

Dear Kathleen:

We, your fellow class mates, learn with much regret of your intended departure from our midst. We therefore beg of you to accept this small token as a symbol of our esteem towards you. We are sure you have been faithful in your attendence and in your help toward the class. It is the wish of all that you may, God willing, soon be in our midst once agin.

Mrs. O. S. Matchett, teacher; Myrtle O'Neill, Netta Joliffe, Lila Campbell, Lillie Feasey, Winnie Atkinson, Mary Hund, Thelma Purvis, Winnie Cooper, assistant teacher, Norma Johnston.

BIG INCREASE IN CUSTOM RETURNS

NEARLY $200,000 MORE LAST MONTH THAN IN DECEMBER, 1917.

Customs returns for this district as furnished by the coal collector's department covering the month of December, 1918, and of the nine months period from April 1 to December 31, just ended show a most gratifying increase amounting to $188,036.91 for December, 1918, as compared with the same period in 1917, and a general increase of $561,493.01 for the nine months just ended, as compared with the corresponding nine months in 1917.

These increases are most surprising, and as the Customs returns can be considered a most reliable indication of the business activity of the city—a sort of barometer—the people of Peterborough have every reason to be well satisfied with the results as published below:

Customs returns for December, 1918, $232,695.08; for December, 1917, $44,858.17, making an increase of $188,036.91 for the month just ended.

For the business period beginning April 1, 1918, and continuing until the end of last year, the returns show $1,187,627.58 as compared with $626,134.57 for the corresponding period in 1917, making an increase in the year just ended of $561,493.01.

VICE-PRESIDENT'S TEAM WON HONORS BY NARROW MARGIN.

At the curling rink yesterday there were seven rinks in operation and as practically the entire Club played, having been divided into two teams, one under President McDermid and the other led by Vice-President Giroux. HUGHSON JOHNSTONE

Statement From Mrs. Morris

Personally, the result of the election for Board of Education, is very acceptable, as I had faced with reluctance, the possibility of increased work and responsibility.

The vote plainly shows that the majority of the electors used their four votes, giving one to each of the three former members of the Board, the fourth vote being divided among the three new candidates, only one of whom could be elected.

The three former members of the Board were entitled to re-election as their service has been efficient.

Mr. McKone will be a valuable addition to the Board and will extend a welcome to a woman member next year.

PTE. GOSSELIN BURIED AT SEA

DOWNEYVILLE RETURNED SOLDIER GIVES AN ACCOUNT OF THE CEREMONY.

Downeyville, Jan. 2.—Pte. Peter Perdue was a Saturday visitor to Mrs. Alice Gosselin. Speaking of his last days on board the "City of Cairo" with her son, the late Pte. Alphonse Gosselin, Pte. Perdue had the following to say:

The influenza was very bad before we boarded the ship, but everybody seemed to be all right until the third day sailing, when the water got so stirred up and the ship began to roll and a large crowd got sea-sick, but Alphonse happened to be one of the unlucky ones and avoided it.

The Fourth Day

The fourth day he was taken to the hospital and finally got rundown so much that he took pneumonia. He struggled between life and death, with intense suffering, without a murmur until it had him worn out so much that he succumbed.

The Funeral

His funeral hour was four o'clock p.m., the same day. In the meantime he gathered up his belongings to send to you. At last came the funeral hour. Ambrose and Herb Crough, Ronald Galvin, James Harrington, Eugene Maloney and four others and myself were the pallbearers. Phonse was carried along with eight others who were to be buried at the same hour to the grave yard, as you might call it. Ambrose Crough and I were told to be prepared to lower the body to the watery grave, which was a hard task because we thought so much of him. The band sounded a few solemn notes and at last the word came to lower them. We all did, but it was the hardest blow that all of us ever got. It made it so dreadfully dreary for us, because he was so cheery and had such a happy disposition.

Corp. W. J. O'Neil and Pte. Peter Perdue, who returned from overseas on Monday last, were welcomed by their many friends and relatives.

Ptes. Ambrose Crough and Ronald Galvin of Ennismore, chums of the late Pte. Alphonse Gosselin, visited Mrs. Alice Gosselin on Monday. Pte. Gosselin died on his way overseas.

Pte. Ronald Galvin of Ennismore, who returned from overseas on Monday, is visiting his brother and sister here, Rev. Father Galvin and Miss Lettie Galvin, until New Year's.

Miss Hardgrove of Lindsay, is visiting her aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Clancy.

Mr. Orban Lucas was a Lindsay visitor on Thursday last.

Mr. and Mrs. Dan Winn, of Toronto, are spending a short Christmas vacation with the latter's mother, Mrs. Crowley.

Miss Annie O'Brien, who had been teaching school in St. Catharines, is home for Christmas.

Mrs. Edward Houlihan entertained a few friends at her home on Friday evening in honor of her nephew, Corp. W. J. O'Neil.

Mr. Patrick Callihan has received a letter from his son, Pte. Victor Callihan, saying that he is on his way home from overseas.

Mr. and Mrs. John Perdue held a card party and dance at their home on Monday night in honor of the former's returned hero brother, Pte. Peter Perdue. A large crowd attended and also another brave hero, Pte. Ronald Galvin, of Ennismore. Everybody enjoyed themselves highly.

Mr. and Mrs. Percy Lucas were Christmas visitors to Peterborough, to the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Simon Perdue.

Mr. Albert Lucas was a Lindsay visitor on Saturday with a load of hay.

Mr. and Mrs. James Guiry were Christmas day visitors to the letter's mother and brother in Ennismore, Mrs. McCullough and Mr. Mort McCullough.

Rev. Father Galvin and Miss Lottie Galvin were Ennismore visitors to their relatives the latter part of the week.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Gosselin spent Sunday afternoon and evening with the former's mother, Mrs Alice Gosselin.

CHILD GETS SICK. CROSS, FEVERISH IF CONSTIPATED

"CALIFORNIA SYRUP OF FIGS" CAN'T HARM TENDER STOMACH OR BOWELS.

A laxative today saves a sick child tomorrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, which become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish; stomach sour.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, or your child is listless, cross feverish, breath bad, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold, or has sore throat or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," then don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is oftimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Look carefully and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."

REV. DUNN FEELS IT HIS DUTY TO SPEAK

WANTS OTHERS TO BENEFIT BY HIS EXPERIENCE—GAINS FIFTEEN POUNDS BY TAKING TANLAC.

Rev. J. H. Dunn, pastor of the Church of Christ, at 110 East Second Ave., Spokane, Wash., and residing at 724 West Sharp street, is still another in this high calling whose deep sense of gratitude and desire to help others will not permit him to remain silent regarding the wonderful benefits he has derived from the use of Tanlac.

"Tanlac has not only relieved me of my ten years' suffering," said Rev. Dunn recently, "but it has built me up wonderfully, as I have gained fifteen pounds in a month's time by taking it. My stomach was in such a disordered condition that I could not eat without suffering great pain. My food felt like lead in my stomach and I would expel sour gas with almost every breath. Those who diagnosed my case told me I had cancer of the stomach, and my worry and physical suffering combined were extreme. My head ached constantly and I continually lost in weight, strength and energy. I spent around three hundred dollars for medicine of various kinds, but got no benefit, and my condition was indeed distressing.

"I finally bought Tanlac on the strength of high endorsements and my first bottle made a marked change in my feelings. So I bought another and then another, and now I am just like a new man. Before I took Tanlac I could not eat apples on account of the suffering the acid caused me, but now I can eat any number of them. In fact, I can eat just anything now without the least discomfort afterwards. A medicine that will help anyone out of such a long term of suffering and set them right is certainly worth recommending to the public. It gives me pleasure to do what I can for my fellow man, and as Tanlac has been of such great benefit to me, and not only to me but also a number of my friends, I can unreservedly recommend it to everybody."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co. Ltd.; in Havelock, by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield, by Tanner Drug Co. Ltd.; in Fowlers' Corners, by W. A. Hunter; in Selert, by A. J. Scott; in Westwood, by G. Pringle & Son.

THE NEW YEAR

(Mrs. A. F. Calder.)

Another year, at God's behest,
Into the past has flown,
And may His hold name be blest
For all the joys we've known.

What humble gratitude we owe
For patient mercy found,
When justly He had laid us low
As cumbers of the ground.

With prospects beaming fair and bright,
Fresh dawns another year,
And on its annals pure and white
May no dark blot appear.

But may devoted service fill
Each hour with glad employ,
Our highest aim to do his will,
His smile our sweetest joy.

Lord, as the fleeting years go by,
Thy spirit on us pour,
To fit us for the life on high
When time shall be no more.

HANDSOME GIFT FOR VETERANS

WOMEN'S AUXILIARY PRESENT THEM WITH A NEW VICTORIA.

On New Year's Eve the Great War Veterans' local branch were presented with a handsome Victrola by the members of the Women's Auxiliary in their hall, George street. The presentation was made by the president of the Auxiliary, Mrs. (Col.) J. Mills, who started the first record upon the new instrument.

Dr. Wood, on behalf of the Veterans, thanked the ladies of the Auxiliary for their thoughtful gift and said some very complimentary things about the great assistance which was received from this source. The Ladies' Auxiliary of the G.W.V.A. is a live-wire organization and the members of the local association are not slow in acknowledging the assistance they receive from their fair comrades.

Mrs. W. R. Morris, the honorary president of the Auxiliary, and Comrade Whatley, secretary of the Peterborough branch of the G. W. V. A. made short addresses. Miss Flowers and Mr. Devey, organists of All Saints' and St. John's Churches, respectively, rendered several musical selections. Refreshments were served at the conclusion of the program.

Capt. E. Craddock of the steamer War Taurus, a Toronto-built vessel, on her maiden trip, was accidentally shot in the back while attempting to quell a disturbance on the boat at Halifax.

What Music Means in the Home

A GREENE PIANO will give your family more real pleasure than almost anything you can think of.

A Piano is admittedly the ideal factor in home-making. It brings a sense of pleasure even before it is played, and its entertaining and educating influence is one of the strongest that can be introduced into the family circle

"No child can be said to be thoroughly educated who has not studied and learned to love music.

Our policy has always been to sell only such lines as we could absolutely guarantee to our customers. In keeping with this policy, we decided to place our name on a piano of proved merit as an assurance to you that it is backed by a firm of the highest standing.

In any of the several finishes

THE GREENE PIANO

has pleasing outlines, but, most important of all, it has a rich, full tone which immediately endears it to the hearts of all lovers of music.

Hear the Greene Piano—its melody will convince you that it is a piano of unusual merit.

EASY TO DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

You Can Bring Back Color and Lustre With Sage Tea and Sulphur

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is mussy and troublesome. For 50 cents you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hair disappears, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant.

Gray, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound and look years younger. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite and not a medicine. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

Monday, being nomination day, considerable excitement was noticeable among the ratepayers.

"Tom Marks" appeared in the Town Hall on Friday evening in "The Man Who Came Back." He was greeted with a crowded house, all apparently enjoying the evening's entertainment.

WAR'S HOME-COMING PAINS.

One Result of England's Experience in War.

The experience of the war has shown that the dependence of the United Kingdom on imported food has already involved the country in special difficulties, and in the future may become a source of real danger. We have found that it has increased the cost of the war, aggravated the difficult problem of regulating foreign exchange, and absorbed an undue proportion of the tonnage of the mercantile marine at a time when its services have been so sorely needed for other purposes. We are conscious also of the possibility of a development in the construction of submarines which in a future war might make impossible a continuous supply of food to the people of the United Kingdom from overseas. We hope and pray that the greater sanity of nations and their increased obedience to the divine law may save our country from any repetition of the hideous catastrophe which has to-day overwhelmed Europe; but we can feel no positive assurance that this will be the case, and we do not think that we should be faithful to our trust for our descendants if we omitted to take any practicable measures to increase the national safety in a future time of need. Burdened with a huge debt, the nation will be strongly interested in producing as much as possible of its food at home, in order that it may buy as little as possible abroad. Exhausted in man-power, it will find in the expansion of the rural population of these islands the best restorative of its vitality and creative energy." The above excerpt is taken from a report recently issued by the Agricultural Policy Sub-Committee of the Reconstruction Committee, appointed in 1916 to consider the methods of increasing the supplies of home-grown food. In a later portion of the report there occurs another interesting passage which reads thus: "It must be explained to landowners, farmers, and agricultural laborers alike that the experience of this war has shown that the methods and results of land management and of farming are matters involving the safety of the state, and are not of concern only to the interests of individuals." The sub-committee recommend the fixing by the state of minimum wages for agricultural laborers and minimum prices for wheat and oats. "Waste of good land on game or games" is said to be "inconsistent with patriotism," while the occupation of fat land for golf-links is strongly condemned. Rabbits also come in for adverse criticism, being referred to as "a curse to both agriculture and forestry." Perhaps the most revolutionary recommendation in the report is that, where necessary, managers should be appointed by the Board of Agriculture to manage such portions of private estates as can be utilized for the production of food. These managers are to have complete control, although their salaries are to be a charge on the estates concerned. If any profits accrue they will be paid to the owners by the board. Other recommendations concern rural colleges, with ample gardens attached, which are to be provided as soon as possible after the war; technical advice for farmers by a department of a reorganized Board of Agriculture; the education of women; and the reconstruction of social and industrial village life.

VELVET IS REPLACING SATIN

Only Material That Can Be Safely Worn Against Face Without Relief After Twenty.

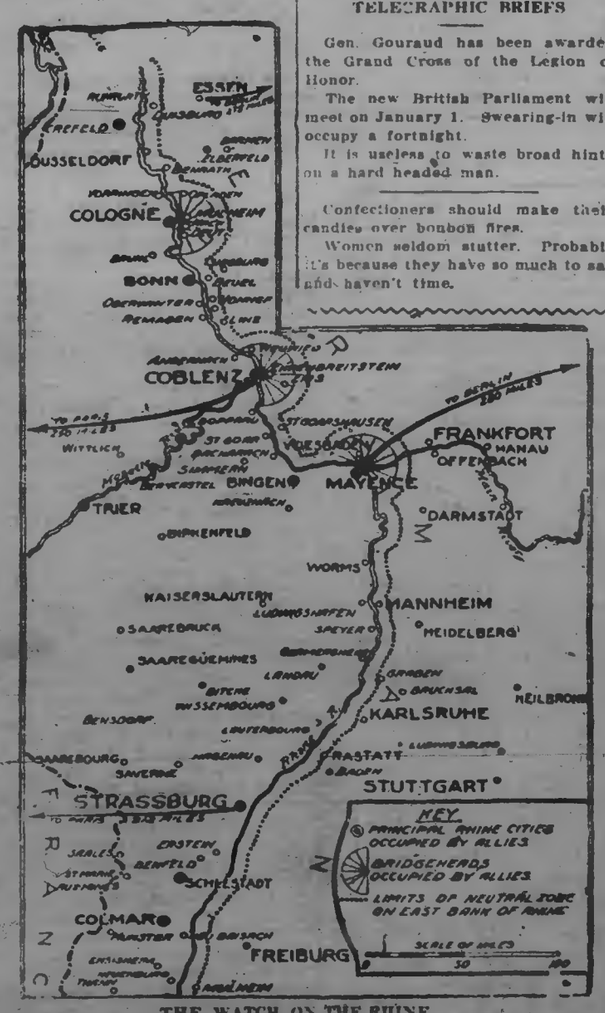
More and more we notice velvet replacing satin. There is no fabric on earth which softens and beautifies like velvet. It is the kindest material in the world when it is placed next a woman's face and it is about the only material that is safely worn against the face without relief after one is over twenty.

One of the loveliest of velvet models is shown in black (good black velvet always looks like a million dollars). The waist has a deep V in front which extends at least nine inches below the waist. This is filled in with a Madonna blue georgette. The top of the georgette at the neck is cut square across. The V is then outlined with fur and the fur, of course, goes around the back of the neck.

The skirt is made with two tunics which open at the front. Both are outlined with this fur edge, the fur going around the bottom and then up to the waist. The sleeves are quite long over the hand, smooth-fitting and without a bit of trimming. There is not a touch of embroidery or braiding of any kind on this frock and it is quite handsome and distinctive.

Biblical Thrift.

The Scriptures give us many lessons in thrift. Ezekiel warned the children of Israel that during the siege of Jerusalem they would have to be thrifty. He said: "Take thou also unto thee wheat, and barley, and beans, and lentiles, and millet, and fitches, and put them in one vessel, and make thee bread thereof."—Ezekiel iv: 9. The Bible shows that Ezekiel ordered the children of Israel to eat their meat by weight, and even thus only "from time to time."—Thrift Magazine.



THE WATCH ON THE RHINE.

The above map shows the various points at which the Allies have entered Germany and taken possession of the cities mentioned in Foch's armistice. The British and Canadians are at Cologne. This being the first time German soil has been occupied, there is little wonder that the "gentle Huns" do not know what to make of it or that they do not relish being compelled to obey orders given by British (which includes Canadians), French and American officers and enforced by their military police.

FOOD FOR LAYING BIRDS

Most Economical Ration, in View of Conditions, Discussed.

Contagious Abortion Makes Necessary the Sale of Valuable Animals at a Sacrifice — The Disease, However, Will Yield to the Treatment as Explained.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

A PULLET requires more feed than a hen, if it is intended that the pullet produce eggs. A bird to lay well must have a surplus of feed over and above body maintenance. The excess of feed above body maintenance goes either towards growth, fat, or egg production.

Poultry feeds are divided into two classes: one, whole or cracked grains, commonly called scratch feed, and the other, ground grains, commonly called mash.

Scratch feeds are generally fed night and morning and are scattered in straw in order to induce the birds to scratch or take exercise. A mixture of two or more kinds of grain usually gives better results than one single grain, largely because individual birds' appetites vary from day to day. A good mixture for the winter months might contain as much as fifty per cent. good corn, either whole or cracked; if corn could not be had and the birds were accustomed to eating buckwheat, the buckwheat would answer nearly as well, or one could use twenty-five per cent. buckwheat and twenty-five per cent. corn. To the corn or buckwheat could be added twenty-five per cent. of barley, ten per cent. of wheat screenings, and fifteen per cent. of good oats. If one was obliged to do so, almost any of the grains could be fed alone with the exception of oats. There is too much hull or husk on oats to use entirely as a single feed.

At present for a mash feed we are using the standard hog feed. If the ground grains are to be fed moist or mixed with cooked household refuse then the mixture should be one that will mix to a crumbly state, but if fed dry in an open hopper the above is not so important.

The mash feed is the one where the animal meals are generally given. The amounts vary from ten to twenty per cent. of the mixture. The animal meals used are commonly high grade tankage and beef scrap. Where one has plenty of skim milk or buttermilk the other animal feeds are unnecessary. Some use green cut bone; cooked refuse meat, such as livers, lights, beef heads, etc.

A very good mash can be made of one part each by measure of shorts, barley meal, and ground oats. Corn meal could be used in the place of the barley or with it. If one is short of green feed or roots, it would be well to add one part of bran. Perhaps the simplest mash to feed from an open hopper is rolled or crushed oats. We have used this, when the birds had milk to drink, for a number of years with excellent results.

Laying hens require plenty of green feed. Cabbage is one of the best green feeds. Roots are very good, but clover leaves should be within reach as well as the roots. Sprouted oats are used to a large extent on poultry farms. When the birds get accustomed to a green and succulent food it is generally wise to give them all they will eat. A pen of fifteen pullets will eat a fair-sized head of cabbage almost every day or one hundred hens will eat a peck of sprouted oats day after day.

Abortion Should Not Be Neglected.

Some cases of abortion are the result of injury to the dam due to a nasty fall or bad kick. In such cases the trouble is not likely to spread to other members of the herd. With the majority of abortion cases, however, the trouble is due to an infectious disease which is very readily spread to other members of the herd.

The disease apparently is localized almost entirely to the uterus. Here an inflammation is produced which may result in the expulsion of the foetus, dead or alive, at any period of gestation. In most cases of infectious abortion, however, the foetus is expelled dead. A frequent complication of such a case is the retention of the foetal membranes by the dam. If these are not removed after a few hours, death from blood poisoning is almost sure to occur.

The bacilli which cause the disease are present in large numbers in the fluids, foetal membranes and foetus. Consequently, every care is necessary to prevent these from contaminating anything with which other stock is likely to come in contact, either directly or indirectly. All should be gathered up carefully and burned or else buried deeply in quick lime. Then the hands and clothes of those in attendance should be thoroughly wash with a disinfectant, and a strong disinfectant used freely all around the stall, particularly on the floor.

The dam should be kept in a stall by herself, as there will be a fluid discharge from the vulva which may last for weeks. Disinfectants should be freely used in the stalls, and the external genitals, thighs, tail and back of udder should be washed daily with a satisfactory disinfectant solution. For this purpose a two-per cent. solution of lysol is strongly recommended. Strict attention should be paid by the attendant to the thorough disinfection of his hands or other parts of his person or clothes after handling the patient.

The dam should not be bred again until some weeks after all discharge from the vulva has stopped.—Prof. D. H. Jones, Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph.

HOCKEY SEASON OPENS FOR 1919

LIST OF GAMES SCHEDULED FOR REMAINDER OF THE WEEK.

The championship season of the O.H.A. is open, and from now until March the activities of the big association will be much in evidence throughout the province from Cornwall to Sudbury.

The opening games on New Year night took place in Port Colborne, Niagara Falls and Toronto, the juniors having the honor of playing the first game on Toronto ice, with Aura Lee and Maitlands as the contenders.

There will be a couple of intermediate games on Thursday at Clinton and Stratford, but the big opening will take place on Friday, when games will be staged in thirteen different towns. This will also mark the first appearance of the senior teams, as the Veterans club of Toronto will come to Hamilton that night to play the Tigers. The other games will be played at Oshawa, Dunnville, Welland, London, Preston, Gravenhurst, Lindsay, Cobourg, Ingersoll, Mitchell, Stayner, and a junior game at Toronto, when Parkdale C. C. and Beaches will make their bow in a championship fixture.

Saturday night will be a big night in Toronto, as it will be the first visit to the Arena in a real championship fixture of the Kitchener team, senior O.H.A. champions and Allan cup holders. They will have as their opponents the much strengthened St. Patricks team, with Frank McKerman, "Babe" Dye, Lon Crook and other star players in the lineup. This should furnish one of the best games of the season and will doubtless pack the Arena.

The list of games is as follows:

Wednesday, January 1

Intermediate
Dunnville at Port Colborne.
Welland at Niagara Falls.
Junior
Aura Lee at Maitlands, 8.30 p.m.

Thursday, January 2

Intermediate
Goderich at Clinton.
Milverton at Stratford.

Friday, January 3

Senior
Veterans at Hamilton.
Intermediate

Peris at Ingersoll.
Stratford at Mitchell
Collingwood at Stayner.
Senior

WELCOME PRODIGALS BACK TO THEIR OLD POSITIONS

Big League Teams Will Be Glad to Re-Enlist Players Who Deserted Last Fall to Take War Jobs.

Few took seriously the threats of major league club owners to bar from baseball the players who deserted them last summer for shipyard jobs before the work or fight edict became effective.

Some misguided souls, perhaps, took the hard-hearted magnates at their word and actually believed the Jacksons, kZimmermans and other stars who left baseball when the nation called would be thrust into exile. But now that the world conflagration has ended and peace again prevails, the spirit of the day is abroad in baseball, and club owners already are welcoming with open arms the men who a few months ago they were criticizing so vehemently.

Fatted Calf for Shoeless Joe.

To Joe Jackson, outfield mainstay of the Chicago White Sox, and one of baseball's [illegible] stars, has fallen the distinction of being the first erratic son of the diamond for whom a club owner has killed the fatted calf. Joe has been notified by Charles Comiskey, owner of the Sox, he has been forgiven, and Joe already is preparing to accompany the club south for spring training. The shoeless wonder is not coming to the Yankees. He's going to play left field for the Sox.

And in addition to a contract for a juicy sum Joe also has been guaranteed police protection at the Windy City park against possible attacks by unthinking fandom.

There will be no discrimination in the part of any of the club owners against players who took positions in shipyards. The Giants already have begun to assemble players for next season, and a considerable number of the men, including Arthur Fletcher, Heinie Zimmerman, Joe Wilhoit, Harry Doyle, George Burns and others, have been employed during the past few months in shipyards near New York.

Yankee players, too, who have been toiling in the holds of vessels in New Jersey are preparing to abandon their wartime occupation and return to the diamond. Herbie Thormahlen, upon whom Miller Huggins is counting for aid in the pennant drive next year, Ping Bodie, Ray Caldwell of the Red Sox and others either have quit or soon will leave their positions in the Tietgen & Lang shipyards over in Weehawken.

Every other club in the major leagues and many others in the minors will give employment to players who did their bit to make the world safe for democracy in shipyards or munitions plant.

Fans Welcome Them?

Whether fandom will be as quick to welcome back the shipyard players as were the club owners is a point of conjecture throughout the diamond world today. The fact that Comiskey, usually a far-seeing magnate, has agreed to provide protection for Joe Jackson rather indicates the Windy City fans are likely to become obstreperous. Some club owners, on the other hand, figure fandom will realize the men who took positions in shipyards and munitions plants instead of shouldering a gun or joining the navy did so because they were compelled to provide support for their families, which is the more plausible view.

Of all the major league club owners who protested against players quitting the game for essential employment while the worn or fight rule hung fire, Comiskey was the most resentful. He threatened the deserters, including, besides Jackson, Happy Felsch, a wellnight indispensable outfielder, and others, with all manner of dire fates, but, in the face of the Old Roman's ultimatum, the players leaped one after another into essential occupations. Commy, therefore, was compelled to finish the campaign with a crazy quilt aggregation that was soundly beaten in the brush down the home stretch by the Red Sox and other clubs.

But time and the urgent need for players have combined to soften Commy's heart, and he has relented, and fandom the country over will see the so-called slackers of the pastime rub elbows with the heroes from the army and navy when the clubs set forth on the pennant adventure next spring.

BOWLING ONE OF OLDEST GAMES

Although the origin of the game of bowls is not definitely known, its modern offspring of the alleys is of comparatively recent birth. It was just 79 years ago on New Year's day since the first match game of bowling was played in America. This historic contest was played on the Knickerbocker alleys, in New York, and marked the real beginning of the indoor sport of North America, although the outdoor game of bowls had been played in New York since its first settlement by the Dutch, as the name of Bowling Green, a little park in lower Manhattan, would indicate.

Bowling is perhaps the oldest of all sports, since there is evidence to show that it was played by the ancient Egyptians. Skulls were used for balls, and the bones of animals for pins, in those days. Bowling was popular in England and continental Europe from the earliest times, and was introduced into the American colonies by the English and Dutch settlers. Twice at least it became so popular among the young men that it was outlawed. In the twelfth century, in England, bowls occupied so much of the item of the rising generation that a statute was directed against it. The same condition prevailed later at New Amsterdam, and Peter Stuyvesant, the Dutch governor, prohibited the playing of the game on penalty of being placed in the stocks for not less than twenty-four hours. This official prohibition was directed specifically against the game of "nine-pins," and the devotees of the sport promptly added another pin to the set-up and so originated the modern contest of ten-pins.

Following the first match contest in New York in 1840, the game gradually spread over the United States and Canada. Abraham Lincoln was one of the enthusiasts of the bowling game, and his scores are still preserved at Washington. Sir Thomas Lipton, the British yachtsman, was one of the organizers and long president of the European Bowling Association.

Famous Missionary Will Be Heard Here on Sunday.

Rev. Donald MacGillivary of Shanghai, China, will conduct services in Peterborough on Sunday next, occupying the pulpit of St. Andrew's Church in the morning and St. Paul's in the evening. Dr. MacGillivary is one of the outstanding missionaries of the present day, has taken a very prominent part in the work of launching the Forward Movement during the past two or three months, and will bring a message that will be well worth hearing. It is hoped that he will be greeted with large and enthusiastic congregations in keeping with the prominence of the man and the importance of his work.

Investigations by officials of the White Star-Dominion Line and a report by Major Westmore would indicate that there was no foundation for the grievances complained of by men returning by the Northland.

POPULAR TRAIN WITH TOURISTS

THE G. T. NATIONAL RUN THOUGHT FINEST SCENERY IN CANADA.

Travellers between Western and Eastern Canada appreciate the high standard of railway service afforded by "The National"—the splendid train which operates between Winnipeg and Toronto, east and west bound. This through train uses the rails of the Canadian Government Lines from Winnipeg to Cochrane, the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario (owned by the Ontario Government), from Cochrane to North Bay, and the Grand Trunk from North Bay to Toronto.

"The National's" trip between the Manitoba Capital and the Queen City of the East is one of 1,256 miles. The departure from Winnipeg is at 3.30 in the afternoon and Cochrane is reached the following night. This is a wonderfully interesting trip through the sparsely populated territory of New Ontario, giving the traveller an opportunity of inspecting this fertile region, including the famed clay belt, where tens of thousands of settlers will make their homes in the future. The area of New Ontario is 330,000 square miles, fully four times the size of Old Ontario, and, in addition to great expanses of good farming land, it has wonderful resources in timber, minerals, water power, fish and game.

"The National" next threads the rich districts served by the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario, including the Cobalt silver camp and the Timagami Forest Reserve. There is a daylight run over the Grand Trunk through "The Highlands of Ontario," comprising the beautiful "Lake of Bays," Muskoka Lakes and other holiday resorts.

The three railways combine to make the passenger service over this new road the equal of that offered anywhere on the Continent. The smooth, straight, and level roadbed embodies all that has been learned in three-quarters of a century of railroad building. The greatest travel comfort is therefore assured.

GERMAN PAPER CALLS UPON CABINET TO RESIST POLES

But Prussian Minister Says It Is Too Late Now to Stop Invasion as Troops Cannot Be Assembled for Purpose.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Berlin, Dec. 3.—A protest against "abject surrender to the Poles," which is advocated by Herr Ernst of the Prussian Ministry, is printed by the Beitung Am Mittag today. The Minister, who has just returned from the border declares that while invasion by the Poles could have been prevented a fortnight ago, the situation is now hopeless, and that Germany could not regain the territory occupied by the Poles even with the division ordered to the district—a division, he declared, which it was now impossible to assemble.

The Zeitung Am Mittag declares that these statements cannot be true and it asks why the Government has done nothing in the matter. It characterizes the attitude of the Government as "Chinese apathy."

The Zeitung Am Mittag also expresses disuiet over the exacuation of Riga by the Germans and the danger of a Bolshevik invasion of Germany.

The Government members are in session today and are reported to be considering what action to take for the protection of German cities from the Poles.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Jan. 3.—Reports from German Scandinavian sources of British naval and military activities in the provinces have created a demand by the British press for a clear statement of the government's policy regarding Russia. According to the Deutsche Tages Zeitung of Berlin, the British have presented an ultimatum to the Germa supreme command that the German troops must not only prevent a further advance by the Bolsheviki, but must retake Volk and Venden. If this order is not carried out, the German paper says, the Entente will march into Germany. There is no confirmation of these reports from any official source.

PARENTS WARNED TO KEEP CHILDREN OFF THE STREETS

Boys Under 16 Must Not Be Out After 9 p.m. Law Says—Employment in Pool Room Illegal.

G. W. Powell, local agent of the Children's Aid Society, calls the attention of the parents of the city to the common practice of many children of frequenting the streets and other places of public resort after 9 o'clock at night, which is strictly against the law.

There are children under the age of 16 years employed in several of the bowling alleys setting up pins until long after the hour mentioned in the Act, and when approached upon the subject the managers of these places were ready and willing to comply with the regulation providing the Y.M.C.A. and T.A.S. did likewise.

Children do not frequent the poolrooms or billiard parlors of the city because they are placed out of bounds by law, but there are other places which are not, and, although the Y.M.C.A. and the T.A.S. are societies carrying on a good work in the community, they apparently come within the meaning of the term "public places,' although the agent is not quite sure upon this point and has applied to the proper authorities for a reliable interpretation of this part of the Act.

At present the children remain in the Y.M.C.A. until 9:30, and it is claimed by the officials of the Association that if they turn them out half an hour earlier it is very questionable whether they will go home. Mr. Powell claims that this could easily be assured, as a few could be made examples of should they loiter on the streets.

Children who remain away from their homes after 9 o'clock have little or no time to spend at their studies, and it is for this reason that the Children's Aid Society are interested in the matter.

Boys who sell the Toronto papers which do not arrive until 9 o'clock at night, are also breaking the law, and this practice must be stopped or action will be taken against the employers or the parents.

A fine of $1 for the first offence and $2 and $5 for the second and third is provided by law.

"A child shall mean a boy or girl actually or apparently under sixteen years of age."—Clause 2 (a).

"A public place shall mean a street, highway, or lane, whether a thoroughfare or not, and a tavern or other place of public resort and generally any place to which the public have or are permitted to have access."—Clause 2 (k).

"No child shall loiter in any public place after 9 o'clock in the evening or be there unless accompanied by his parents or guardian or adult appointed by the parents or guardian to accompany such child." — Clause 17 (1).

ENDORSED BY GLASGOW.

One of the most important victories in the British elections was that of Hon. G. N. Barnes, Minister of Labor, who had 7,000 majority in the Gorbals division of Glasgow against a Bolshevik candidate and thus administered a rebuke to the red flag folk of the big Scotch city.

RETURNED SOLDIERS TELL OF LIFE ON THE NORTHLAND

Government Enquiry Into Their Treatment on Board Transport Begun at Ottawa—Witnesses Complain of Food and Sleeping Accommodations.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Jan. 3.—Returned soldiers opened their story of the Northland inquiry this morning and their complaints were largely regarding the bunking and the way food was served to them. The Christmas dinner, served when the Northland was in Halifax harbor, consisted, according to the description of one soldier, of one pork chop with one and a half inches of fat and the Christmas pudding, served by hand instead of dishes, was passably good.

The Northland was then quarantined. The men had been told to take down their mattresses, which were piled around. They had to eat their dinner the best way they could. The mattresses gave out musty odor, and it was most unpleasant, said one witness. It was stated there was not enough food or room.

Twenty-four bunked in the same room and the bunks looked like coffins. Men who had been wounded found it difficult to climb to the top bunks.

Water Was Scarce.

The scarcity of drinking water, as well as water for washing purposes was complained of. Witnesses said that for the last three days on the ship they could not get a drink of water. Most of them purchased soda water from the canteen, to satisfy their thirst. One witness said that in stormy weather the latrines overflowed into the cabins, causing most unhealthy conditions.

WHOLE WORLD AT PRAYER

Next Sunday is a very special day all over the Christian world. It begins the week of prayer, and this year the people have to return thanks for that for which they have prayed for ever four years. If the Christian people believe that the victory is of the Lord there will be no excuses when it comes to this special hour of world-wide thanksgiving.

To insure the presence of every member of every family at the House of God next Sunday morning and evening is a matter which will require planning ahead, and some real sacrifices; but, in our distress, we cried unto God and felt that no sacrifice would be too great if only He would give us victory and peace. These have come, and the old year has gone with its strife and sorrow and the first full week of the new year is to have world-wide celebration in special services.

What will Peterborough do on Sunday? Shall we "Crowd His gates with thankful songs:" Where there is sickness, it is another matter, but nothing less should be allowed to interfere with the presence in the church of every member of each family—young and old.

HON. F. B. CARVELL WILL BE IN PETERBORO JANUARY 8

On January 8th Hon. F. B. Carvell, Minister of Public Works, will visit Peterborough for the first time. At 8 o'clock in the evening of that day there will be a meeting in the Grand Opera House, to which all citizens of the city—ladies and gentlemen—are invited. His Worship Mayor Duncan will preside, and the city's illustrious visitor will give an address. The people of Peterborough are urged to attend.

Mr. Carvell comes to the city as a result of the representations of a delegation composed of Capt. Burnham, M.P., Mayor Duncan, City Clerk Armstrong and ex-Ald. Jones, which waited upon him in Ottawa not long since in connection with the erection of the new post office and customs house building, the dry dock in Ashburnham, and the proposed assumption by the Dominion Government of a part of the cost of the construction of the Hunter street bridge.

Hon. F. B. Carvell, Minister of Public Works in the Union Government, is the member for the constituency of Carleton, N. B. He is a lawyer, and in 1907 was created a K.C. He represented his county in the Legislature between 1899 and 1900, and in the latter year was the successful candidate for the House of Commons. He was elected member of the Dominion Parliament at the general election in 1904, was re-elected in 1908 and in 1911. As a member of the Liberal opposition he was one of the bitterest critics of the Borden administration and is considered one of the ablest debaters and most forcible public speakers in the country.

It is safe to say that Mr. Carvell was the outstanding figure of the Opposition during the closing period of the Conservative Government, and as such was prominent in the investigations into the Allister charges and other cases of alleged political chicanery which engaged the attention of the country during the parliamentary session of 1917.

HON. F. B. CARVELL

ALD.-ELECT MURRAY MAY NOT QUALIFY

HAS A SMALL CONTRACT WITH THE CITY INVOLVING 25 CENTS A YEAR.

Ald.-elect Murray, who stood fifth in the aldermanic poll may not qualify, as he is likely to be debarred by a technicality. He says he will make no attempt to take the seat unless his title to it is perfectly clear. He has consulted Mr. G. N. Gordon in the matter and will be governed by his advice.

Some years ago Mr. Murray built a fence around his home at the corner of Park and Sherbrooke streets, and encroached slightly on the city line. It was finally agreed to leave him the expense of moving the fence provided he paid the city the nominal rental of 25 cents a year. That contract is still in force, and it is the breach that separates Mr. Murray from the position to which he was so triumphantly elected.

No one was more surprised than Mr. Murray himself when this point was raised. He declares that he will not make the declaration of office so long as there is a shadow of doubt as to his right.

MARRIAGES OF ROYALTY.

THE LIGHT AND AIRY romancer is still on duty. Deprived as he is from weaving more readable fiction about the war, he turns himself to the more pleasing task of speculating in affairs of love. The latest story evolved from the romancer's fertile brain is that King George and the Prince of Wales are to visit the United States next summer and that the future heir to the throne of the Empire will in all probability choose an American bride in order to cement the good feeling that now exists between the two nations. It is not stated whether the Prince will display the business instinct that characterises the titled bachelors of his country by seeking a bride with a fortune or will be influenced in his choice by other less material considerations.

The story is gauzy. If the Prince of Wales does cross the ocean, there is no reason on earth why he should not choose a bride either in the United States or in Canada, if his fancy, lightly or otherwise, leads him in that direction. Even if he broke all precedents and took a wife from among the commoners at home, the Empire would not be rocked to its foundations. no cherished institutions would collapse, in the present democratic temper of the British people.

There was a time when international marriages were supposed to promote amicable relations between the countries interested, but the recent records of history are all against such a theory. Royal houses in Europe have married and intermarried and yet for the past four years have striven to destroy each other. The king who goes outside of his own domain for a bride is often acquiring official and domestic troubles for himself. The ex-king of Greece, the late czar of Russia and other unfortunate benedicts are outstanding examples. It is the wise king or prospective king these days who will select a wife from among his own people instead of making a matrimonial alliance with some daughter of Hetia. Then in the event of war he can be assured at least of domestic felicity instead of a wife striving to upset all the traditions and frustrate all the plans of her adopted country. Anyway, any young man who is thought worthy to be trusted with the sceptre of an empire should be sufficiently endowed mentally with the ability to make his own choice of a life partner.

IF CANADA HAD AN ELECTION.

THE GENERAL ELECTION in Britain was held under somewhat similar conditions that would prevail here if the same event had been ordered. The election was called before peace was declared, and the prospect was that the voting would be carried on while hostilities were still active. The signing of the armistice, however, did not change the issues. The Government that had carried the war to a successful conclusion, regardless of the party name of that Government, was put on trial and came through the ordeal just as triumphantly as the Empire emerged from the war. The voters of Britain arrayed themselves into two great camps, the war party and the pacifists, the war critics being included in the latter designation, and the war party won.

The situation in Canada is not unlike that which prevails at the centre of the Empire. Both countries have their overshadowing problems arising out of the war. There were luke-warm government supporters in Britain; there are such supporters here. One country, like the other, has its rabid oppositionists to the thorough prosecution of the war. If Britain has its Irish problem, the government at Ottawa has been no less embarrassed by the obstacles that one of the provinces has insisted upon placing in the pathway of military activity. The Sinn Feiners and the Nationalists really carry the same brand, though the field of endeavor for each class may be different.

All other issues were submerged in the war when the electors of Britain went to the polls. The Liberal party that had been triumphant for years before the war broke out, and which at one time seemed destined to hold control indefinitely, has been practically swept away. The Conservatives or Unionists are in the majority, or at least hold the balance of power among all the elements. The Nationalists have disappeared to all intents and purposes, but only to be replaced by the more rabid Sinn Feiners, who go a step further than their predecessors and demand outright independence for Ireland. If the home rule bill already on the statute books had been given effect on January 1, 1915, according to the terms of the measure, a measure that had been passed twice by overwhelming majorities in the British Parliament, it is likely that all this trouble would have been avoided, and that with Ulster excluded, as arranged for, Ireland would have been pacific today and there would have been none of the friction that marked its relations with the Mother Country throughout the war. Had the deferred home rule bill been given effect in 1914 as intimated at the time of its postponement, then, too, there might have been something at least approaching harmony where now there is only discord.

It must be admitted that the Irish question is more acute today than at any time in the unhappy history of that island. The Sinn Feiners are certain to make trouble. On his past record as a member of the Asquith Government, Lloyd George stands committed to home rule, but when he attempts to deal with the matter now his way is likely to be blocked by the Unionists who were elected on his supporters.

The British premier has ostensibly a tremendous majority behind him, but his position is more or less precarious from a political standpoint. The domestic problems which he has to face are serious, much serious, really, than was the conduct of the war upon which the country was practically united. Lloyd George was given all but unanimous support in his struggle against Prussianism. The same party that was a unit in that matter is likely to resolve itself into factions when confronted with some of the questions that concern the internal economy of the Empire.

But Lloyd George is given credit for the winning of the war, so far as victory depended upon statesmanship at home. He has received his reward in the shape of a tremendous popular majority. The women's and the soldiers' vote were unknown quantities before the election, but each class used its franchise in the interests of the party that helped the Allied cause to success.

What happened in Britain would be repeated in Canada if an appeal were made to the country today. Premier Borden has placed his country in the front rank of the nations of the world. If he could do this in war, he can be trusted to accomplish the same in peace. There would be no doubt of the result if an appeal were made now to the Canadian public. The verdict would be an emphatic approval of the Government's record during the most trying time of Canadian history. There are discordant elements here just as there were in Britain, but these were buried under the loyal sentiments of the majority. One thing is certain, the people would never consent to commit the destiny of a country to a party that would have deserted the Canadian soldiers just when help was needed to save the cause of freedom and the Empire from annihilation.

AID TO RETURNED MEN.

(Ottawa Citizen.)

THE MEN FROM OVERSEAS are to be discharged from the army on the day they arrive at the dispersal station of their home district. The last official act of the Department of Militia, before the men dispense to their homes, released by their discharged certificates from any further military service, will be to hand each man a substantial cheque. Deferred pay is due to the single men, post discharge pay to all men with one year's service or more, and civilian clothing allowances to every man. The cheques issued to the men by the paymaster at the dispersal station are hardly likely in any instance to be less than one hundred dollars; in many instances they may exceed one thousand dollars.

Every man will naturally want to spend a few days looking around, enjoying the novelty of being in civilian clothes again, with feelings of relief on being restored to civil home life in Canada. The careful men will let very little time elapse, however, before setting out to find employment for himself. He will have been told about the department of civil re-establishment, a federal government department created especially to be of service to him during the time when he is getting back to steady employment in private enterprise or civil industry. A provincial government organization called the Returned Soldiers' Commission will also possibly have a representative in every city and town. It has been decided between the federal and provincial authorities that the returned men should first call for a talk over general plans and to get in touch with the federal employment service and other helpful opportunities, through the Provincial Returned Soldiers' Commission.

Salvation Army Greets New Babies

The problem of providing for the comfort of the many English brides —and Scotch and Irish brides, too— of the returned soldier, until they are settled in Canada, is engaging the attention of The Salvation Army. Recently at St. John, N.B., a transport arrived with a large number of women and children, a great many of the latter being infants.

The Chief Secretary, Colonel McMillan, was in St. John, and, learning of the expected arrival of so many women and children, he called together the Salvation Army Officers and made arrangements for the meeting of this boat. Mrs. Ensign Condie took charge of the women workers.

"We decided," writes the Colonel, "that we would procure a good supply of babies' bottles, also some fresh milk and a supply of nipples for bottles, as well as comforters. Then, too, we had scores of little face-cloths, pieces of toilet soap and small tins of talcum powder, and a number of strips of flannel, a quantity of oil of peppermint, vaseline, cough candy, small handkerchiefs for the children, needles and thread, and in addition tapes, safety pins, etc. We also arranged to get a gross of cups and saucers and a dozen big teapots and boilers for making tea.

"The ship came up in the morning about nine o'clock. It was snowing a wet, sloppy snow. The decks were crowded with soldiers, and standing amongst them were many young women with their babies. As soon as the ship pulled in and the gangway was thrown across, another Salvationist and I were amongst the first who climbed on board. We were greeted everywhere with cries of 'Good old Army!' In the name of the Salvation Army in Canada I bade all the boys on deck a hearty welcome back to their own country. I then went back to the dining-room, where most of the women and children were waiting. It would have done one good to have seen the look of pleasure with which this fine body of women greeted the uniform. Our first encounter was with a big Canadian soldier, who came to us and said, 'You are just the people who can help men in my difficulty?' 'What is your difficulty?' 'Well, my wife has twins and I have to fall in with the troops on deck, and would like some one to help her to look after the babies on shore.' 'Of course we will look after them.' Then there was another woman who was not at all well, and she had five children, and unfortunately her husband was not with her, so we took the whole let under our wing.

"When they left the ship, we had relays of women meet the mothers when they stepped off at the bottom of the gangway, take their babies from them, and conduct them to the waiting room. Necessarily there was some delay before they could take the train, and it was during this interval that our women did very splendid work, and where their forethought told. Dozens and dozens of babies' suits had been procured, and words of mine cannot express the gratitude of these young mothers for this thoughtfulness. One little baby appeared to be very ill: Mrs. Condie saw it, applied some liniment she had, wrapped it in a warm flannel, and in a little time it had quite recovered. You can imagine the gratitude of the parents.

"While we were in the sheds all kinds of people came to us. One distressed fellow asked us to help him with regard to his wife, who was coming on a later boat, as she had been unable to procure passage with him —would we see that someone met and looked after her? Another woman had secured passage, but her husband, a French-Canadian, had been detained. How could she get in touch with her husbands people who were living in Quebec? In relays we stood by the whole day, until the last train pulled out about ten o'clock at night.

"To fill in the time of waiting Adjutant Best distributed postcards, which we afterwards collected and posted. Then, too, we arranged, as we were sending wires to all the main centres, if anyone gave us the name and address, we would see that their wire was sent on. Naturally, there was quite a rush."

TODAY'S STORY

The war has made a wonderful difference in many of our customs and in none more than in weddings. The latter ceremonies have been shorn of much of the display that formerly characterised them. Wedding breakfasts and luxurious bride cakes have disappeared through the severity of the rationing restrictions and even the dresses of the bride and her bridesmaids are less ornate than formerly, though not less expensive, says a clergyman writing in a London Daily. I have known some strange weddings in my time.

I recall one village wedding at which all the bridal party went to the church riding on donkeys as though to proclaim what asses they were.

Another wedding attracted attention from the fact that the bride and bridegroom who were both past sixty ought to have sobered down, went to church with their friends in a farm cart which literally "shot out" its load at the gate as though they had been a ton of coal. The people wore their ordinary every-day attire except that the men had on clean smocks and tall silk hats! While in place of bouquets the ladies carried bunches of carrots and turnips. As they came to church so they went away, ascending to the cart by a ladder they had brought with them. But the most remarkable wedding I can remember is that of a young man of 23 to a widow of 70, whose nuptials aroused enormous interest in the little town. They were followed to the church by a big crowd some of the boisterous member of which carried flags, while one man wore a hat a yard high. The scenes outside were nothing to what occurred in the church, where the bride's son, boiling over with indignation, awaited the party. As soon as his mother appeared he seized her, lifted her on his shoulder, and endeavored to carry her out of the building, but she struggled so strenuously that she succeeded in getting away and reached the expectant bridegroom, the ceremony proceeding without further interruption. How the marriage turned out I cannot say.

One idea of a loud mouthed man is one who is able to make himself heard in a room where there are a dozen women.

EDITOR'S MAIL

Editor Review: Regarding the visit of the Hon. F. B. Carvell to Peterborough at the invitation of the Mayor and city may I be permitted to say that besides having him speak at the meeting in the Opera House on the proposed public works here, he should be asked to speak on insuratime relationships.

Mr. Carvell is a man of great ability and frankness. He is not one of those who leave difficulties worse than they find them through that form of incapacity known as discretion. He can think, speak and act and should be heard by everyman who takes an interest in the world-wide complications now awaiting as pestment.

The return from conditions of war to conditions of peace is as important as peremptory, and difficult as was the winning further conditions of peace to those of war, or nearly so. The reconstruction conference called in December in the U. S. was the largest gathering of business men ever held in the U. S. Two things stand out prominently in all the reports of these conferences. One is the necessity of going on with all manner of public works of a necessary character, without delay. The other is the desire for better industrial relations between capital and labour.

It would take too long to go into the whole matter, but it is clear that the question of capital and labour can only be solved on what may be called a partnership basis. In partnership alone is there the full assurance of a settlement of this problem. It will make for content, for justice, for efficiency, for business methods, for industrial peace, for steady employment and for an organised and united nationhood. No longer will their then continue so-called freedom of action and of trade which results so often in the triumph of the few over the unorganised efforts of the many. Both sides and all sides must discover a fair method of doing business for employer, wage-earner and consumer. This the Government in every nation should feel it necessary to see to. Mr. Cavell should speak of it. It is not a greater human matter and may be the best result after all of, the disturbance of industry, due to the great war and the resumption of the condition of peace.

CANADA'S PENSION BILL

Maximum Will be Reached in Two Years Time

Ottawa, Jan. 3.—The Minister of Finance has furnished Sir Robert Borden with an estimate of the total amount of Canada's pension obligations. The pensions commissioners are of the opinion that the maximum of pensions will not be reached for eighteen months or two years. They will probably remain at this maximum for five years and be gradually reduced until their termination.

An actuarial calculation estimates a total cost of $448,000,000, calculated on a three per cent. basis, or $390,000,000 calculated on a four per cent basis, or $345,000,000 on a five per cent basis. These sums represent the amounts of money as of today which, at the rates of interest mentioned should take care of Canada's pension obligations arising out of the war.

Trustees Kept School Open in Defiance of Instructions to Close it on Account of Flu Epidemic.

In the County Police Court this morning His Worship O. A. Langley, gave judgment in the cases of the King vs. Dorland Doxee, Andrew Post and William Colby. These gentlemen, last named, were charged under the Public Health Act with keeping the school, known as School Section No. 6, near Apsley, in the Township of Chandos, open after it had been ordered closed by the local Board of Health and the Medical Health Officer for the Township.

The charges were originally laid against the above defendants and Milton Post, who, owing to the fact that Milton Post was unable to leave his house through illness, the charges against him were, by consent, dropped.

The trial took place in Apsley on the seventeenth of December before His Worship Police Magistrate O. A. Langley, Mr. F. D. Kerr appearng on behalf of the Crown, and Mr. J. A. O'Brien acting for all the accused. The were argued at length before His show that Spanish influenza was prevalent in the Township of Chandos at the time the Medical Health Officer ordered the schools closed.

On behalf of the defendants, Mr. O'Brien raised various points which were arhued at length before His Worship Mr. Langley in Peterborough on the nineteenth of December and His Worship, owing to the number of questions involved and by consent of the solicitors for both sides, adjourned the matter until this morning for judgment.

It appeared that the notification given by the Medical Health Officer was only given to the defendant, Doxee, that is the notification requiring the schools to be closed. The defendants, Doxee and Colby, were trustees and the defendant, Andrew Post, was a rate-payer. His Worship, in delivering judgment, found that there was no evidence to connect the defendant, Post, with the charges as under the Public School Act. The control of the schools is given to the trustees and the mere fact that Andrew Post signed a petition to the trustees requesting them to re-open the schools was not sufficient to implicate him in the offence. It appears that the first notice given to the defendant, Doxee, was given on a Sunday, but His Worship held that as it was a case of emergency and the danger of contagion was most grave that he would not disregard the notice even though it were given on a Sunday. He accordingly discharged the defendants, Post and Colby, on the first charge, but fined the defendant, Doxee, the minimum fine and expressing the disapproval of the manner in which the notification was given.

On the second charge of keeping the school open on the 25th. His Worship toop the view that Colby had notice of the notification given by the Medical Health Officer and could not contend that the notice never came to his attention.

His Worship accordingly, on the second charge, find both the defendants, Colby and Doxee, the minimum fine, imposing only one fine to be levied from both defendants on this charge and discharging the defendant, Post.

STATE CONTROL COSTS DEARLY

U. S. GOVERNMENT LOST MILLIONS BY VENTURE IN RAILROAD BUSINESS.

Washington, Jan. 3.—The Government's loss in operating the railroads in 1918 is calculated by railroad administration officials at less than $150,000,000. This represents the difference between the aggregate amount the Government will be compelled to pay railroad companies as rental for the use of their properties—the so-called guaranteed return—and the net income which the Government will recove from the roads.

Will Take Six Months.

It will take six months more of receipts from the increased freight rates to permit the Government to recoup its losses, officials believe. If Congress does not approve the proposed five years' extension of federal control, and as a consequence President Wilson carries out his announced intention of returning the roads to private management at an early date the Government's loss will not be made up.

Excludes Large Sums.

This deficit does not include the big sums—between $150,000,000 and $200,000,000—which have been loaned to railroads to help them pay for the extensive programme of improvements and purchase of new cars and locomotives. These loans will be repaid eventually.

EDITOR'S MAIL

NORTH MONAGHAN ELECTION.

Editor Review: Kindly allow me to make a statement and ask a question through the medium of your valuable journal.

On January 2 my mover at the recent nominations in North Monaghan received a telephone message from some unknown party, saying that if the mover of my nomination did not get me called off it would hurt his business. Have things come to such a pass in municipal elections that a man is to be denied the privilege of using his franchise? Because he is in business and moves a nomination is he to be threatened in this way? Is this liberty, justice or fair play? It seems to be the intention to arrange affairs in this township so that the people of this end are not to have any voice in the council and all they are expected to do is to pay two-thirds of the taxes and smile.

This savors somewhat of the Black Hand. Do the resident, suburban and the non-resident urban ratepayers wish to be muzzled in this way?

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, I am,
Yours truly,
H. B. RYE.

GETS PAPER FROM HIS HOME TOWN

EMILE BAUMER RECEIVES EVIDENCE THAT NATIVE PLACE REVIVES.

Mr. Emile Baumer, 567 George St., has received from his father in Bischwelles, Alsace, a copy of a paper which suspended publication in 1869, on account of the trouble between France and Germany which led to the loss of Alsace-Loraine by the former nation. The publication of that paper was resumed on November 23 last, the day French troops under General Rompon took possession of the town. It fas a copy of this edition which Mr. Baumer has received. It gives an account in both French and German of the occupation by the French and of the greeting General Rompon extended to the town officials.

During the Franco-German war Mr. Baumer's father was quartermaster in the 7th Regiment of the French Hussars and was taken prisoner at Cologne. He is still living to see the redemption of his native province after nearly fifty years of foreign domination.

Mr. Baumer lived in his native city until six years ago, when, unable to stand German oppression any longer, he came to Canada.

METHODIST MINISTER IS FOUND GUILTY OF HERESY

Rev. Dr. Knowles of Petrolia Confronted With Charge After Long Hearing by Conference Committee.

Petrolea, Jan. 3.—A verdict of "guilty of heresy charges," pronounced by a special court of the London Methodist Conference in the case of Rev. R. W. Knowles, M.A., Ph.D., pastor for some years past of the Petrolea Methodist Church, was read last night by Rev. J. E. Holmes of London, President of the London Conference, to a meeting of the membership of Petrolea congregation, called for the purpose of hearing the result of the trial on orders of the court. The conference had publicly admonished Dr. Knowles. The meeting was held in the school-room, the fact that it was well-filled indicating the interest taken in the case.

The heresy case against Dr. Knowles, however, has attracted much wider than local interest in Petrolea, the Strathroy district, or even the whole of the London Conference. During the two years in which it has been hanging fire it has attracted widespread attention in the Dominion. Finally reaching the Court of Appeals of the General Conference, it was referred back some time ago to the London Conference, with the order that the trial should take place and a decision be made.

In connection with the reading of the verdict, a letter of regret, written by Dr. Knowles to be presented at the trial which took place in the Centennial Methodist Church, London, a few weeks ago, was read, the statements therein contained having been in a large measure responsible for the kindly attitude of brother ministers and others who knew the circumstances.

Speaking on his own behalf, after the reading of the verdict and letter, Dr. Knowles denied that the letter acknowledge in any way the charges of heresy.

The proven charges against Dr. Knowles accused him of having in December, 1915, said: "The deity of Jesus Christ I cannot accept." In April, 1918, he wrote Rev. S. R. McVitty a letter containing statements alleged to be heterodox. At the St. Thomas Summer School he expressed disbelief in the atonement and deity of Jesus Christ, and the Virgin birth as taught by Methodist standards.

In a sermon in Petrolea in February, 1916, he said: "Even Jesus Christ did not lead a perfect life." The charge that he introduced New Thought books to his Sunday School was also made.

MILLBROOK

(Special Correspondence.)

Mr. H. Richards and the Misses Gertie and Cordie Richards were guests of Mr. E. C. Richards, at Kingston last week.

Mr. H. Stenson, of Peterboro, was a guest at the Waverley Inn over the holiday.

Mrs. W. J. E. Gillett visited friends at Birdsalls last week.

Presentation and Address.

The members of the Nizpah Organized Bible Class of the Millbrook Methodist Sunday School presented their teacher, Mrs. J. L. Byam, with a hymn book and the following address: Mrs. J. L. Byam.

Dear Teacher,—We ask you to accept this hymn book as a token of our esteem and respect for you as our teacher and friend. We value your help as a teacher and also your kindly ways and patience with us. The Sunday School lessons have been made more interesting and happier for us because you have been so considerate without relaxing discipline.

We hope you will enjoy the holiday and have a merry Christmas and a happy New Year.

Dated December 22nd, 1918.

Mrs. Byam made a suitable reply, thanking the donors for their beautiful gift and good wishes which she heartily reciprocated.

Death of J. M. Morrow.

Died in Toronto, on Dec. 25th, 1918, John Mathewson Morrow, aged 79 years.

Mr. Morrow is well known to the older residents of Millbrook, having been engaged in the leather manufacturing business here for some years previous to his removal to Toronto.

Letter From Pte. Alvin Richards.

Nov. 14, 1918.

Dear Mother,—

I have just found out that we can tell where we are in our letters. Here goes.

I am in Mons, Belgium. Reached here on the 12th. This is some town, or rather city. There are some fine buildings here. I was through the Mons Cathedral yesterday. Many refugees have been staying there. There are some magnificent paintings on the walls. A large car, or chariot of gold was on view; of course it was just gilded over. The original car of gold was destroyed in the French revolution. This one was made shortly afterwards.

I am writing this while on phone duty in orderly room. My shift is from 1 p.m. to 6 p.m. There are three of us on operator duty. I saw Foot about two weeks ago. He was looking fine. Met Alf. Armstrong a few days ago. He is in the artillery. Well, what do you think of the situation these days? I wonder how long it will be until we get back to Canada? The Canadians are doing considerable polishing these days. I paid a French woman 2½ francs to scrub my equipment and then I put blanco on it myself. I met John Armstrong yesterday. He has taken out a commission. He looks real well. Millbrook has had a large casualty list during the last few months. Lore Sutton mentioned that there was a Pte. Trick in his battalion. I have several of your letters to answer. Was glad to hear everything was going fine over there; I am away behind with my correspondence, but I haven't had time to write till the last few days. I just received a "Mirror" this p.m. I'm awfully sorry to hear that Roy McBride has been killed in action. I hope Gussie gets back home safely. I was very sorry to hear of Mrs. Rev. Brown's death. Mr. and Miss Brown will feel pretty badly. Mrs. Brown was a lovely woman. She will be sorely missed.

I will give you an idea as to how I am living in the city of Mons. There are three of us running the battalion signalling station. That means eight hours duty per day. We do three hours off and ten hours off. We have looked up a private billet where we have a lovely room, comfy bed, nice white sheets, easy chairs, a good writing table, dressers and stand, and from the windows, a good view of Mons. Also the monsieur and madam, fine people both of them, have made us welcome to the rest of the house. Nearly every evening I am off duty I go in and chat with Monsieur Jadiu and madam, beside a nice warm fire. They can speak a little English and I a little French and between us we get along O.K. He is organist of Mons Cathedral and is a music professor, doing considerable composing. He occasionally asks in a professor of the college, who speaks very good English. He invited the three of us in to dinner last Sunday, one being on duty, only two of us could go. It was great to have dinner served up to us in about umpteen courses. It took us from 12.30 to 3 p.m. Then we went with M. Jadin to the Cathedral where he played for the usual half hour service. Afterwards he played "O Canada." Say it was fine. I guess it was the first time it was heard in Mons Cathedral. The Jadins have four children. The baby was born the morning the Canadians entered the city. The people were living in the cellar then. I was at the theatre here one evening. The play, "Pinafore," was fine. I am sending you views of Mons. I received a lovely box from George Fair and his mother. George has started to university this year. I am glad to hear Henry Lord and Alvin Gray are getting along all right. My health is fine. Everything is going tip top here. I am on headquarters signallers. They are returning twenty-eight to the company, seven to each. Lewis Sutton and Toot Collins are on headquarters signallers in their battalion. Alf Armstrong is signaller on battery. Hope Cecil Mills came through all right. Have no idea where Harry Richards is now. Have received boxes recently from Mrs. Gavin Law, Gainsboro, Sask.; Mrs. George Newman, Omemee, and Aunt Lina (Mrs. McKim), Peterboro. I sure was pleased to receive them. My friends are all good to me. Give my regards to all friends, and wishing you all a merry Christmas and a happy New Year. Hope to be home before Christmas, 1919. Best love for yourself.

Your affectionate son,

ALVIN.

Miss Hein McKim, Peterboro, was a guest of her cousins, the Misses Gertie and Cordie Richards, on New Year's Day.

Miss Margaret Weart, of Peterboro, was a guest of Miss Theo McBride, on Wednesday.

Mrs. R. Russell, of Carmel, was in town on Tuesday.

Mr. Ford Gould, of Peterboro, visited friends in town over the holiday.

Mr. Earle Sootheran, of Toronto, spent the holiday with Mr. and Mrs. John Steele.

Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Thorne and children, Kenneth and Meta, of Reaboro, were guests of her sister, Mrs. Thomas Thorn, over Christmas.

Rev. Dr. Donald McGillivray, of Shanghai, China, will conduct the services in Grace Church, Millbrook, on Sunday, Jan. 12th. He is an eloquent speaker.

Pte. Stan. Westall, of Peterboro, called on Millbrook friends last week. Stan. is one of the heroes of the great war, having been in the thick of it. We are glad to join in welcoming him home.

Mrs. Samuel Eakins was a guest of her daughter, Mrs. H. D. Armstrong, at Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Adams and children spent Christmas with friends at Lindsay.

Mr. and Mrs. George Fowler and children were guests of Peterboro friends last week.

Gunner William Eakins, who arrived home recently from overseas, was in town on Tuesday calling on his mother, Mrs. Samuel Eakins and other friends. He was accompanied by Mrs. Eakins. We are all glad to welcome Bill home after three years of active service overseas.

Nominations.

Millbrook—G. E. Burnham, reeve; J. H. Bingham, G. W. Sayles, W. T. Wood and J. R. Eakins, councillors, and A. A. Smith, Rev. Spencer and L. G. Russell, trustees, all by acclamation.

Cavan—A. J. Henderson, reeve, and Harold Baptie, deputy reeve, by acclamation; W. E. Ball, G. F. Clark, J. L. McCamus, H. Bland and D. Robinson, for councillors, three to be elected.

The Sunday services in connection with the anniversary of the Millbrook Methodist Sunday School were perhaps the best in the history of the school. Rev. Halpenny was the special preacher, morning, afternoon and evening, and his able discourses were listened to with close attention by large congregations. The choir added greatly to the services by well-rendered anthems. At the afternoon services the prizes for regular attendance and learning scripture verses were awarded. Mr. W. Fred. Fallis, superintendent, with his able staff of officers and teachers, are to be congratulated upon the splendid standing of the school.

The private car of Sir John Eaton made a trip to Omemee on Monday and conveyed Mrs. McCrea, Mrs. Mulligan and Miss McCrea, of Toronto, where they will spend a few holidays with Sir John and Lady Eaton.

The six-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Free met with a most unfortunate accident a week ago, when with the use of a fork, she was endeavoring to take a knot out of her shoe lace. The fork slipped and penetrated the eye. The little sufferer was taken to a Peterborough hospital where every effort to save the eye is being made. Mr. and Mrs. Free have the sympathy of their many friends in their great anxiety.

Influenza is again quite prevalent. Many village cases have been reported and a great many in the country.

Township nominations were held in Coronation Hall on Monday afternoon, Robert Wilson and Robert Boate being nominated for reeve. Jeffrey Ashmore for councillor. Messrs. Boate and Ashmore resigning. The former reeve and council is elected by acclamation, viz., R. W. Wilson, reeve; S. B. Carew, Wm. Lowes, M. Carroll, W. Herlihey, councillors.

Miss Lillian Bidmead, of Judhaven, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. A. Scott.

FLU INTERFERED WITH WEDDING

MINNEAOPOLIS PAPER GIVES A REPORT OF THE ROWLAND-MOORE NUPTIALS.

The Minneapolis Journal of recent date says:

"Influenza interfered with the wedding plans of two brides of the holiday season. Invitations had to be recalled for one, while another bride had to forego all pleasures of pre-nuptial entertaining.

"At an altar improvised of foliage, flowers and candles before an imported console, the large panel mirror above which reflected a beautiful holiday setting, the marriage vows were spoken Friday evening by Miss Marian Moore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Moore, of 1701 Logan avenue S, and John Howard Rowand, of Williston, N. D. Rev. Murdoch McLeod read the service at 8 o'clock. Rev. W. L. H. Rowand of Peterboro, Canada, father of the bridegroom, pronounced the blessing. The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a gown of white tulle with a train of old point lace, an heirloom of her mother's. Her veil of the same old lace was arranged in a cap effect and held in place by a wreath of orange blossoms. The bridal vouquet was a shower of bride roses nd lilies of the valley. Her only ornament was a platinum bar pin set with diamonds, a gift of the bridegroom. Walter M. Ranger was the best man and the only attendant at the wedding.

"An informal reception to relatives and intimate friends followed the services, Receiving with Mr. and Mrs. Rowand were Mr. and Mrs. Moore and the father of the bridegroom, Mrs. Rowand came to Minneapolis but was taken ill and could not attend the ceremony. The rooms were decorated with California pepper berries. In the dining room a color effect of pink and white was carried out with white roses in a tall silver filigree basket and white tapers.

Mr. Rowand writes The Review that Mrs. Rowand is now out of danger and will gradually recover. He has arranged pulpit supply for next Sunday in St. Andrew's as cannot come home at present, but expects to be in his place again on Jan. 12th.

Tony Martino was mysteriously murdered in Hamilton beside a house where a New Year's party was being held.

UNIQUE CHRISTMAS CARD

Sent Out by Rev. H. R. Trumpour of Vancouver.

Rev. H. R. Trumpour, formerly of All Saints' Church in this city, but now rector of a church in Vancouver, issued a unique Christmas card for distribution among his friends. It consisted of a neatly printed pamphlet containing a copy of the sermon he delivered on the peace Sunday ordered by the Government in praise for the termination of the war. A number of friends in the city have received copies of this eloquent desimise.

G. H. Evans Called to Help Out Victim of Flu.

Mr. G. H. Evans, son of ex-Ald. George Evans, and who is a member of the staff of the Bank of Montreal, has been temporarily transferred to the branch at Alliston, as the clerical force there has been reduced by the ravages of the flu epidemic. In a telephone message to his parents yesterday, Mr. Evans stated that the situation is serious and the deaths are frequent. Another of the bank clerks was taken down yesterday. Mr. Evans had the flu before he left the city.

SAVE YOUR HAIR! A SMALL BOTTLE STOPS DANDRUFF

EVERY BIT OF DANDRUFF DISAPPEARS AND HAIR STOPS COMING OUT

TRY THIS! YOUR HAIR APPEARS GLOSSY, ABUNDANT, WAVY AND BEAUTIFUL

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight— now — any time— will surely save your hair.

Get a small bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter for a few cents, and after the first application your hair will take on that life, lustre and luxuriance which is so beautiful. It will become wavy and fluffy and have the appearance of abundance, an incomparable gloss and softness; but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you will actually see a lot of fine, downy hair—new hair—growing all over the scalp.

Danderine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. Its exhilarating and life-producing properties cause the hair to grow long, strong and beautiful.

HOT TIME FOR HARRY LAUDER

IS PROMISED IF HE ATTEMPTS TO APPEAR IN MONTREAL

Montreal, Jan. 3.— Harry Lauder, who is booked for Montreal next week, will run into a reception very different from what he has heretofore been accorded here. According to a communication received by the Montreal Star today from J. C. Groves-Contant, he is to be "egged" even as he attempts to step off the train, and that an organization has been formed to make things generally unpleasant for the Scottish singer.

Mr. Lauder, when last here gave an address at a luncheon and made a remark that was taken as highly derogatory to the French-Canadians. Mayor Martin even became interested and wrote a hot letter to Mr. Lauder. The incident caused quite a bit of discussion at the time, and now, apparently, is to be revived.

Dear sir:—Your esteemed paper has announced that Harry Lauder will appear here again during the week of January 7, next.

May I be permitted to tell this low class buffoon that if he cares for his bones and his calf-styled voice, he may as well go to his admirers in Toronto, as the French-Canadians who have been insulted in their own city by this clown will not permit his appearance on any stage in Montreal. An organization to this effect is on foot. We will show him that there is a great number of rotten eggs in storage for him. Montreal, being more than three-quarters French- Canadian will not permit him to even step from the train."

Naturally those behind the organization are not divulging their plans, but they say the reception committee will be quite representative and well armed.

CHURCH STANDS ALONE

Only Mayor in Canada Elected for Fifth Term.

Toronto, Jan. 3.—Mayor Church has now the distinction of being the only mayor of a city in Canada who has been elected for a fifth term. M. C. Costello, of Calgary, who attempted the same feat this year, failed to be elected a fifth time in the election of December. Never before in the history of Canada it is estimated, has the mayor of a Canadian city enjoyed the confidence of the electors for such a long period as has been given to Toronto's "War Mayor."

HEATED WAX ON STOVE

And Fire Brigade Had Run as a Result.

While heating wax on a stove at the home of L. There was no damage done, but Chief Grange calls attention to the danger of such a practice. Some time ago a woman in this city was burned to death in this way.

GOOD TIMES FOR MEN AND CAPITAL

AMERICAN FINANCIER HAS NOTHING BUT BRIGHT HOPE FOR THE FUTURE.

Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the board of the United States Steel Corporation, writing in the January number of System, says:

"For the long future, we may have reason to believe that the country will be more progressive and prosperous than it has ever been before.

"The labor of this country is brought into direct competition with labor of other countries. Wages in leading foreign countries have been in the past about half the amount paid here for similar services, and, although foreign wages have increased, that ratio has darried through the war increases.

"Besides, many of the governments will, in inireased volume, furnish aid to their industries. They will produle as much as possible, and their facilities, though impaired, will quickly recover with this aid. They will sell wherever they can find a market, and they will sell at low prices if necessary.

"The principle of protection to industry by means of tariff laws has built up the commerce and the wealth of this country and other producing countries that have had a surplus for export. Its value has been demonstrated. As between nations, it is simply a safe, sound business proposition.

"As long as one country maintains protection to industry, others similarly circumstanced must do likewise to protect the interests of the large majority, including particularly the great aggregate of workmen.

"I believe both capital and labor will be protected and rewarded. Employers will lead in the effort to promote the welfare of their workmen.

"Co-operation will be seen on every hand. Capital and labor will continue to co-operate with government administration, and the latter will reciprocate in every practical and proper manner. We have every reason to be hopeful."

Veterans to Take Up Building Work

"In the event of Ontario municipal authorities failing to avail themselves of the housing loan offered by the Provincial and Federal Governments, it is possible that the Great War Veterans' Association may consider making application for some of the money and commence building themselves," declared Provincial Secretary W. E. Turley at Toronto. "It is impossible to say yet," he added; "no members have suggested such a course, and the municipal powers are too busy electioneering to think of housing problems just at present.

"Personally, I should think the G. W. V. A. might very well branch out in this enterprise, as they certainly know the crying need of better housing conditions in Ontario."

J. V. Conroy, the district secretary, stated that he would be in accord with such a step by the G. W. V. A., although, officially, the association had not even considered doing so.

OTTAWA NOT INFORMED

Knows Nothing Definite of Visit of King George.

Ottawa, Jan. 3.—"We have no information," said Sir Thomas White, Acting Prime Minister, when asked about the despatch intimating that the King and Queen will visit Canada after the treaty of peace is signed. While the matter has not been officially taken up with the Cabinet, it is believed that such a trip is possible and that it has been discussed with Sir Robert Borden in London. It is also rumored that Rideau Hall has been in communication with England on the subject, although there is no official confirmation.

The King last visited Canada in 1900 when he was still Prince of Wales. He was given an enthusiastic reception from end to end of the Dominion.

Panic Has Produced Careless Buying

Many of the tradesmen in apparel realize that panic and a form of commercial hysteria have resulted in a large amount of early buying, which is unfair either to the individual or to commerce. Every shopper has shared the same experience this last year of being told that it is wise to buy a piece the articles needed, because they might not be obtainable at a later day.

This suit is of striped velours, with short skirt and belted coat. Notice that the French woman has taken to wearing mannish negligee shirts of white silk with four-in-hand ties, adopted from uniforms of American war workers. Sailor hat of white felt, banded with black satin.

This has resulted in a certain measure of hoarding, which the government does not allow in food. It has already resulted in severe waste of individual money. Women, feeling the press of this panic, have gotten clothes in advance of the season, and they now find that there are just as many to be had as six months ago, and that the shape and texture have changed.

It would be a far wiser method of spending one's money to buy a little, at the necessary time, representing the best there is at that moment.

There will always be material of some kind. Even if the world is reduced to whole garments of sewn fig-leaves, there is no reason why any one woman should wish herself out of the picture. Let her go along with the momentum of the hour and buy and wear garments of fig leaves.

The public is beginning to see the wisdom of buying a small amount at the moment it is needed. It should be preached in every possible form of propaganda that this is the wise way to live during war time. Rest assured that if the public buys up all the stock of one thing from a store, that store will be replenished the moment its supply is exhausted.

Of course, there are women who always demand quality. They prefer to have a badly cut gown, made in a past fashion, if they are sure that every thread is silk or wool, as the case may be. But the majority of women are not inclined toward accepting that system of dress.

Therefore, let us start out in a new measure of reform, as soon as this month is over, and face September with no idea of rushing into shops and buying everything that is offered because it is labeled "New." Maybe it is, and maybe it isn't. But a feeling of panic among buyers that now is the only chance to get enough clothes to carry one through the winter, results in the very thing that the government desires most to see avoided—reckless spending of money. So buy shrewdly, and not for hoarding.

If there is to be economy in clothes, let it begin this week. It is at this time, between the seasons, that a woman can take thought of her wardrobe and twist and turn it according to prevailing fashion, in a way that will serve her until styles are more settled. Then, when she has to buy much, she will buy wisely and well.

Help in Remodeling Clothes.

Here are some prophecies that may help you to be economical and wise. One of them sounds like the first aid to an injured wardrobe. It comes direct from Paris. It is that checks, stripes and mosaic blocks are widely worn in whole suits and parts of suits.

Can you imagine any piece of news more gratefully received than that which gives a woman a chance to make a new coat to an old skirt, or the other way around?

There are colored stripes on a white background, made of heavy woolen material and built into a skirt to be worn with any slip-on cuirass or short jacket of colored cloth or velvet.

ON THE FUNNY SIDE

Again the H. C. L.

"My income is suffering," moaned the moving picture star.

"Isn't business good?"

"Splendid. But my manager is compelled to spend so much for lunch and lodging I'm afraid he won't be able to make up my annual million-dollar increase of salary."

Foresight.

"Yes," replied Miss Miami Brown. "I picked him out. De rule of dat happy home is ginter be, 'Any gemman dat find fault wif de cookin' kin do de cookin' hisself.'"

A Lonely Life.

"Flubdub always seems so lonesome."

"Why, he married a fashionable beauty."

"Yes, he married her, but he has never succeeded in getting into the set she belongs to."

Quite So.

Gateman (smiling)—But you can't deny, old top, that it's one of the things that really count!

The Goose Step.

Mrs. Flatbush—What new step was that you were trying last night?

Mr. Flatbush—That's the goose step. Didn't you know it?

Mrs. Flatbush—I never saw a goose do it before.

VERY LIKELY.

Second Congressman—I reckon that's why he uses such blamed long words.

A Rise.

There seems but little to be praised
In fortune's strange devices,
For every time your pay is raised
There comes a jump in prices.

No Doubt.

"You seem depressed."

"Got to write a story and dunnow what to write about," declared the popular novelist.

"That's a mean situation."

"Yep. A manufacturer could make money with a fountain pen that was a self-starter."

Super Solemnity.

"Wagnerian music always sounded noisy and incoherent to me."

"Yes," replied Miss Cayenne; "my idea of a Wagnerian orchestra is a big jazz band trying to take itself seriously."

Patriotic Air Roused Her.

A Quincy girl returned from a dance recently at about 3 a. m. and could not be awakened for work. The alarm clock had no effect, nor did repeated calls from members of the family. Her little brother tooted the reveille, but the girl was no soldier. Finally "The Star-Spangled Banner" was played, and to that the patriotic girl immediately responded.—Boston Globe.

Source of Republic's Strength.

Government in a well-constituted republic requires no belief from man beyond what his reason authorizes. He sees the rationale of the whole system, its origin and its operations, and, as it is best supported when best understood, the human faculties act with boldness and acquire, under this form of government, a gigantic manliness.—Thomas Paine.

Destructive Civil War.

Civil war in England lasted from 1642 to 1660—eighteen years—being contemporaneous part of the time with the Thirty Years war, which divided all Germany into two opposing camps. It found the empire with a population of 16,000,000, and left it with less than 5,000,000.

MAKE CONCRETE TILE

Well Cured and Properly Made Cement Tile Equal to Clay.

Strangles, an Infectious Disease of Colts May Be Controlled — The Cause, Symptoms and Treatment of This Serious Disease.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

TO make concrete tile satisfactorily many things must be taken into consideration. In the first place it is very necessary that the manufacturer have experience in the making of concrete tile; besides, it is essential to have good strong machinery, a good quality of sand and gravel, or crushed rock, first-class cement, material and cement thoroughly mixed, and a kiln where the tile may be steam cured.

Only strong, heavy and durable machinery should be used. With respect to material a good aggregate would be one part material, which would pass through a twenty-mesh sieve, and two parts, which would range from the previous size mentioned up to one-quarter inch stone. Only good sharp material should be used — one in which there is clay should be avoided. If this cannot be procured a sand washing machine will have to be added to the equipment of the plant.

Where a great many tile manufacturers make a mistake in the making of concrete tile is in the fact that they use too "lean" a mixture, that is not enough cement to the material. The proper mixture for first-class tile is one part cement to 2½ parts of crushed material, and in no case should the mix be more lean than one to three of a total aggregate, sufficient water being added to the mixture to make a gum consistency. When the tile are completed they should be placed in kilns where they may be steam cured and left there for a period of not less than 48 hours.

The kiln should be about six feet in height and of a width sufficient to allow the required number of trucks on which the tile have been placed to rest during the curing process.

The tile should be placed in the kiln not more than 1½ hours after it has been manufactured and kept there for 48 hours during the steaming process. After it has been cured it might be removed from the kiln and piled in the yard, and should have at least two weeks hardening before being again disturbed. Before the product of any tile plant is offered for sale samples should be tested either at the plant or sent to the Drainage Department at the O. A. C., Guelph, to be tested to see if it is of the proper strength.—W. R. Scott, B.S.A., O. A. College, Guelph.

Strangles—Its Cause and Cure.

Strangles, commonly called "Colt Distemper," is an infectious, febrile, erruptive disease peculiar to horses, especially to colts or quite young horses, but those of all ages are liable to suffer. One attack does not render an animal immune from a second, but there are few cases in which an animal suffers the second time.

The disease appears in two forms, known as (a) Regular Strangles, (b) Irregular Strangles, often called "Bastard Strangles." As with all contagious or infectious diseases it is caused by a specific virus which is communicable from animal to animal by contact or surroundings, may be carried from a diseased to a healthy animal on the hands or clothes of the attendant, on pails, forks, harness, clothing, etc., and it is possible it may be carried considerable distances in the air.

Symptoms — When the abscesses form in the space between the arms of the lower jaw (called the maxillary space) the general health is often so little affected that nothing wrong is suspected until the abscesses break, but in most cases there is a dullness, more or less loss of appetite, increase of temperature, nasal discharge, at first watery, but soon becoming purulent, cough, often difficulty in swallowing. A tumor or tumors can be felt, and generally seen in the neighborhood of the head, usually in the space already referred to in the throat or higher up, just posterior to the lower jaw. In severe cases the patient becomes unable to swallow, the cough becomes very painful and breathing more or less labored and difficult; and he usually stands with his nose protruded, facing a supply of fresh air if at liberty.

Treatment.—In mild cases good care and comfortable quarters are all that is needed, other than flushing out the cavities of the abscesses three times daily with a five per cent. solution of one of the coal tar antiseptics or carbolic acid. In more acute cases in addition to the above it is good practice to steam the nostrils occasionally by holding the patient's head in steam escaping from a pot of boiling water, to which has been added a little carbolic acid. Feed and water out of a high manger, as he swallows with greater ease when head is elevated. Give the patient two to four drams of hyposulphite of soda (according to size) three times daily. Keep hot poultices to the throat, lance abscesses as soon as ready and treat as above. Feed on soft, easily swallowed and easily digested food. If he wont eat keep up his strength by giving new milk and raw eggs with an oz. of sweet spirits of nitre several times daily. Do not attempt to drench him. Give the powders out of a spool, placing them well back on the tongue. Give the liquids with a 2-oz. syringe. If there be danger of suffocation, and the amateur cannot relieve it, a veterinarian should be sent for promptly. In cases of irriguar strangles the same treatment, less the local attention to the forming abscesses is all that an amateur, and, after all, that a veterinarian can do.

HASH IS HASH.

Rebecca sat by the window, chopping hash.

"As hash is the finished product, was she not, instead, chopping meat or potatoes?"

When the author rallied from the effect of the comment, she wrote her answer under the question:

"There is in psychological moment when the meat and the potatoes blend into hash. It was this moment I had in mind!"

Shrewd Guess.

"Who do you suppose is at the other end of the wire?"

"It must be his wife. He would feel in duty bound to be more polite to anybody else."

Wise—There was to be a meeting of my creditors today.

Howe—Well, wasn't there?

Good Advice.

The man who doesn't worry when he ought to is as bad as the one who worries when he shouldn't. Worrying is bad for the health, but probably not as bad as letting things drift. In case of rain, run for an umbrella. Instead of saying "Don't Worry" the best advice to give a man in trouble is "Get Busy."—Thrift Magazine.

His Preference.

Alvine had always longed for a dog. One day the nurse announced that if he would pray for it, God might send him a brother or a sister very soon. That night the nurse overheard him saying his prayers. He ended with: "Dear God, I would like a brother or a sister, but if it's just the same to you, I'd lots rather have a dog."

Washing Poor People's Feet.

The custom of washing the feet of the poor on Maundy Thursday at Whitehall was observed by English sovereigns until the end of the seventeenth century. After that the ceremony was performed on their behalf by the Archbishops of York until the middle of the eighteenth century.

Easy to Recognize.

Helen, four years old, went to the movies and was much interested in the war pictures. When the statue of Liberty was projected on the screen, she exclaimed: "I can also tell the Goddess of Liberty, 'cause she has an ice cream cone in her hand."

EARLY DAYS OF AMATEUR SPORT

ATHLETIC CLUB ORGANIZED IN NEW YORK THIRTY-ONE YEARS AGO.

Wednesday was the thirty-first birthday of the Amateur Athletic Union, the governing body of amateur sport in America, as it was on January 1, 1888, that the organization was launched. The late James E. Sullivan was the prime over in the formation of the A.A.U., and was its first secretary. Harry McMillan, at that time president of the Schuyikill Navy Athletic Club, was elected the first president, but Sullivan was its leading spirit until his death in September, 1914.

In the early days of amateur sport n America, the New York A.C. was looked upon as the supreme arbiter. It made the laws which the clubs in other cities were bound to follow, and was the supreme court of amateur sport. This naturally aroused jealousy and opposition, and in the early 80's Athletes of America was born. In spite of its name, it was almost purely a New York body, and the amateur sportsmen of other cities did not take kindly to it. In 1888 the A.A.U. entered the field, and while the old association hung on for a little while, and pulled off an American championship meet in New York in opposition to the A.A.U. championships in Detroit, the New Yorkers quickly realised that they would have to climb aboard the A.A.U. band wagon.

The organization started with a membership of fifteen clubs, and a member of each was appointed to the board of governors. At the 1889 meeting only five clubs were represented, and the association seemed doomed. It was then that A. G. Mills suggested the plan of districting the organization, and four associations, representing as many parts of America, were formed. By 1890 the union was on a sound basis, and its supremacy has never since been seriously threatened.

BENNY KAUFF GETS BACK FROM LIFE IN THE ARMY

The Famous Slugger Tells Some Interesting Stories of His Experience in the Service of His Country.

New York, Jan. 3—Sergt. Benny Kauff, spick and span in his khaki uniform, though not exactly a stern visaged soldier, was a visitor at the Giants' offices yesterday. The Pomeroy slugger will receive his discharge from the army within the next few days and is impatient to start southward to prepare for the 1919 season. He looks fine and says he feels that way, and he talked of baseball and the army in his own inimitable style. He has judged life in the army from the standpoint of a big league idol, accustomed to luxurious surroundings, who suddenly is shifted to a world in which he must sleep in a narrow barrack room bunk, rise at dawn to toil until sundown and subsist on the plainest sort of "chow," yet he has naught but kind words to say for the service and deplores only the lack of opportunity to make "real dough" while a soldier of Uncle Sam.

"They say that every day in the army is like Sunday on the farm, but don't believe it," says Benny. "At the time I left camp I was chief engineer of a narrow gauge gasoline dummy used for hauling supplies and men about the camp. I got up at 5 in the morning and worked all day, making my last trip at 5.15 p.m. When I first reported at the camp I was put in an infantry regiment, and after a while I was transferred to the provost guard, my duties being to guard the stockade in which they have a lot of interned Germans, including some U-boat sailors. Then I was shifted to the quartermaster corps and I'm still there.

"I've worked harder for the past six months than I had since the days when I was in the coal mines at Pomeroy Bend. It didn't come easy at first, but now I am used to it. I roll out of my bunk in the morning before the bugle stops blowing, and I've become so accustomed to doing that that since I've been on leave I wake up promptly at 5 a.m. and start to get up before I realize where I am. I'll give you three guesses as to whether or not I go back to bed. Speaking of beds, the bunk I've got out there isn't a yard wide, but I've got so I like it. Why, the first few nights I was out of camp I couldn't sleep in my hotel bed and got up and slept on the floor.

"Believe me, they keep you stepping some in the army and it doesn't pay to miss any signals either. Every once in a while they give us a fire drill in the middle of the night, and each man is supposed to get up, dress fully and get out on line with a water bucket as quickly as possible. Some of my buddies and I decided to take our time getting up one night and then get out on the line wearing as much of our stuff as we could fling on in a few seconds. I showed up wearing shoes, a khaki shirt and a campaign hat, and the rest of our bunch was dressed about the same way. Just to teach us a lesson the officer made us hike about 500 yards dressed as we were and carrying out buckets. The ice cold water splashed out and trickled down my legs at every step and I was cured before we had traveled one quarter of the distance.

"However, it's a great life, and it sure gives you an appetite. The only fault I've got to find with it is that a fellow doesn't get a chance to make any real dough. Thirty a month isn't much, anyway, but when they get through taking out for Liberty bonds and insurance and things like that there isn't enough left on which to have a wild time at a Y.M.C.A. hut. The other day I went to get paid and they slipped me six dollars. I started away wondering what I was going to do with the six when a clerk called me back.

"'Hey!' he said like that, 'Do you have a laundry bill for [illegible] lars here.'

I'm darned if I had any laundry done up, but I couldn't give him an argument and parted with two more bucks. But it must be pretty nice for the officers. Why, a major gets $5500 a season.

"I see where Ty Cobb and Frank Baker say they're going to retire," Benny continued, switching to baseball. "Those fellows make me laugh. You couldn't drive 'em out of baseball with a machine gun. That reminds me: Some sailors from Norfolk came out to Camp Sherman last week to be discharged through our personal office and they tell me Davy Robertson says he is going to play ball next season. Dave's been pretty sick, by the way. He had pneumonia, but he's all right now.

"So young Jess Winters got a commission as a lieutenant, did he? Fine! Will I have to salute him when I see him next spring? Nix, I'll be a free agent by that time!"

Thirty Thousand For Four Years

SALARY PAID BY CLEVELAND BASEBALL CLUB TO NAPOLEON LAJOIE.

The career of Harry Lajoie makes a rather interesting story. He was born in Woonsocket, R.I., on September 5, 1875. The Frenchman was driving a hack from the station in Woonsocket when he took to baseball. From the stare he proved a phenomenal player and a great hitter. His easy grace at the plate, his powerful shoulders and driving swing made him a terror for pitchers. Soon Lajoie decided that baseball offered far more attractive opportunities for fame and fortune than "meeting all trains" and he forsook the hack and took to the willow.

Lajoie started playing professional ball with Fall River in 1896, and his work was so sensational that he and Phil Geier were bought by the Philadelphia Nationals before the season terminated. He was put on first base by William J. Shettsline, acting manager of the team. The next year Larry divided his time between first and outfield; then found his natural position when George Stallings, who had assumed charge of the club in 1897, put him at second base to start the 1898 campaign.

Lajoie stuck with the Phils until the end of the 1900 race, then flopped to the Athletics in 1901 when the American league began its famous raid on the National league. He played phenomenal ball for the Athletics that year.

The next year an injunction obtained by the Philadelphia Nationals prevented him from playing in Pennsylvania, so he was transferred to Cleveland, where he played until the end of the 1914 season. When he joined Cleveland in 1902 he signed at a salary of $30,000 for four years. He managed the Indians from 1905 to 1909.

At the end of the 1914 season Lajoie was transferred to the Athletics.

"Japanese" Conjugal Etiquette.

When American people judge the degree of affection between a Japanese husband and wife by their conduct to each other they make a great mistake. It would be as bad form for a man to express approval of his wife or children as it would be for him to praise any other part of himself, and every wife takes a pride in conducting herself according to the rigid rules of etiquette, which recognize dignity and humility as the virtues that reflect greatest glory on the home of which she is mistress.

Gift Brought Punishment.

A young woman employed in the office of a Kobe shipping house received from her millionaire employer a sum of money as a present on New Year's day. The girl took her fat wad of notes home. She was promptly thrashed by her mother for stealing them and dragged to the office to apologize for the theft. Explanations were made, but when they got home she was admonished once more for not stating her case more clearly.—Japan Chronicle.

HOLD EMPIRE GAMES.

Value of Athletics Well Appreciated by Authorities.

London, Jan. 3.—Some idea of the widespread recognition of the importance of athletics in the morale as well as the physical development of armies and navies may be gained from Great Britains' latest move in sport.

The army sport control board has started at once on a most comprehensive plan of British army championship competitions to be held in England in April, 1919. Telegrams have been sent to the troops in every theatre of war, and that means to a very large part of Europe, Asia and Africa, inviting entries. In other words, the events will brin gtogether the picked athletes of the British service from the four corners of the earth, and presumably among the entrants will be the auxiliary troops of many nationalities within the protection of the Union Jack.

Competition will be by units, and the events will be football, boxing, soccer and cross country running. Eliminations will be held overseas, that is, where the troops are stationed, and the finals sent to England.

WAY THIS WAR WILL BE WON

Not All of Us Can Fight, but Surely All of Us Can Give Our Money.

It's no use saying, "The government's slow," or "If I were Foch I'd do so-and-so!" You can talk and argue and grouch all day, but the war's not going to be won that way.

It's no use saying, "As I'm unfit I can't be expected to do my bit. I'll do nothing if I can't slay." The war's not going to be won that way.

It's no use saying "I'm over age—I've got to the book-of-life's last page." Your gold's still gold if you are gray, and the war's not going to be won that way.

It's no use saying, "I need not get into khaki for another two years yet." Every penny's of military age today, and the war's not going to be won that way.

It's no use saying, "If I were a man——" If you want to help, though a girl, you can. Don't buy frills and furbelows with your pay; the war's not going to be won that way.

Whether young or old, weak, strong or unfit, you can, nay, must, all do your bit. If you can't fight you can pay, pay, pay. The war is going to be won that way.

Use Cinnamon Oil for Influenza.

Oil of cinnamon has a very favorable effect on the temperature and shortens the convalescence period, says Medical press. Patients who usually suffer from marked weakness for several days after an attack of influenza regain their strength very rapidly when treated with cinnamon oil, and are able to take up their occupations on the second or third day. Twelve drops of the oil are given in half a tumblerful of water, and the dose is repeated in one hour, then ten drops given regularly every two hours until the temperature has dropped to normal. When the fever has gone ten drops should be given three times a day during the following twenty-four or forty-eight hours. When influenza is thus treated from the very outset—that is, within the first three or four hours—the temperature becomes normal within twelve hours; if the treatment is begun later it may require twenty-four or thirty-six hours to obtain this result.

Ambitious Small Girl.

"Mister, please, mister, can I have a job?"

"All the girls on our block are picking fruit; the boys are working in the shipyards, and I want to do something for Uncle Sam," twelve-year-old Alice told Charles Sjorberg, timekeeper at the Manlon Dry Dock and Shipbuilding plant, as she sought a "position."

"Sure, I can do anything," she continued, as she explained that her name was just Alice. "I'd like to be a heater, or a rivet-passer," she added as she said she would grow up and be a riveter and break the record.

Tears welled as she set out in search of an orchard where she could pick fruit after Sjorberg told her she would hardly do as a riveter.—Call.

CALAIS LONG FAMOUS PORT

Three Nations Have Held City Which the Germans Are Now Co Eager to Possess.

Since the beginning of the war Calais has been an objective of the German army. It is a familiar name to those who have crossed the 26 miles of nasty choppy water that lies between Calais and the English port of Dover.

Fifty years ago Calais was regarded as a fortress of the first class, but it would now probably not be able to defend itself many days against modern artillery. In 1346, after the battle of Crecy, Calais was besieged by the English King Edward III, holding out resolutely by the bravery of Jean de Vienne. Its inhabitants were saved from the cruel fate with which Edward menaced them by the devotion of seven of its chief citizens, who in turn were themselves spared at the prayer of Queen Phillipa, this event having been commemorated in a widely known historical painting.

Calais remained in the hands of the English until 1558, when it was taken by the duke of Guise, at the head of 30,000 men, from an ill-provided English garrison only 500 strong, after a siege of seven days. This loss led to the remark of an English queen, who declared that when she died the word "Calais" would be found imprinted on her heart. Calais was held by the Spaniards from 1596 to 1598, but was restored to the French by treaty.

On the chalk cliffs of Dover stands a gun, several centuries old, on which is engraved the doggerel:

"Feed me well and keep me clean,

This was fiction, but modern artillery could easily accomplish the feat.

Fate's Playfulness.

A lean young infantryman, hurried across France with his regiment, was flung into a fight near Chateau Thierry with scanty sleep and short rations, went over a crest with the first wave of assault, emerged from a mix up with a German bayonet none the worse except for a tear in the seat of his breeches, escaped by a miracle every blast in the murderous crossfire of German machine guns and finally came out one of the few unscratched ones in his platoon. He dropped on the ground, doubly thankful for the promise of a few moments' rest, but he bounded up again in the agony of his first wound. His face had landed in a bunch of nettles.

New Invention.

A recent invention which has not been marketed as yet, but is reported to be a great success, is an electric roller for use in making the much-needed five-yard rolls of bandages. The new device is not only a great time and labor saver, but requires little practice to learn to operate. The rollers operated by hand, as they have been heretofore, require skill and training to operate them successfully, and the work is strenuous. By rolling electrically the operator is able to keep both hands on the bandage, while in hand operation one hand guides the roll of bandage and the other revolves the roller.

WOLF REAPPEARS IN FRANCE

Held Because the Attention of the Country Has Been Concentrated on the War.

Now and then, as we walked down the slope among the scattered trees, we heard the low kr-krump of distant guns which had come to my ears before dawn, writes William Beebe in Atlantic Monthly. It was a little more distinct and sometimes double; krumm-krump, but even now a big frog at the bottom of the hill would have been more effective.

But all other thoughts slipped away as a new sound arose in the darkness, a sound which held for me a thrill, as vital as the blat of distant battle, and incomparably more alluring. It rose slowly, a rich, mellow, undulation which stirred every fiber, and then quavered, descended, and broke off. We stood motionless, listening with all our ears, and again it came, unmistakably, from the depths of the misty woods.

My companion smiled at me. We could see in imagination the drooped tail, the hollow-chested muzzle raised skyward—a wolf uttering that cry which of all sounds is most symbolic of the northern wilderness—suburbiment plaintif et lugubre, I could not believe my ears, that here in the heart of France, within sound of the guns at the front, I had heard the voice of a wild wolf. The peasants had reported wolves at several places, the cold and pinch of hunger driving them from distant fastnesses, and their face was making [illegible]. And now they had [illegible] adding little to oppose them in this depleted country.

Lacking accurate knowledge, I had always assumed that in Europe, in these modern times, wolves were restricted to the farthest wilds of Russia and Siberia. To think of them in France was in imagination to reperture medieval times again.

Wild Canaries Not Yellow.

Canaries on their native islands are found in great flocks—striped greenish birds, by no means resembling in color our cage canaries. The yellow canary is a result of selective breeding, and the same may be said, of course, of other cage varieties, such as the humpbacked Belgian canary and the "lizard" canary of curious feather-pattern.

"Turn To The Right" At Grand Tuesday

Brisk fun, youthful romance and an atmosphere of green fields and scented orchards, invest "Turn to the Right," with rich appeal to city dwellers, and during its long run on Boardway it lured thousands back to the Gaiety theatre to view it again and again. Like the tried and true friends of one's youth, frequent contact with its lovable characters deepened the attachment and brough fresh enjoyment with each visit.

It is the one play of the generation for the whole family, without a frown or a blush in its entire action. There are no sex problems, no risque dialogue and no situation to cause uneasiness to the man who brought his wife and daughter.

The title "Turn to the Right" is taken from the story of an erring boy's regeneration through the Christian influence of his old-fashioned mother. Joe Bascom is a type common to every small town in America. An honest-hearted exuberant youth, he leaves his home and his boyhood sweetheart to win riches in the city. Seven years later he returns stamped with a prison record. On the day of his home-coming the little homestead is threatened with seizure by the village skinflint, Deacon Tillinger, for non-payment of a grocery bill of $125. With the reunited Bascom family facing this crisis, two of Joe's former prison pals, "Slippery Muggs" and "Dynamite Gilly," happen along. This nimble-witted pair takes quick action in raising the amount necessary to save the farm and they remain to harvest a bumper crop of peaches. Through the influence of Mother Bascome the three youths are thoroughly reformed and they wax prosperous in the manufacture of peach jam from a recipe which has given Mother Bascom local renown.

The raising of the money to save the farm provides one of the great surprises of the play. The stage has known nothing funnier or more ingenious, and it will be better enjoyed if not forestalled in print.

With a majority of over 1,500 over his opponent [illegible] T. M. Wright, Mayor Booker was re-elected mayor of Hamilton [illegible]

ADVERTISE IN THE REVIEW.

"THE BETTER 'OLE" AT THE GRAND

"The Better 'ole," the famous moving picture feature adapted from the celebrated London stage success, "The Romance of Old Bill," showing at the Grand Opera House Thursday, today and tomorrow, is one of the gems of the moving picture world.

The ideas and characters are obtained from the cartoons of Captain Bruce Bairnsfather, one of the greatest caricature artists of the ages, whose tremendous talents lay dormant until called into being by the many ridiculous scenes presented in every day life in the trenches which evoked the laughter of the few and failed to reach the people of the world and be generally appreciated on account of the absence of one who could take them live with the aid of the artist's pen and printer's ink.

Captain Bairnsfather has a style all his own and his works are now known throughout the civilized world and have done more to make the people "at home" realize that humor of the English Tommy in the trenches which smooths out the most trying conditions and takes the sting out of bitter hardships by means of a jest. If the soldiers in France did not have a well-developed sense of humor there would be more cases of insanity in army hospitals than has been the case.

The picture at the Grand is the first of its kind to be shown in this city and its originality, its difference from other motion picture plays—and it is a play, not merely a collection of disjointed scenes from the firing line—is what recommends it to those who appreciate a clever screen production.

Those who go to see this picture today or tomorrow will look upon none of the scenes of marching troops, batteries in operation, exploding shells or make-believe combats which are beginning to bore the theatre-going public. They will see one of the funniest features being shown today, and will declare that Alf, Bill and Bert are old friends with whom they have been long acquainted in the pages of Bairnsfather. It is a story as fascinating as "The Three Musketeers," to which it may be likened, inasmuch as the three Tommies are fast friends and the story concerns them all, though Bill is the central figure.

LAKEFIELD VETERAN WAS A PASSENGER ON FATAL WRECK

Gunner Vandal Simpson Passed Through City on His Way Home—Was Nearly Two Years in Military Service.

Gunner Vandal Simpson was in Peterborough last night on his way to his home at Lakefield. He arrived on the G.T.R. evening train after seeing close upon two years servce overseas and passing through a terrible experience when homeward bound in his own land, having been a passenger on board the I. C. R. troop train which left the rails while travelling through Quebec.

Gunner Simpson went overseas in April of 1917 with the Cobourg heavy battery. He was gassed and for some time was confined to an English hospital. When the armistice was signed he was in Borden camp at Hants in the County of Essex.

He crossed over on the Carmania, which carried about four thousand returning troops and docked at Halifax early last Monday. About ten o'clock of the same morning, he was on board an Intercolonial train heading towards Montreal and at three o'clock in the afternoon, while rounding a curve near Edmunston in the Province of Quebec, the train struck a spread rail and one of the coaches left the track and plunged down a steep embankment, killing four men and injuring fifty.

Gunner Simpson was not in the unlucky car, but states that the scenes which followed were terrible in the extreme. Assistance had to be obtained from Quebec city and it was not until next day that the veterans were able to resume their journey.

DOMINIONS AT PEACE CONFERENCE

HEALTHIER THAN BEFORE THE WAR

BUT GERMAN PEOPLE ARE NOT SO FAT, REPORTS SAY.

London, Jan. 4.—A long article written by a member of the allied naval commission in German waters on the subject of food conditions in North Germany, is published by the Times. The writer is careful to point out that he deals only with what various members of the commission saw with their own eyes in a very considerable area and that he is more or less heresay evidence regarding other parts of Germany.

"But if food conditions in the rest of Germany," he goes on, "are not very much worse than in Oldenburg Mecklenburg and Schleswig-Holstein, there is certainly no need for haste on the part of the allies in going to their relief. I am confident that none of the score or more members of the various sub-commissions who covered many hundred miles of country and saw tens of thousands of the people at close range, reported having noticed any evidence of palpable under-feeding among any of the inhabitants. Indeed, they are of the unanimous opinion that the whole population, both urban and rural, in these regions have been and are being fed near enough to normal requirements to keep them at full physical vigor. As a member of the intelligence staff, who had spent many years in the country before the war, said:

"You don't see so many people with rolls of fat on them as you did five years ago but you do see a healthier, hardier and generally more fit looking people."

MONTREAL IRISH READY

Montreal, Jan. 4.—Final arrangements for the mass meeting of Irishmen to be held here next week to consider a resolution supporting Ireland's demand for the right to self-determination of the Home Rule question, were brought well under way at a meeting here. It was announced that acceptances had been received from Messrs. C. J. Foy, of Perth, Ont; E. B. Devlin, M.P., for Wright; and D'Arcy Scott, former Mayor of Ottawa and lately member of the Board of Railway Commissioners, who will deliver addresses.

HON. C. C. BALLANTYNE ILL

Ottawa, Jan. 4.—Friends of Hon. C. C. Ballantyne are anxious over his condition. He was operated upon in Montreal on Tuesday for appendicitis and has not made the recovery expected. New Year's night he was so bad that the family were called to the bedside. Yesterday he rallied and the latest reports are more favorable.

ORANGE PRICES TO COME DOWN

OTTAWA RULES THERE IS NO REASON FOR PRESENT RATE.

Ottawa, Jan. 4.—The cost of living branch recently made an investigation into the orange market and reports that the chief cause for high prices having been removed, prices during the succeeding months should be decidedly lower. While there are instances of large profits per case handled, there are also instances of loss. Average profits were not so great for the abnormal conditions as to warrant any action against the firms showing apparently large profits.

Now, however, that normal market conditions are restored with the main California crop upon the market, competition should not longer be restricted, and the dealers' margins have declined from the former amounts. Nevertheless, we deem it advisable to assure ourselves that profits throughout the winter are reasonable, and for this purpose shall continue our investigations.

Storm Interferes With Rescue Work

MANY AMERICAN SOLDIERS ARE STILL ABOARD STRANDED LINER.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

New York, Jan. 4.—Weather conditions early today were not regarded as favorable for the immediate removal of the two hundred seriously wounded American soldiers still on board the transport Northern Pacific, hard aground on the treacherous sands off Fair Island. A northeastern storm accompanied by snow, which set in last night, was still in progress at dawn, kicking up a heavy sea.

When darkness caused the suspension of the work of rescue yesterday 2,041 soldiers had been taken from the liner by naval and coast guard craft in the face of great difficulties. On Thursday 259 soldiers and Red Cross nurses wer carried ashore.

IRISH MAKE DEMAND.

Meetings of Sinn Feiners To Ask Comrades' Release.

Dublin, Jan. 4.—Sixty meetings will be held throughout Ireland on Sunday at which demands will be made for the release of six thousand Sinn Feiners said to have been arrested during the war.

"The Nationality," Sin Fein organ, urges the immediate organization of a national assembly which would prepare demands for the accrediting of an Irish delegation to the peace conference. The newspaper lauds the efforts of Irish-Americans to aid in such a move.

JAPENESE WILL LEAVE SIBERIA

INTERMENTION A PARTIAL FAILURE OWING TO JEALOUSY AMONG RIVALS.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Jan. 4. — The announcement that 24,000 Japanese troops will withdraw from Siberia is reported by a Tokio despatch to the Express, quoting an official statement issued by the Japanese war office on December 27. The statement, according to the despatch, says that Japan intends to maintain henceforth only the smallest possible forces in Siberia.

"Public opinion here," says the despatch, "deplores the withdrawal. Allied observers, Americans as well as British, speak bitterly of the intervention as being relatively a failure, owing to disunity among the Allies and their mutual jealousis."

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS

W. G. Manders, the new freight traffic manager for the western division of the Canadian National Railways, was for many years general freight agent of the Canadian Northern at Winnipeg.

WAS UNABLE TO FOLLOW WILSON

PROMINENT SOCIALIST IS NOW ON TRIAL ON CONSPIRACY CHARGE.

Chicago, Jan. 4.—"Do you think Germany attacked the country when it sent submarines to our eastern coast and raided our shipping?" asked District Attorney Fleming of Victor L. Berger, Milwaukee Socialist, charged with conspiracy.

"No, I don't," said the witness. "She was not attacked in the same sense as Belgum."

"Do you think Belgium was attacked by Germany?" "Yes," said the witness. "I did not approve Germany's actions."

Asked whether he had supported President Wilson's policy in the war. Berger said;

"He changed his mind so often it was impossible to follow him, first he was too proud to fght. Then he was re-elected President because he kept us out of war. Four months later he plunged into war. Then he gave us dozens of different reasons why we were at war."

No Ultimatum Is Sent To Germany

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Jan. 4.—The Foreign Office denies that a British ultimatum has been sent to the German commander in the Baltic region, as has been reported. It also declares it has no reports of the landing of large British forces in the Baltic provinces.

Kill And Plunder As They Advance

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Warsaw, Jan. 4.—Bolshevist forces are in the outskirts of Vilna and the towns on the railway between Minsk and Brest-Litovsk. Bolshevists are burning buildings and robbing and murdering peasants as they advance.

Bolshevik Delegate At The Conference

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Jarie, Jan. 4. — The Bolshevist Government of Russia intends to send Adolpe Joffe, former Bolshevik ambassador at Berlin, as its delegate to Paris to claim admission to the peace conference, according to the Echo de Paris today.

VETERANS HAVE NO COMPLAINTS

OF THE TREATMENT THEY RECEIVED ON TRANSPORT CARMANIA.

Toronto, Jan. 4.—The 463 men and 7 officers from the "Carmania" who have arrived were accorded the most enthusiastic welcome that has yet been given at the North Toronto Station since the commencement of demobilization. Not onyl did the large crowd which had assembled itself shout itself hoarse, but the incoming men themselves gave cheer after cheer from the upper platform as they gazed down upon their friends and relatives who had come to meet them.

All the men were in the finest physical condition and speak in the highest terms of the treatment they received on the return journey. In marked contrast to the reports which were received from the troops from the "Northland" the soldiers are unanimous in the statement that food and accommodation were all that could be desired.

Pte. A. E. Bartley On His Way Home

Mrs. A. E. Bartley, Toronto, received a cable from her husband, Pte. A. E. Bartley, on Monday stating he had arrived in England after being a prisoner in Germany for two years and a half. He is well and expects to be home soon.

HUNS BUILDING 170 SUBMARINES

BUT SIGNING OF THE AMISTICE STOPPED WORK OF CONSTRUCTION.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Jan. 4.—One hundred and seventy submarines, all under construction, were found when the Inter-Allied naval commission visited Germany. These U-boats will be turned over to the Allies. Germany's newest battleship, the Baden, will be surrendered at a British port within a few days. The Baden is a battleship of the very latest type. It has a displacement of 28,000 tons.

BRITISH ELECTIONS

Rt. Hon. Dr. Addison, minister of munitions, re-elected in Shoreditch by 6,000 majority.

NEWS IN BRIEF

The total Canadian casualties to December 31st are 220,182, with 60,383 dead.

Fifteen thousand British prisoners, once supposed dead, are turning up as prisoners.

British soldiers agitate to return to civil life.

Britain and Holland have reached an agreement regarding the ex-kaiser.

The Sinn Fein parliament will meet next week and make laws. The British Government will not attempt to disperse it.

BALTIC PORT IS STILL GUARDED

BUT BRITISH HAVE LANDED NO FORCE YET AT SIBERIA.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Warsaw, Jan. 4. — The Russian Baltic port of Libau, according to reports received here, is protected by one British cruiser, three destroyers and one gunboat. The British warships, however, have landed no forces. The admiral commanding the squadron visited the Lithuanion committee at Vilna and promised to remain at Libau until the gulf of Riga had begun to freeze.

CANADA MAY SECURE LARGE SHARE OF OVERSEAS TRADE

Supplies of All Kinds Are Required to Build Up Europe and Business Is Likely to Develope Soon.

London, Jan. 4.—Lloyd Harris is visiting the continent to look over the situation in Belgium and France and to confer with the Governments of those countries. Large supplies of all kinds are needed for rebuilding in the ruined areas and for equipping national industries, and there is sound ground for expecting that a considerable proportion of these goods will be bought in Canada, the Government in each case being the purchaser and assuming responsibility for all payments.

There would appear to be openings for Canadian trade in the Balkans and oRumania. As for trade generally between Canada and Great Britain there is every indication that it will develop rapidly on normal business lines once restrictions upon imports are removed. It is understood that it is the policy of the British Government to remove these obstacles, but it is still necessary to secure licenses to import, and there is delay and trouble getting them, owing in a measure to the state of the exchange market. Cargoes of canned vegetables, for which there is a big market, are now lying at seaports awaiting authority to land, and shipments of other goods at Atlantic parts are being held for the same reason. With the removal of the restrictions there is a possible market here, for the time being at least, of many Canadian manufactures.

There is need for the strengthening of the selling agencies along co-operative lines. In the woollen trade Canada has set a good example. In this respect Mr. Carly, representing all Canadian woollen mills, has arrived and opened a selling office, and has good prospects of doing considerable business.

The shipping situation has improved. Large space on Eastbound Atlantc skips is increasing, and some steamers are arriving not filled to capacity. Freight rates continue high, with no early prospects of improvements.

The Trade Mission is opening up a permanent office in British Columbia House, Regent street.

CITY ON FIRE; BRIGADE STRIKE

BIG LOSS IN CLEVELAND WHEN VOLUNTEER MAN ENGINES.

Cleveland, Jan. 4.—With two-thirds of Cleveland's firemen absent from the station in their effort to enforce the eight-hour day, fire broke out in the four-storey Euclid building, in the heart of the downtown section yesterday afternoon. A general alarm brought twelve fire companies to the scene.

At 5 p.m. the flames had gained such headway that hope of saving the Euclid building were abandoned and efforts were directed to check the spread of the blaze to adjoining buildings.

With the arrival of fifty firemen who were off duty, including several engineers, who manned idle engines, the fire was put under control. The Euclid building was entirely destroyed. Fire Chief Wallace estimated the loss at $100,000.

RAISED $4,200 IN LIQUOR FINES

THRIVING "BLIND PIG" BUSINESS IN KITCHENER IS BROKEN UP.

Toronto, Jan. 4.—The activities of the Ontario License Board at the Town of Kitchener culminated in fines to the extent of $4,200 being added to the Provincial Treasury. For the past month agents of the repartment have been very active sub-rosa in the Kitchener district and have been able to place the coils around one of the largest illicit wholesale liquor traffics that has existed in Ontario for some time.

The department has been obtaining liquor from Emil S. Ruf, of Kitchener, Ont., each week for the past month. The first lot of whiskey cost $15 a gallon and was sold in 4-gallon kegs.

The next week they were granted reduction of $1 a gallon on two kegs and later obtained four kegs for $560. The traffic however, was brought to an abrupt conclusion when the last shipment which was delivered all the way from Kitchener to Toronto was seized and the driver George Doerr, was fined $800 by Magistrate Denison here in Toronto. The value of that shipment was $711, the bill now being in the hands of the Board, together with the correspondence carried on between their agents and Ruf. The case against Ruf has not yet come up as it is being enlarged. He now faces three charges, however.

TWO MILLIONS FOR MISSIONS

THAT IS THE OBJECTIVE THIS YEAR FOR CANADA'S METHODISTS.

Toronto, Jan. 4.—Toronto Methodists have set their mark at a quarter of a million dollars for missions this year. An enthusiastic meeting in Sherbourne Street Church last evening, composed of representatives of the missionary committees of the various city churches, adopted this objective by a standing vote. This is one-fourth of what is being asked this year from the whole of Canadian Methodism, and is more than a doubling of last year's aim, which was $114,000.

Some twenty years ago a quarter of a million dollars was considerably more then was given for missions by all the Methodist Churches in the Dominion. The intention is to raise the objective for the Dominion from one million to two millions next year, but Toronto is not waiting till 1920 to double its givings, the reason being the urgent need in China in order to keep up the missionary work there going, because exchange has fallen so low that a dollar is not worth now more than half what it was worth before the war.

G. H. Wood was in the chair, and addresses were given by George A. Warburton, W. G. Watson, Treasurer of the Missionary Society and Russell Dingman, who spoke for the Publicity Committee.

COL. HENDERSON SUED.

As Owner of Limousine Which Ran Into Another Motor Car.

Ottawa, Jan. 4.—A writ was issued yesterday by the law firm of Fripp & McGee against Col. Harold Henderson, military secretary to the Governor-General, claiming $1500 damages as the result of a motor collision in May last, when a limousine driven by Lady Violet Henderson ran into the automobile belonging to Mr. J. Angus McKenzie. As Col. Henderson is the registered owner of the limousine the action had to be taken against him, although at the time of the accident he was not in the car.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

SATURDAY, JANUARY 4, 1919

ALD.-ELECT MURRAY.

MR. ALEX. MURRAY was fairly elected a member of the City Council. He stood fifth on the list and this standing places him among those who will hold office for two years. Before he went into the contest he did everything in his power to comply with the law. He satisfied himself that he had the necessary property qualification and he resigned the office of fuel commissioner, in which capacity he had rendered the city faithful and intelligent service.

There was one trifling circumstance which Mr. Murray overlooked, however, and which has come to light since his election, that might be sufficient to disqualify him, but at the best it is an infinitesmal technicality. The fence that surrounds his home encroaches by a fraction on the street line, and to obviate the necessity of removing it he pays the city a rental of twenty-five cents a year. This small sum is charged to prevent him acquiring a title to the strip of land in dispute. Small as is the amount involved, the transaction constitutes a contract with the city, and the law says that no alderman shall stand in that relation to the municipality.

It is not likely that there is a man in the city who would question Mr. Murray's right to take his place at the Council Board because of the existence of this agreement with the city. Certainly none of the candidates whom he distanced in the race would do anything of the kind, even if they profited by his disqualification. No man would care to accept office on such terms. Mr. Murray is the man whom the people wanted to represent them.

There are men who hold office in this city on more questionable terms than Mr. Murray would, even if he took his seat now. But Mr. Murray is gifted with a superlative sense of integrity, as all who know him are willing to testify. He refuses to sit, even though he was so emphatically elected, so long as there is a shadow of suspicion attached to his right. He would rather forfeit his seat than hold it while there was even a technical question involved.

Some person started the story that ex-Ald. Stratton meant to dispute Mr. Murray's right to the seat. The rumor probably arose from the fact that Mr. Murray's disqualification would mean Mr. Stratton's election, as he was next in the running. Mr. Stratton never had any such intention, and the announcement of the existing contract was as much a surprise to him as to anyone. He recognizes the fact that Mr. Murray won fairly and would not accept election on any such terms.

"THOU SHALT NOT KILL."

FILLED WITH DRUGS by his jailers, who wished to avoid the necessity of carrying an all but helpless man to the scaffold, Herman Noby, an Albanian, was taken from his cell in Toronto yesterday morning and judicially put to death. The whole affair must have been horrible spectacle for those whose official duties compelled them to witness it. The man was in a state of physical collapse, but with his latest breath he protested his innocence. The clergyman in attendance, probably with the object of affording spiritual comfort to the unfortunate man, started the Lord's Prayer, but in the midst of it the man on the scaffold fainted dead away. After the trap was sprung by the creature who officiates for the state on such occasions, life remained for fully seventeen minutes in the limp body of the hanged man. No human mind can picture the agony of the interval between the drop and the final dissolution. Let us all hope that the drugs so deadened the sensibilities of Noby that he passed away without feeling any of the real tortures of death.

These spectacles occur in Canada every time there is an occasion for one. The day is coming when the people will realize to the full the horror of these judicial barbarities perpetrated in the name of outraged justice and that they will come to be regarded in the same light as the burning of an alleged witch or the stoning to death of some human unfortunate who was supposed to be possessed of an evil spirit. Coming, too, is the day when it will be recalled with a shudder that these horrible functions were accompanied by religious rites which included the recital of the one prayer that Christ left with his disciples as a model for all time, and that the voicing of the petition "Thy will be done" was usually the signal for the hangman to spring the trap.

If any sense of understanding was left Noby as he listened to the words of the Lord's Prayer, and taking it for granted that he was innocent, as he protested, is it any wonder that he was overcome? "Forgive as our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass against us," read the preacher in solemn tones. What a hollow mockery! What a travesty on our ideas of Divine care over humanity! The State utters this sentiment that was first spoken by the Deity itself, and then shows its sincerity by forgiving the trespasser against its own peace and dignity by breaking his neck. If those words of the Nazarene are to be so fulfilled, then what in the name of all that is righteous is to become of humanity in the final review?

It is hard to believe that a man trembling on the verge of eternity would care to go before his Maker with a lie on his lips. There must be something in these protestations of innocence by men who are hanged on purely circumstantial evidence.

And innocent men have been hanged before this in Canada. In North Bay a man was convicted of the murder of his brother. He died declaring that his execution was unwarranted. Six months or so after the hanging the dead man's brother returned from the lumber woods, where he had been all the time and where no word of his brother's death or fate had reached him.

But the State is by this time probably becoming hardened by experience to such miscarriages of justice. They are all too common in the case of capital crimes and in lesser offences. Many a man has served years in the penitentiary only to be vindicated in the end. But the authorities cast him adrift without compensation for his lost time and with the prison brand upon him, undisturbed by the reflection that the wronged man has been forcibly deprived of the best period of his life.

Slavery was for years tolerated in the world and its supporters delved into the records of the Mosaic law to find texts to establish it as a heaven-warranted institution. The same portion of the Scripture is ransacked to find authority for the infliction of capital punishment. Slavery is now one of the relics of a bygone age, and the judicial taking of life will yet be relegated to the archives.

A RIVAL FOR THE BRITISH NAVY.

IT IS ONLY NATURAL for the head of a governmental department, especially in the United States, to favor the extension of his branch of the public service regardless of the outlay involved. Such a course adds to his official prestige and gives him the opportunity of adding to the names which he carries on his patronage list.

Mr. Daniels, Secretary of the Navy in President Wilson's cabinet, is ambitious to build the greatest fleet of warships in the world, one that will, to use his own ingenious expression, be able "to lick anything in creation."

That is Mr. Daniels' idea, but, fortunately, two houses of congress stand between him and the perpetration of any such folly. The newspapers of Canada, especially those of them that are always ready to jump at conclusions, like a salmon at a fly, and who accept the will for the deed, are unduly exercised over this threat to the naval supremacy of our own Empire. There is no reason to become needlessly alarmed. The United States is not given to militarism either on land or on the sea. At almost every session of congress the head of a department or some elected representative who is addicted to seeing red, proposes an increase in the army or navy, but cooler counsel prevails and the proposition is voted down.

England will never surrender her sovereignty of the seas. Her very national existence depends upon it, and the peace of the world as well. The United States, now as ever, is more a commercial than a military nation, and the program is not likely to be changed. If there is any considerable increase in the American fleet it will be in the commercial and not the fighting unit.

Some of the English papers take a more optimistic view of this new naval propaganda of Secretary Daniels. They believe an American fleet such as he plans would work in co-operation with the British navy and that, united, they could control the universe. That may do for an altruistic theory. But no two such fleets could exist on all the waters under the earth without eventually coming into collision, with disastrous results to the entire world.

But there is no immediate danger of a new race in naval construction, with the United States instead of Germany as England's chief competitor. There is nothing in the speeches of President Wilson in Europe to lead to such a conclusion, and, limited as Mr. Wilson's executive power may be, he certainly is qualified to speak with more authority for the American nation than is one of his subordinates.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

THERE IS only one antidote for high prices and that is high wages.

BUT PEACE ON EARTH can never be made complete without at least a measure of justice.

EVANGELIST HONEYWELL said at Belleville that if a man earns $60 a month and spends $75 he is not honest. But will Dr. Honeywell make no allowance for present prices.

NOW THAT President Wilson has dined in Buckingham Palace off a gold service that cost fifteen million dollars, he is likely to be more than ever in favor of that precious metal as the standard of value.

IT IS SAID that the ex-kaiser waited up to watch the passing of the old year. Let it be hoped that he has become sufficiently chastened to regret the scars that he inflicted upon the person of that cycle of time.

LABOR'S CHANCE TO CONFER WITH CABINET MINISTERS

HON. F. D. CARVELL AND HON. G. D. ROBERTSON TO BE IN CITY SOON.

Editor Review: It is so important that we should proceed with all speed to reconstruction-after-the-war and to a return to the works of peace that I suppose no excuse is needed for taking up your space and the attention of the public regarding it. Indeed, in view of the unrest and growing need of development in the relations of labour and industry, it is prudent to delay not an hour. This idea is rapidly becoming manifest everywhere. The U. S. and Great Britain have jumped to the front in a way that would startle the old fogeyism of this young country. We must all get tuned up to the proper key and degree of knowledge of requirements and then we may proceed with confidence and despatch.

What then do I wish to call your attention to? To the creed adopted at the recent conference of practically all the manufacturers of the United States. It was the one thing done at the conference, the details being left to the district councils throughout the nation and to the United States National Chamber of Commerce at Washington. From this creed labor will see what capital and the employer proposes as the basis of the coming solidarity. It is as follows:

"1. I believe that labor and capital are partners, not enemies; that their interests are common interests, not opposed, and that neither can attain the fullest measure of prosperity at the expense of the other, but only in association with the other.

"2. I believe that the community is an essential party to industry and that it should have adequate representation with the other parties.

"3. I believe that the purpose of industry is quite as much to advance social well-being as material well-being and that in the pursuit of that purpose the interests of the community should be carefully considered, the well-being of the employees as respects living and working conditions should be fully guarded, management should be adequately recognized and capital should be justly compensated, and that failure in any of these particulars means loss to all four.

"4. I believe that every man is entitled to an opportunity to earn a living, to fair wages, to reasonable hours of work and proper working conditions, to a decent home, to the opportunity to play, to learn, to worship and to love, as well as to toil, and that the responsibility rests as heavily upon industry as upon government or society, to see that these conditions and opportunities prevail.

"5. I believe that industry, efficiency and initiative, wherever found, should be encouraged and adequately rewarded, and that indolence, indifference and restriction of production should be discountenanced.

"6. I believe that the provision of adequate means of uncovering grievances and promptly adjusting them is of fundamental importance to the successful conduct of industry.

"7. I believe that the most potent measure in bringing about industrial harmony and prosperity is adequate representation of the parties in interest; that existing forms of representation should be carefully studied and availed of in so far as they may be found to have merit and are adaptable to the peculiar conditions in the various industries.

"8. I believe that the most effective structure of representation is that which is built from the bottom up, which includes all employees, and, starting with the election of representatives in each industrial plant, the formation of joint works' committees, of joint district councils, and annual joint conferences of all the parties in interested in a single industrial corporation, can be extended to include all plants in the same industry all industries in a community, in a nation, and in the various nations.

"9. I believe that the application of right principles never fails to effect right relations; that the letter killeth and the spirit maketh alive; that forms are wholly secondary while attitude and spirit are all important, and that only as the parties in industry are animated by the spirit of fair play, justice to all and brotherhood, will any plans which they may mutually work out succeed.

"10. I believe that that man renders the greatest social service who so co-operates in the organization of industry as to afford to the largest number of men the greatest opportunity to self-development and the engagement by every man of those benefits which his own worth adds to the worth of civilization."

Now labor may rely upon it that this creed will be at the back of Mr. Carvell's head in his talk next Wednesday night. If labor knows this and has absorbed it, it can ask Mr. Carvell what the Government proposes to do about it and thus possibly we may do our bit towards getting on into a settled stride for the future.

If I were labor in Peterborough I would interview Mr. Carvell when he comes here and have a chat with him about the best way and means of providing for the future. It would give me great pleasure to facilitate the matter if the city will allow us to cut into the proposed program so far.

Presenting views to two ministers prior to the session ought to produce some effect and at a most important juncture.

BRYAN BACKS WILSON

Wise in Going to Peace Conference, He Says.

Baltimore, Md., Jan. 4.—"This war has taught the lesson that those who make the best citizens in time of peace make the best soldiers in time of war," said William Jennings Bryan in an address made here in which he made a fervent appeal to the men in uniform to serve their country as will in peace as in war. He also endorsed President Wilson's trip abroad, saying:

"President Wilson was wise in going abroad. He knew the importance of seeing to it that the deals which the American people have fought for, would be preserved at the peace conference. He went to Europe to see that peace is to be built on foundations that will endure. He will help lay the foundations for a peace that will not end."

Bravery and Sentiment.

"When I was in the ranks," John's second lieutenant tells him (John Edward Martin is the recruit hero of "The Single Star," by Capt. F. D. Grierson), "our crowd was inspected by a famous general. When he'd looked at every badge and button he said: 'Lads, remember that the neatest dandy makes the best soldier!' What he meant was that the man who takes a pride in himself and keeps himself smart whether he's on parade or square-pushing 'round the town—that man's going to be the fellow you can rely on when bother happens. Cleaning buttons may seem all d—— nonsense to a man who's come out to fight for his country, but it's not. It's just one of the little things that help to make up the big things—and the big things'll come along fast enough, don't you worry."

Buffalo Coats for Men in Siberia

There is one complaint that the American soldiers made regarding the new sheepskin lined coats now being distributed to them—they are too warm. The temperature has been down to the neighborhood of zero Fahrenheit only once so far, and in anything less than severe weather the new coats are a bit heating. At the same time it is understood that the real Siberian winter, now close at hand, ought to demonstrate the full excellence of the coats.

At first the boys were a little wary of the buffalo coats. They are quite heavy, and many of them had never seen buffalo coats before. Nor was their high monetary value realized. After a while the facts began to circulate, and when it was known that the last buffalo coat had been made probably twenty or thirty years before and that every coat is carefully looked after by the government and kept exclusively for army purposes, such of the soldiers as had them began to treasure their great shaggy protectors like the apple of their eyes. These coats were bought originlily for about $22 apiece. They are worth from $250 to $500 now, and as a matter of fact are practically off the market.

The feet of the men are also carefully looked after. At Suchan, in the coal mine regions, where company M of the 31st regiment is, Col. Loring presented me with a pair of enormously thick woolen socks that reach to the knees. They were now called "Liberty." And his adjutant gave me a pair of moccasins to go with them. These would make a perfect foot covering ofr dry snow, but when the feet so protected are thrust inside the very heavy and waterproof arctics furnished by the government, then the severest of cold cannot get through.

Fur caps and fur mittens are here for all American soldiers.

It is the same with food. I have messed with officers and men and found the "chow" wholesome and in most cases very well cooked and palatable. The only exception was a soldier chef in a box car kitchen, who was not really designed by nature to be a cook. I understand that he has been given other duties since.

When the transports bringing supplies to American soldiers arrive at Vladivostok they are tied up to the quay at the base, which is at the far end of the Golden Horn. The Baldwin locomotive people erected vast sheds here some time ago for the construction of engines. These sheds are of wood, but substantialy built, and are now filled with the treasures of the American expeditionary forces.

I think it is fair and accurate to say that the United States has never sent out an expedition better ejuipped than this one now in Siberia, and the returns will undoubtedly be in proportion. It is a recognized fact that every American expedition serves to introduce American goods and American methods, and the success of canned milk in China is a case in point.

Before the Boxer reveition China knew practically nothing about condensed milk, and millions of Chinese never drank milk at all. The Americans showed them the excellence of canned milk, and the Chinese have been using it in increasing quantities ever since. It is the same with other American goods, and people who know say that the Chinese will use anything that is good. Doubtless the Siberians and Russians are similarly open to conviction, and American commerce should prosper accordingly.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Cancer of the Tongue.

That the commonest cause of cancer of the tongue, at any rate in persons under thirty years of age, is the irritation from sharp edged or carious teeth is proved by statistics collected by Drs. Gorse and Dupuich and quoted in the New York Medical Record. Thirty per cent of the cases they studied were traceable to this cause. Cancer of the tongue in young persons almost always appears as an ulcer on the border of the tongue just where it rubs against the teeth. Sometimes it is at the tip. The cases in which it appears at the back of or underneath the tongue are rare. More than 90 per cent of these cases prove fatal within a few months. Moral.—At the first sign of decay or roughness of a tooth go to a dentist at once.

Tracing Use of Lightships.

The first lightship, the Nore, was established in England in 1732, at the mouth of the Thames. The first in this country was stationed in 1820 in Chesapeake bay, off Willoughby Spit. Sandy Hook, now Ambrose, light vessel was established in 1823. A light vessel was placed off Cape Hatteras in 1824 and was driven ashore in 1827, and a ship was not established again in this dangerous position until 1897, after unsuccessful attempts had been made to build a lighthouse on Diamond Shoal.

All Sailors Superstitious.

All sailors are superstitious, but none is so completely under this influence as the old deep-sea fisherman. He puts the deepest faith in "signs" and omens of all kinds. Nothing would induce a skipper of the old school to sail on a Friday. One intrepid unbeliever who dared to leave the docks at Grimsby, England, on a Good Friday was hooted through the lock gates by the scandalized populace. In spite of thus challenging the fates, however, he returned safely with ship and crew.

MUSEUM FOR THE FUTURE.

Its Contents to Be Still Perfect a Thousand Years Hence.

A thousand year museum, designed to preserve exhibits so nearly perfect that they will not have changed in appearance when shown to Americans in 2014, is a recent addition to the American Museum of Natural History in New York. Dust, light, insects and moisture are the constant enemies of museum exhibits, so special storage vaults have been built, which will keep all four under perfect control and in all probability preserve exhibits for 1,000 years. The buildings are not expected to last for anything like that length of time, but the system will do its work of preservation perfectly well until the time for new vaults comes along. Dust and light can be kept under control by constant attention, so the real problems of ideal preservation are moisture and insects. The vaults have been built of concrete, with perfectly fitting air tight metal doors, so that neither moisture nor insects can get in.

In the event, however, of insects getting in—when the vaults are visited, for instance—provision is made to kill them off by filling the vaults with some deadly gas for a few hours occasionally.

Exhibits that are not very exciting now, but which will be genuine curiosities hundreds of years from now, are being stored—such as Indian baskets, headdresses and weapons. Some of the buckskin articles may not last a thousand years, because the Indian tanners did not do sufficiently perfect work, but it is predicted that most of the relics will last that long in good shape.—Saturday Evening Po.

ONE-PIECE FROCK

Garment Is Fastened in Diagonal Line Across Bodice.

The struggle between the long and the short skirt having been settled in favor of the former, which is the American fashion, the new struggle, asserts a correspondent, is between the medieval chemise frock and the tight, draped one.

Every house shows both designs, and if women have sufficient purchase money to get more than the one necessary costume, they can buy both styles and see which is more suitable to their figure.

Despite the preponderance of the medieval frock, the shadow of a coming event falls athwart it. There is something significant in the new gown, which again was designed in America. It differs entirely from the medieval silhouette, and the skirt is long, it is draped upward, it hobbles the ankles, and it has a slim bodice that would be a basque if it showed any disposition to recognize the waistline.

There is a feeling among those who sense things without being able to argue them out in logical sequence that the medieval frock is about to be superseded. There is no sign of this in the Paris exhibitions, but here and there women are asking that their clothes be more fitted to the figure, even when they are cut in one straight line. We grow slimmer, as Mr. Hoover asks us to pull in our belts tighter. We appear to be attenuated, even though we may be well nourished. We do not propose to hide this slimness under a bushel of material, and it may be that history will repeat itself from the days of the directoire, when it was smart and patriotic to appear cut to the bone.

One-piece frock of blue serge, fastened in diagonal line across front of bodice and in a straight line down side of skirt. It opens at the knee to show an underskirt of black satin. The collar is of satin, the belt of patent leather.

At this hour the frock that you will buy is cut in one piece. It may have a draped skirt, a straight skirt, or a tunic skirt. Only the extremists will wear this startling new American pull-back skirt, but it is the herald of things to come.

One thing is quite true: The careless, bunglesome line which was brought about through the fashion for the chemise frock will be eliminated this season. The medievals cut their cloth to the lines of their figures, and there is almost a disposition toward the old princess lines in certain of the frocks made by great houses.

The French gowns show a straighter line than do the American ones, but they are not bunglesome at the waist because they are made of thin material which clings to the figure; or, in such materials as velvet, velours and serge, there is a clever and complex adjustment of panels under the arms that holds in whatever fullness would be awkward.

Most Valuable Garnets.

The oriental garnets are the most valuable and beautiful. They come principally from Pegu; and the town of Sirian having formerly been the chief mart for them, they are hence by corruption known among lapidaries by the appellation of Sirian-garnets. They appear to be the carbuncle of the ancients; their color is crimson, verging into a very red violet; they are transparent, and have a conchoidal fracture.

Origins of Military Titles.

Commodore and commander are forms borrowed and corrupted from the Spanish comendador, a knight, a commander, or the superior of a monastery. The French have the word commandeur, the Italian comandatore. Commandant, however, meaning the officer of a fortified town's garrison etc., comes from the medieval Latin commandator, a commander, and commandare, to command.

Historic Island.

Blennerhassett's island is a small island in the Ohio river about two miles below Parkersburg, W. Va., which figures in history. It gets its name from having been once owned by Hiram Blennerhassett, a wealthy Englishman, who built a fine residence on it. While living there he became financially involved in Aaron Burr's visionary and treasonable schemes, and they proved his ruin.

For Your Convenience

THE saving of the extra steps and extra motions has been shown to be a big thing in the business world. Efficiency engineers at fancy salaries have been hired to study the most convenient ways of getting work done. The biggest industries have proved that convenience pays, and it is the same in the household.

EDDY'S MATCHES & Indurated Fibreware

enable the housewife to save many extra steps and extra motions which may be unnoticed at the time, but which require time and energy just the same.

Eddy's Washtubs and Pails are easier to lift, easier to move, and keep the water hot longer. Eddy's Matches are safe, reliable and non-poisonous. They have been standard in Canada since 1851.

Small things? Perhaps. But your end-of-the-day fatigue is the product of many such small things. And that is a big thing.

Cure That Cold Don't Get Grippe

Take them at once when you feel the first pain or shiver—the first symptom of a cold.

Taken then, they will prevent the Grippe. Taken after it has developed there is nothing better for the pain and fever.

BAGS PRETTIER THAN EVER

Many an eye will recognize the once popular bag of crocheted silk brightened by cut steel beads in fringe and tassels. Since it is a patriotic sock bag, the colors are red, white and blue. The beaded bag has a pagoda top that opens and shuts like a real treasure box. The designs and colors are exquisite tributes to Japan, wrought in the tiniest beads you ever saw.

Interest in Plaids.

Perhaps it is through the influence of the Scottish kilties which have appeared at various times in our American cities to remind us that the kinsmen of Bruce and Wallace are among our allies, that we have revived our interest in plaids. Perhaps it is just because bright colors are in vogue as a counteractive against the grimness of war, or perhaps it is just time the plaids returned to vogue—they do periodically, do they not? At any rate one of the most interesting of the new separate skirts are made from Scottish plaid, and some of these skirts are made in plaited designs that carry out the idea of the highlander.

Icebergs and Temperature.

There seems to be some difference of opinion as to the effect of an iceberg on the temperature of the water in its immediate vicinity. The recent observations made by those on board the vessels of the United States ice patrol of the north Atlantic ocean show the temperature of the water in the presence of icebergs is as low as that in the immediate presence of the berg.

Another Discovery.

The United States in shortening a few years ago the official name to America did not go as much for the sake of economizing time and space as for asserting pride of place in the western hemisphere.—Westminster Gazette.

A supper was provided for them in the hall, by the ladies. After all had partaken of the dainties, short addresses were given by Chief D. E. Whetung, Jack Knott and S. Fawn. A Gloomy Bedroom.

A sight which attracted a great deal of curious attention in London recently was a furniture show window in Oxford street which had been set out as a futurist decorator as a sample of the bedroom of the future. The sheets and pillows on the bed were coal black, and the wall paper was of black and white stripes. There were orange and green cushions on a purple sofa and a vivid green china bird to put the finishing touch to the gloom of the surroundings.

Modern Armor.

The soldiers of old went forth to fight, clad in cumbersome and expensive armor, which, while serving as a protection, nevertheless hindered them from putting forth their best fighting strength. Today Martin Jelalian, an inventor of Rhode Island, has made it possible for a soldier to be protected by armor. He is one of several dozen inventors who have reinvented the coat of mail.

The device is a bulletproof metallic structure, which surrounds the body and extends from the top of the shoulders to below the thighs. This steel coat consists of two like parts held together across the chest by means of straps. Hooks attach the coat to semi-cylindrical pieces of metal which it closely about the upper part of the leg and are fastened behind by straps. The inner surface of the armor is padded. The head is protected by a visored mask composed of the same metal.—Popular Science Monthly.

Start Tomorrow and Keep It Up Every Morning

We're not here long, so let's make our stay agreeable. Let us live well eat well, digest well, work well, sleep well, and look well. What a glorious condition to attain, and yet, not very easy it is if one will only adopt the morning inside bath.

Folks who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when they arise, splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, can, instead, feel as fresh as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system each morning and flushing out the whole of theinternal poisonous stagnant matter.

Everyone, whether ailing, sick or well, should, each morning, before breakfast, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast. While you are enjoying your breakfast the water and phosphate is quietly extracting a large volume of water from the blood and getting ready for a thorough flushing of all the inside organs.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, bilious spells, stomach trouble; others who have sallow skins, blood disorders and sickly complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone a pronounced crank on thesubject of inside-bathing before breakfast.

YANKEE SOLDIERS WELL FED

It Cannot Be Said That in Any Way Uncle Sam Stints His Fighting Men.

More than a billion pounds of meat a year and an equal amount of pure wheat flour are required for the American army bill of fare. That imposing total will increase rapidly as the United States enlarges its fighting forces in France and the divisions in training on this side of the Atlantic. Uncle Sam does not stint the quality or quantity of food for his husky fighting men. There is a bountiful supply of every essential foodstuff on a carefully balanced menu that provides more calories than the rations of any other army in the world. Twenty-seven standard articles figure in the list from which mess sergeants select material for the daily meals. They are beef, bacon, flour, baking powder, beans, rice, potatoes, onions, tomatoes, prunes, jams, apples, peaches, coffee, tea, sugar, milk, vinegar, pickles, salt, pepper, cinnamon, lard and lard substitutes, butter and oleomargarine, sirup and flavoring extracts. Even with this elaborate selection, and notwithstanding the mounting cost of food, the government finds it possible to give the boys in khaki all they can eat for the modest sum of 41 and a fraction cents a day. The soldiers get many articles of food, however, that are not included in the "standard" list. Supply sergeants are instructed to vary the diet by purchasing eggs, chickens, green vegetables and fresh fruits. This plan is followed in France as well as in the United States. Under favorable circumstances poultry and fresh vegetables and fruit are served in the front-line trenches. Uncle Sam believes that Napoleon was right when he said that "an army fights on its belly."—Thomas F. Logan in Leslie's.

CAUGHT SPIRIT OF OCCASION

Colored Porter Meant That Eagle Should Shine in Celebration of American Victory.

It happened after the news that the allied forces were chasing the army of the crown prince. There was great rejoicing on the steps of the custom-house building. Everybody was shaking the hand of everybody else. The man who had never before been known to lose his dignity was pulling the hair of the office boy and whooping it up generally.

All of which was at first rather incomprehensible to the colored porter of the building. He didn't know just what it was all about, but it looked good to him, nevertheless. Finally, he seemed to "get" it. With the agility of a cat he climbed one of the pedestals at the front of the building. On the top is a bronze globe, with a spread eagle over it. Hanging precariously on the ledge, the negro pulled a grimy cloth out of one pocket and a can of paste out of another. Then with a vim and vigor that had never before characterized any of his actions he began polishing away at the eagle's head. While he polished he talked:

"Oh, lady, lady, we're goin' a make you shine! Oh, lady, that shine'll take the eyes out dem Germans! Oh, lady, that head o' your'n is goin' a be some bright!"

And the other celebrants stopped to [illegible]

SASH A POPULAR ACCESSORY

Decoration as Now Worn Adds Materially to the Attractiveness and Promises to Remain.

The sash of 1918-19 is a more sophisticated and alluring accessory than its predecessor of a decade or so ago, and it is adjusted to suit the fancy of the wearer or the artistic conception of the designer. Sometimes the bow is directly in the back, big and broad, like the obi of the maid of Old Japan. Again the loops will be placed at the right or the left side, a perky, jaunty arrangement of silk or satin, sometimes with one instead of two long ends and fringe edged. Then there is the broad girdle, usually of the material, deftly maneuvered with ends terminating in tassels.

However it is introduced, the sash is a distinctive feature of the autumn frock. Even the tailored serge, fashioned severely, with high collar and long, tight sleeves, boasts a sash these days, at least one chic model does, the sash being of the material and terminating in a wide bow at the normal waistline in the back. Another use for the material sash is on the velvet frock, one example being an old rose velvet gown worn by a young girl in one of the new plays. It is a delightfully simple gown, one-piece, medium width skirt and wide girdle and broad bow of the velvet. A narrow band of kolinsky outlines the round neck and edges the modified kimono sleeves.

The sash, on the order of the sweater accessory, of medium width and finished with balls and tassels of silk, is still in vogue and it is particularly adapted to the trim little gown of tricolette or the equally supple wool serim.

CROSS, FEVERISH CHILD IS BILIOUS OR CONSTIPATED

LOOK, MOTHER! IF TONGUE IS COATED GIVE "CALIFORNIA SYRUP OF FIGS."

Every mother realizes, after giving her children "California Syrup of Figs," that this is their ideal laxative because they love its pleasant taste and it thoroughly cleanses the tender little stomach, liver and bowels without griping.

When cross, irritable, feverish or breath is bad, stomach sour, look at the tongue, mother! If coated, give a teaspoonful of this harmless "fruit laxative," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. When its little system is full of cold, throat sore, has stomach ache, diarrhoea, indigestion, colic—remember, a good "inside cleansing" should always be the first treatment given.

Millions of mothers keep "California Syrup of Figs' handy; they know a teaspoonful today saves a sick child tomorrow. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups printed on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here, so don't be fooled. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company."

New Film Exchange Being Established Here

As a result of a conference of representatives of film exchanges with the Hon. T. W. McGarry and the Board of Censors in Toronto, it is announced that special efforts are being made to show more British and Canadian pictures. It is also announced that one of the largest news film services will establish an office in Toronto for the recording of current events in Ontario. The conference followed an ultimatum recently delivered by the Provincial Treasurer demanding that more Canadian and British pictures be shown.

LARGE DEPUTATION WAITS ON THE ONTARIO CABINET

Premier Asked to Introduce Legislation to Provide Pensions for Mothers Who Are Widowed—Consideration Is Promised

Toronto, Jan. 4.—Although not promising immediate legislation, Premier Sir Wm. Hearst promised a solution which would, he hoped, appeal to the deputaton of nearly thirty people representing the Ontario Social Service Council, the Local Council of Women, the Trades and Labor Council, and several religious organizations who waited on him and the Provincial Secretary yesterday.

The deputation asked that legislation be enacted providing pensions to widowed mothers in the province who were compelled to become the bread winner of the home. Before such legislation would be introduced, the Premier pointed out, the proposition would have to get every consideration to make sure that it would be a proper course to pursue and one that would have public opinion behind it.

Government's Work.

"We have no hesitation in saying," said Rev. Gilbert Ager, representing the Social Service Council, who was the first speaker called upon by Mr. Bryce, "that this is a question which cannot be dealt with by the local organizations but can only be dealt with adequately by the Government."

Representing the Trades and Labor Council, Mr. James Gunn declared that the idea of mothers' pensions had received the support of labor.

"If children are to be raised as Christians," said he, "it is necessary that the mother has the time in the home to train them. From the standpoint of citizenship it is necessary that the state provide for the children so that the mother can raise them to become not only good citizens, but good workers.."

Mother's Place at Home.

Facts and figures were presented by Mrs. A. M. Huestis, who showed how successfully legislation of this character worked in 27 States of the Union to the south. The cost of maintaining the child in the home was 50 per cent. less a cost to the State than maintaining the child in an institution. We find a great many children have to be taken from school to augment the family income too, which makes it an important matter from the standpoint of education."

Worthy Proposition.

"The report that we have before us just reached my hands as I came in," said Sir William, "but I have not had the opportunity to read the suggestions in it. The subject you have brought to our attention is an important one, and one that requires a great deal of thought. I may say the Government has considered it. Pensions to soldiers, widows and the workmen's Compensation Act will have a bearing on it."

The Premier promised that a commission would likely be appointed to give a report to the Government. Thought must be given as to the best methods of raising the funds for the scheme. It was necessary that such a scheme have public opinion behind it.

Public Opinion.

"The public opinion that is required by the Government," he continued, "is not that which is presented by a deputation, but the kind that will stand behind the legislation."

"There is no doubt of the desirable end to be accomplished by the legislation you have suggested. It has undoubtedly two sides, and it is necessary to consider all points before action is taken.

"The war through which we have passed shows us more then ever how one depends on the other, and I believe this will be one of the lessons of the war to surround the boys and girls with best conditions for their training of citizens."

Concluding, the Premier promised early considering and an ultimate solution, which he hoped would appeal to all of them present.

EDITOR'S MAIL

ALD.-ELECT MURRAY

Editor Review—Some time ago I erected a wire fence on the north and east sides of my property at the corner of Park and Sherbrooke streets. While I was busy with the fence I received a letter from the City Engineer asking me to stop building and to remove the fence at once as I had encroached on the city line by several feet o nPark street. As this statement appeared a little vague to me I went to the engineer to see what he meant by several feet and to find out the exact position of the street line. This he did not know but he knew I was five or six feet over. He promised to come up the following day and mark off the street line for me. This he failed to do. I then reported the matter to Mayor Duncan who advised me to take it up with the Board of Works. On doing so it was agreed that I let the fence remain where I had built it and pay the city twenty five cents per year in order that they may retin their claimh on the ground I had fenced in.

It has been brought to my notice that under the above circumstances I cannot qualify for a seat in the City Council and some of the election day sore heads are getting a bit jubilant over the situation and no doubt see prospects of having a say in the city affairs for 1919. I am also informed that one of my neighbors is playing an important part in the game, not one of the love thy neighbor as thyself, but one of a kind that brought the following words from the pen of R. Burns. "Man's inhumanity to man makes countless thousands mourn."

To save any further disapopintment to those who cannot take a defeat let me give them a hint by further quoting from R. Burns' address to the wee mouse.

"But, mousie, thou art no thy lane
In proving foresight may be vain
The best-laid schemes o' mice and men
Gang aft a-gley
And lea's us naught but grief and pain,
For promised joy.

LAWLESS SAYS HE WAS NEARLY DOWN AND OUT WHEN HE BEGAN TAKING TANLAC.

"When I first began taking Tanlac I only weighed ninety-seven pounds and was just about down and out," said O. D. Lawless, the well-known Omaha produce merchant residing at 604 South 28th Street, recently, "but I now weigh one hundred and thirty-seven, and so far as my health is concerned I couldn't ask to feel much better.

"I have not gotten all my lost weight back yet," he continued, "for I had dropped down sixty-one pounds. But I am still taking Tanlac and expect soon to tip the beam at one hundred and fifty-eight, my weight before my troubles began. I began suffering from stomach trouble and getting into a rundown condition five years ago, when my appetite went back on me. I lost all desire to give up my coffee and many other things I like best, as I could not retain them, and the only thing that half way agreed with me was fruits. There were terrible pains in my right side, which would almost cramp me double two or three times a week. I became uneasy, fearing appendicitis, and no one seemed to understand my case or do me any good. I just kept suffering and losing weight until it looked like I would shrink up to nothing.

"My condition had become noticeable to all who knew me, and while talking over my case with a friend one day he asked me why I didn't try Tanlac. Well, this put me to thinking there might be something in Tanlac for me, and there certainly was, for I have already picked up forty pounds and my old-time strength and energy have come back to me. I hadn't finished my first bottle until the pains, which I feared were caused by appendicitis, had disappeared. I can drink my coffee now and eat just anything I want and never have the least trouble with my stomach. So you can see why I'm so strong for Tanlac. It has made life worth living for me, and I feel like I ought to pass the good word along."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co. Ltd.; in Havelock, by A. C. Deslke; in Lakefield, by Tanner Drug Co. Ltd.; in Fowlers' Corners, by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert, by A. J. Scott; in Westwood, by G. Pringle & Son.

"God Save the King"

NOT many weeks ago a prize was offered for the best additional verse to "God Save the King" which should represent the part played by the British dominions overseas in the growth of the Empire. This incident serves as a reminder of the obscurity which envelops the origins both of the words and music of the National Anthem. As regards the words Froude quotes a watchword of the navy as early as 1545 "God Save the King," with the countersign "Long to reign over us." When it comes to the origin of the music there is a strong disposition also to go back to the sixteenth century, and the very interesting observation has lately been made that "God Save the King" is in form a galliard. That this was a dance much in vogue at the end of that century is evident from several references to it in "Twelfth Night, of which the following may serve as an instance: "I did think by the excellent constitution of thy leg, it was formed under the star of a galliard."

These, of course, are only gleams of light indicating that the national anthem did not start like Minerva fully armed from the head of some composer about the time of the second Stewart rising in the Highlands—a time when the nation was naturally emphasizing its full loyalty to the House of Hanover. Some of the most recent investigations into the subject began in a curiously accidental manner. A member of the London County Council asked a question of the chairman as to what was the "original" version of "God Save the King." The chairman referred the question to the Education Committee. This committee, in its turn asked Dr. Boas to investigate the history of the words and at the same time placed the inquiry as to the history of the tune in the hands of Dr. J. E. Borland, musical adviser to the council. In due course their report was published in a pamphlet.

In the strict sense there is no "original" version of the words of "God Save the King." It has grown like a folk ballad, though no doubt at different times individuals, who cannot be identified, have helped to shape it. In its growth it has incorporated phrases from orders to the elect, and prayers in the theatre, from Anglican and Roman Catholic services. It is so flexible that words probably used when a Stewart King was threatened by William of Orange, and certainly when a Hanoverian King was threatened by Charles Edward, still express with wonderful accuracy the feelings of the nation to the King-Emperor in the present world-war. As regards the music, Dr. Borland agreed with Dr. Cummings and others that the best evidence as to its origin was in favor of Dr. John Bull, the great Elizabethan, who, by the bye, wrote several galliards. But the evidence is not complete, for the presence of the "Ayre" in a volume of tunes reputed to be by Bull is no proof that it was his; moreover, the "Ayre" was not intended for a national anthem, or for a song at all, so that even if it were certainly proved to be the work of Bull, he was only an unconscious composer of the British national tune.

As is well known, the music has been attributed to other composers, among whom are Purcell, Oswald, and Carey; but their claims have been practically disposed of by a remarkable discovery made by Mr. Fuller-Maitland, originally published in the Musical Quarterly, and reiterated in a valuable paper given before the Musical Association—a paper which led to Dr. Borland's remarks. It appears that not long ago Mr. Fuller-Maitland and Mr. Barclay Squire were going through the large number of catches and rounds by Purcell which occur in various collections, both in manuscript and print. In one of those catches is to be found a passage with regard to the return of the Duke of York (afterward James II.) from virtual exile in 1680. There was a strong Tory reaction in that year, which is emphasized in the catch in question, especially in the last two lines:

Make room for the men that never deny'd,
To God save the King and Duke they reply'd.

The curious point is that at the words "God save the King" the notes set to the phrase are the first four notes of the National Anthem. The catch is in triple time, so that the resemblance extends to an absolute identity of rhythm.

When it is added that in the manuscript collection of songs containing the catch, the words "God save the King and Duke" are in italics, there can be no reasonable doubt that the quotations is intentional. Not only does this discovery dispose of the theory that either Oswald or Carey was the composer of the tune, but it disproves the feeble claim put forward for Purcell himself as the composer, for it needs a long time before a phrase is well enough known to warrant even the composer in making a quotation from it which would stand any chance of being understood. The only theory of origin that remains besides the attribution to Bull is that the tune is related to a carol in the "Melismata Collection" published in 1611. But this has not hitherto been supported by as great a weight of authority.

The peculiarity of the Turks is at once apparent when we observe that their history is almost exclusive a catalogue of names and battles, says Sir Charles Eliot.

AS CHINAMAN SEES KAISER

Not Hard to See That This Student Has Sympathy With the "All-Highest."

Here are some comments on the kaiser from the pen of a Chinese student, an exchange says:

"The German kaiser is not the superior man as deciphered by the Chinese literature; he is surely a mean fellow containing much fraudish cunning in his deceited heart. The superior man is shown in the merits of excellent heart with much loving kindness to all peoples; the mean fellow is displayed in the black heart of the unregenerated devils of hell with much loving kindness only to himself.

"In the history of China was an emperor who burn the books and slewed the scholars to extinct the civilization of the peaceful inhabitants; but he was not success in this crafty tricks, for the civilizations could never be extinct by such dishonorable barbarism means. Now the German kaiser he also awfully wishing to slave the people and extinct the civilizations of the universe; he also destroy the literature books, and the arts, and the ships, and mess the people of allies nations. . . . But he will not success."

Oldest Living West Pointer.

General Horatio Gates Gibson, the oldest living graduate of West Point, veteran of the Mexican civil and Indian wars, has just celebrated his 91st birthday in good health and spirits.

Among the guests of the soldier on his birthday were a few surviving members of the Aztec Club, which was formed by officers of the service in the city of Mexico seventy-one years ago. There is only a squad of the original members of this club living. Gen. Gibson is one of them and is the organization's president.

It is probable that this veteran thought as a young soldier, after campaigning from Vera Cruz to the city of Mexico under the leadership of Gen. Winfield Scott, that the Mexican war was a good deal of a war. It is likely, also, after serving as an artillery chieftain through the campaigns from '61 to '65, that he thought the civil war was about the biggest thing in the shape of a war that ever happened or could happen. Today, this man of service, 91 years of age, is under the necessity of readjusting his earlier thoughts on the comparative magnitude of conflicts between nations.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

To Teach Fruit Raising.

Vice Consul Richard P. Momsen reports that the Brazilian government has authorized the establishment of a pomicultural station in Deodoro. The work of the station will comprise the production of domestic fruit trees and those foreign types already selected and acclimated, the introduction of indigenous fruit trees, the study of insect pests and methods of combating them, the study of better methods of packing and transporting plants and fruits, experiments to determine the most successful methods of conserving fruits and the question of distributing fruits to dealers. The school will be open to students who wish to pursue this branch of agriculture and to farmers who wish to observe practical demonstrations of modern pomicultural methods.

Chinese Taking to Cigarettes.

Ten years ago we exported 400,000,000 cigarettes to China, which is an average of about one cigarette a year for each celestial. This year there has already been an average of 10 cigarettes exported to each Chinese, or, in round figures, 4,000,000,000 American cigarettes, says Popular Science Monthly. Last year our exports in cigarettes alone reached the $12,000,000 mark.

JENNINGS AND "TY"

Hugh Jennings does not believe that Ty Cobb seriously intends to quit baseball as Ty intimated upon his return from France, nor does the think Ty takes the "free agent" idea seriously. In brief Jennings is sure Ty will be back on the old stamping ground in the spring, good as ever.

PITCHER KLEPFER WOUNDED

Reports filtering in from France are that Ed Klepfer of the Cleveland Indians, formerly of Rochester, and Joe Jenkins of the Chicago White Sox were wounded in the last days of fighting, but they are not confirmed. That concerning Klepfer is that he was so seriously hurt that he never will be able to play ball again.

Grecian Building Materials.

Brick is the most common kind of building material in Saloniki and in all New Greece. Wooden structures are rare, on account of the shortage of timber. Stone is little used, except for underground walls and foundations. Ordinary walls are built with both plain and hollow bricks. The former, being more solid, are generally used for the building of lower stories while hollow bricks are commonly employed in the upper stages. The principal kind of roofing used is made of flat tiling.

Poet Immortalized Hemp.

Longfellow has immortalized the uses of hemp in his famous poem, "The Ropewalk," in which he makes us see the rope made into a swing for two lovely maidens, the tightrope for the tired, spangled girl of the cheap street vaudeville show, the cord that the old bell ringer pulls when he rings the noonday hour; through his eyes we see the schoolboy flying his kite, the farmer's wife drawing a bucket of cool water from the well on the old homestead, and many other beautiful pictures.

President Mitchell Of The Cubs Replete With Baseball History

President-Manager Fred Mitchell of the Chicago Cubs is a live short story book when baseball yarns, both humorous and serious, as sought for a little entertainment. One can always count on hearing some of the most interesting tales from him about the national pastime and men closely associated with it. He has been actively connected with the sport for twenty years in which time he has stored in his fertile brain enough interesting narratives to fill a good sized volume. He tells them about players, magnates, fans, umpires and himself.

Mitchell shines in a fanning bee and at the meetings of the National League in New York always holds down one of the end chairs as if in a minstrel. At the last gathering of the league in the east the usual "big punching" took place at the round table at which sat John McGraw, Hugo Bezdek, Pat Moran, Wilbert Robinson, Tom McCarthy and Hans Lobert, round table orators of the first degree. Johnny Evers and Sherwood Magee were missing. It is needless to say what the nature of the conversation was. Finally it drifted on the amount of intelligence possessed by the present day players, and Mitchell told the following:

"I have run into a lot of smart players, but the one that left the deepest impression on my mind was Eddie Foster of Washington. I haven't forgotten my experience with him because it cost me $25 to find out how smart he was. We were with the New York Yankees in 1910 and were in a writing room of one of the hotels in New York discussing the meaning of a certain word when he offered to bet me he could tell me the meaning of any word I picked out on opening the dictionary at any page. That sounded like a soft bet to me. I tried it five times. He won each bet and convinced me he knew something about the dictionary."

That story brought to the mind of the writer his experience in a Pullman several years ago that proved how little the fans know of the average player's intelligence. The writer was travelling to join the Cubs on their spring training trip and on the train met Prof. Williams of the Valparaiso (Ind.) university.

"I am fond of baseball," said Prof. Williams, "but it has always been my impression that most ball players were illiterate, that they came off the back lots and knew nothing else but baseball. What is the extent of their education and what businesses do they pursue after the season?"

The professor clearly revealed he knew nothing about the mentality of the present day athletes and the writer made every effort and finally did convince him that the "roughneck" player was a thing of the past. Facts were shown to him that more than two-thirds of the players in the major leagues had had high school educations and more than one-third had attended college. In addition the names of players who had received their degrees in dentistry, law, surgery and many other lines of professions were given him.

"I am more than pleased to hear that," said Prof. Williams. "It has turned over for me a new page in baseball and from now on I will take a greater interest in the sport."

Germany's Earlier Revolt

CARL SCHURZ published his memoirs twenty year ago, but they are interesting reading to-day. Schurz tells how the former Kaiser Wilhelm's great-grandfather, Frederick William IV. lied to his people, and how that monarch's father, Frederick William III., set him an earlier example of the same kind.

"In 1813," writes Schurz, "King William III. of Prussia issued from the town of Kalisch his famous manifesto, in which he called the German people to arms, promising at the same time a new national union and participation of the people in the business of government under constitutional forms.

"The new birth of a united German national empire, the abolition of arbitrary government by the introduction of free political institutions—that was the solemn promise of the Prussian King as the people understood it—that was the hope which inspired the people in the struggle against Napoleonic rule with enthusiastic heroism and a self-sacrifice without limit and ended in a final victory.

"But out of the peace issued nothing for the German nation but the famous Deutsche Bund, the organ of which was to be the bundestag, composed of representatives of the various German kings and princes, without any vestige of representation of the people. There was no mention of any guarantee of civic rights, of a popular vote, of a free press, of the freedom of assembly, of a trial by jury. The mere reminder on the part of the people of his own promises made in 1813 was resented by him as an arrogant self-assertion of subjects. The outcome was a period of cruel persecutions of patriotic men, of barbarous press gagging, of brutal police excesses.

"The pledges made to the German nation by the German princes in 1813 were shamefully violated. It was a time of deepest humiliation. Even the Frenchmen, who had felt the edge of the German sword, derided, not without reason the pitiable degradation of the victor."

"In 1840 the perjured king, Frederick William III. died, and his son, the fourth of that name, came to the Prussian throne. Frederick William IV. seems to have been very like his great-grandson, Wilhelm.

"King Frederick William IV. created an assembly 'which was to have the look of a Parliament and yet not to be one.' He yielded to the popular clamor in so doing, and then he declared that he, the King, 'would never have called this assembly had he ever suspected in the slightest degree that its members would try to play the part of so-called representatives of the people.'

"All through the '40s the political ferment continued in Germany. In 1848, following the establishment of the French Republic, all Germany flamed into popular demands for reform. Frederick William IV. was flooded with petitions which 'he at first received with sullen silence.'

"Revolts broke out in various parts of Germany. Finally the people of Berlin rose against the king. The Prussian army was not able to subdue them, though many were killed on both sides. The terrified Frederick William IV. ordered the troops to withdraw. Then the people, carrying the bodies of their dead and with arms still in hand, invaded the interior court of the Imperial Palace and summoned the king to appear before them.

"When, with the weeping queen beside him, he stepped out upon an upper balcony, a deep voice cried: 'Off with your hat!' The King obeyed, uncovered and stood powerless in the presence of his betrayed people.

"At the same time the prince who was to become Kaiser William I., grandfather of Wilhelm, fled from Germany and took refuge in England. He was charged with having ordered the troops to fire on the people of Berlin, and was called the 'Grapeshot Prince.'

"Two days later Frederick William IV. raised a tri-color flag over the Royal Palace and, wearing the colors of the revolution on his arm, rode out on horseback and promised the people of Berlin all and more than they had asked for.

"It was announced that a 'new and responsible ministry had been appointed, composed of members of the Liberal opposition; that a constituent assembly to be elected by the Prussian people should be convoked to frame a constitution for the kingdom of Prussia and a national Parliament to be elected by the people of all the German states for the purpose of uniting all Germany under a constitutional government.'

"For a little while the king seemed to remain favorable to democratic reform. He even declared that 'all the concessions made by him had been made of his own free will, and according to his own convictions and that nobody should dare to question this.'

"But the army, the court nobility and the junkers gradually got the king's ear. He ordered the National Assembly to adjourn. He sent Prussian soldiers to seize all the machinery of Government. The people were called to arms. There were revolutionary uprisings in many parts of the country, which were put down ruthlessly. There were many executions and Schurz, with hundreds of other patriots, fled from Germany. The second Hohenzollern perjurer completed his conquest of the people.

"The German revolutionists of 1848," wrote Schurz, "fought for German unity and free government and were mainly defeated by Prussian bayonets. They committed many errors, but the greatest of these sprang from the child-like confidence with which they expected the complete fulfillment of all the promises which the kings and princes, especially the King of Prussia, had made under stress of circumstances."

Allies Have more Wheat.

England and France have made a remarkable wartime record in raising crops this year. The French crop of wheat promises to be 120,000,000 bushels more than last year, and England probably will have 30,000,000 more than in 1917.

With 200,000 fewer male laborers on the land than before the war, England and Wales have planted 33 per cent more land to crops this year than in 1916, and the area of grain is the largest on record. The increase in grain and potatoes is 2,012,000 acres. Scotland and Ireland also expect to show almost as great an increase. Wheat acreage in England and Wales is 2,605,000 acres; oats, [illegible] acres; barley, 1,000,000 acres; rye and minor grains, 652,000 acres; potatoes, 645,000 acres.

The entire wheat area of the United Kingdom this year, as estimated by Broomhall is 2,900,000 acres, on which the crop may exceed 100,000,000 bushels.

Don't Say That Again!

An Illinois man, remarking about the low price of wheat, compared to chicken feed, says: "Sort of indicates that wheat may go to the chicks, doesn't it?" Man, don't say that again! I am afraid it might be overheard in some broken household in France, where some widowed mother tries to still the cries of her hungry children by giving them the greater part of her own scanty rations. Don't talk about feeding wheat to the chickens!—Orange Judd Farmer

Petroleum in New Zealand.

The government of New Zealand is encouraging the development of petroleum deposits in the islands, which constitute its domain. It has paid one company $48,005 for the first 1,000,000 gallons of petroleum produced. One field on the west coast of the South island contains, it is estimated, at least 32,000,000 gallons of crude oil in shale. Other prospects are to be investigated soon with government assistance.

Uncle Sam.

LITTLE DEMAND FOR WOOD

Guelph, Jan. 4.—There is apparently not very much demand for the wood which the city is bringing here from Algonquin Park, as there have been only two orders received so far at the city clerk's office. This is acounted for by the fact that coal has been coming in freely of late.

No one who can avoid it should miss this gathering.

In the evening there will be the usual service of song and splendid program of music by the choir. The Pastor will begin a series of three sermons on "Personal Problems." The subjects of the series will be.

Military Medal awarded to 410260 Corp. Dawkins, 38th Battalion, authority London Gazette.

Deed—For conspicious gallantry in action during the battle of Passchendaele Ridge on the 30th October, 1917. While in charge of his Lewis gun his company left the support position to reinforce the 85th Battalion. Corp. Dawkins was not aware of this move, but learning of it afterwards, he improvised a gun crew, his own having become a casualty. He pushed up to the 85th, front line, got his gun into position, where assistance was desired and materially assisted in maintaining the position. This gun, on the night of the 30th and 31st of October, did excellent work against a body of about 35 of the enemy. This N.C.O. displayed gallantry and initiative.

Corp. Harry Dawkins was wounded during the latter part of the year 1917, a shell grazing his chest. For months he was in a precarious state but ultimately he recovered. He was promoted sergeant and returned to France and was acting as machine gun instructor up to date of the signing of the armistice. Prior to enlistment he was a fireman in the service of the G.T.R.

New York, N. Y., Jan. 4.—It is reported that Mrs. Vernon Castle is engaged to be married to Tom Powers, of the Royal Air Force, but now appearing in "Oh Boy" in London.

Mr. Powers was a friend of the late Captain Vernon Castle, and it was under the instruction of the latter that Mr. Powers began to fly. Mrs. Castle has been reported enyaged many times since Capt. Castle came to his death, flying in Texas.

It was news to Mrs. Castle's mother, that her daughter was reported engaged. She said she had heard nothing of it. She would be the first person likely to know it, and regarded the rumor as unworthy of consideration. Yet the rumor persists.

Mr. Powers was stationed at Toronto with the air force for a while but went to Texas with Captain Castle, and was training there when Castle was killed. Later he went to France, and there he was injured in action, and invalided to London.

FAMOUS ARTIST DEAD.

Good Advice to Women.

Do not be afraid to rest your feet Sit down at your work whenever you can; a chair in the kitchen is a great foot conserver. On may walk all day long upon two feet without injury, but cannot stand perfectly still, as when paring the dinner vegetables, ironing the small pieces, etc., for a quarter of an hour without a crippling degree of fatigue and a risk of serious injury to the feet.

Fossil Ivory in the Arctic.

What is perhaps the most amazing of all the Arctic bonanzas is that contained in the Liakhov islands and New Siberia. These lie in the midst of almost eternal ice in the north of Siberia itself, and the soil is full of tusks of the now extinct mammoth. During the last century shiploads of this fossil ivory have been brought out and sold at very high prices.

Whale Eaten by Many.

The Indians of the Pacific coast before the white man came hunted the whale in their swift, high-prowed narrow canoes, killing it with light harpoons. For many years whale meat was used largely by them. The Japanese for centuries have eaten whale beef. Among the nations of Europe it has been common food in the past.

RAISE PENSION FOR CHILDREN

Word has been received from Ottawa that the Cabinet has passed an order in council making a substantial increase to children of disabled soldiers. The old rate for every child was $96 per annum on a sliding scale according to the percentage of disability. This has now been increased to $144 per annum for the first child, $120 for the second and $96 for the third and every subsequent child, boys up to the age of 16 and girls up to the age of 17. This will make a substantial increase to married disabled soldiers, as a totally disabled pensioner who requires attendance, is married and has three children may now receive $1356 per year or $113 per month.

The rates for the children and dependent brothers and sisters of deceased soldiers is increased similarly to $144 per annum for the first child, $120 for the second and $96 for the thir and every subsequent child.

The rates for orphan children have also been increased from $192 per annum to $288 per annum for the first orphan child, $240 for the second and $192 for the third and every subsequent orphan child. This means that the pension for three orphan children is increased from $576 per annum to $720 per annum.

All these increases are retroactive to Sept. 1 and will entail considerable extra work for the head office of the board of pension commissioners, as every case has to be readjusted, new proceedings drawn, pension cheque plate made and cheques with an explanatory letter sent to every pensioner where children are in receipt of pension. This work cannot be done in one month, as there are now nearly 50,000 pension cheques issued monthly, and it will take two or three months before every adjustment is made and pensioners receive cheque for the increased allowance.

GOT THE PROMISED CHILD

How Chilcat Natives Kept Their Ward With the Missionaries, of Five Years' Standing.

In my intimate companionship with Muir in Alaska I saw many instances of his warm human sympathy, S. Hall Young writes in World Outlook. One occurred when in 1879 we were visiting the tribe of Chilcats. These Chilcats, recognised as the most warlike and arrogant of the Thlinget tribes, were nevertheless so interested in the gospel message I had to bring them that they crowded the house where we lodged, filling it full and prying off planks from its side so that those without could hear.

The first night we spent in the village, after an all-day's palaver, we were about to retire to our blankets when a woman brought a baby to me which was almost a skeleton from lack of nourishment, and whose feeble cry was most pitiful to hear. The woman explained that the baby's mother had died, and that they had no food for the child—none of the other women being in condition to nurse it. At once Muir and I set about preparing condensed milk for the baby. We diluted it with warm water until we thought it of the proper consistency, and fed it to the starving baby. The child was almost too weak to take this nourishment, and it required the utmost patience and care to feed it. Muir worked with that little papoose almost all night, rocking it in his arms and soothing its cries, and when at last it rested in a healthful, refreshing sleep, he carefully showed the woman how to prepare its food, and insisted upon leaving all of our remaining canned milk for the baby. The natives voluntarily told me when we were about to leave that if the baby lived it belonged to me and they would bring it down to Fort Wrangel. I thought but little of this promise, knowing how easily people forget such things; but five years after this occurrence I was surprised to have some Chilcat natives bring a sturdy and healthy little boy, and formally give him to me, saying that this was the baby whose life we had saved, and he therefore belonged to us. The child was taken into our mission at Wrangel, and I baptized him with the name of "John," after my friend.

Then and Now.

"Charley, dear," said young Mrs. Torkins, "do you remember when you used to stand outdoors and serenade me?"

"Yes. What reminds you of it? The way I now have to stand on the front doorstep and holler for the latchkey?"

A Mistake.

"Poor thing! She labors under the hallucination that she is the queen of Sheba."

"Whoever told you so must be mistaken. Even in her crazy moments she would never dream of imagining herself somebody who went to another person to learn wisdom."

COLD WEATHER COMING

Cold comfort was issued from the meteorological office in Toronto last night, when the prophet of the elements declared that weather to-day would be "fair and decidedly cold." How long this condition would last he could not or would not say. He added that there would be a light snowfall to-night which may indicate a rise in temperature.

Lieut.-Col. F. F. Michin, formerly of the Princess Patricias, now of the Royal Air Force, has been placed on retired pay with the honorary rank of major-general.

ALLIES MUST HELP POLAND PUT CHECK ON BOLSHEVISM

Paderewski, Who Is Suggested as First President of Polish Republic, Says Late Struggle Is War of Hypocrisy Unless New Menace Is Crushed

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Warsaw, Jan. 6.—Commenting upon the alleged slowness of the Allies to help the Poles to stem the tide of Bolshevism, Ignace Jan Paderewski, who is suggested as the first president of the republic of Poland, denounced the Bolshevist movement here early today. "The Bolshevist idea is to kill all users of the tooth-brush," he said. "If this war is to help mankind, Bolshevism must be downed. Otherwise it was a war of hypocrisy. The inevitable result of Bolshevism will be the return to the barbaric era in Russia and Eastern Central Europe. If Poland is not helped to create a barrier against it, then liberty and justice do not exist. There is no doubt that we must have intervention to deal with Bolshevism. Poland's immediate situation is serious on every side."

Paderewski has found that Gen. Joseph Pilsudski, the Polish military dictator, will not give up authority in Poland at the present time. Two Polish leagues had an interview which it is indicated was unsatisfactory.

Paderewski came to Polo as a representative of four million Poles, from whom he has received plenary powers, he says. He claims to have power to make loans to the Polish government, and also to be representative at Paris of the Polish committee. Gen. Pilsudski is said to have flatly refused to form a new cabinet, and Paderewski has announced that he will be unable to work with him.

PREFERRED INTERNAL USE OF ALCOHOL FOR AN AILMENT

Young Man Procured Order for Grain Alcohol for Bathing Shoulder and Then Diluted it for Drinking Purposes—Fined in Police Court.

Two young men who have spent the past week in jail, having been arrested a week ago Monday night about ten o'clock on the market square charged with drunkeness and having been remanded upon appearing in police court the following day were before the magistrate this morning and upon pleading guilty to the charge were fined $10.00 and $4.10 costs, apiece.

Chief Thompson prosecuted the case for the crown and Mr. J. R. Corkery acted for the defendants.

It appears that one of the defendants induced a young woman to obtain an order for brandy from a doctor and then proceeded to drink it himself. He also admitted having several drinks of alcohol in his home. On the evening of Saturday while he was working in a poolroom near the market square his friend entered the place with a six-ounce bottle of alcohol in his pocket and while the two were preparing to go elsewhere to dilute the liquor for drinking purposes the police arrived and put an end to the proposed party.

The story of one defendant did not differ very materially from that of the other. The second went to a doctor in the city and asked for an order for a pint of alcohol for rubbing purposes and obtained the necessary form. Asked as to whether he had been at any time a patient of the doctor mentioned he replied in the negative. The doctor did not een examine him but he did ask him what he wanted the alcohol for.

In explanation the defendant informed the court that since having the influenza he had been troubled with a pain in his shoulder and it was to ease this that he procured the alcohol.

He stated that he had succeeded in drinking a pint of diluted alcohol—equal in strength to about two or three quarts of ordinary whiskey—from Saturday night to Monday morning without any assistance and without becoming intoxicated. This statement met with derision and Chief Thompson ventured the remark that the shoulder received mighty little attention during the time the beverage was being consumed.

FOUND A CHICKEN IN BOILED EGG

MORE TESTIMONY SUBMITTED AS TO FOOD SERVED ON NORTHLAND.

Ottawa, Jan. 6.—Investigations into conditions on the transport Northland proceeded before Mr. Justice Hodgins throughout Saturday afternoon. The stories told by returned soldiers were similar to those of the previous day. There were complaints of bad ventilation below, of insufficient food, of the sale of food by stewards.

"Did you," Mr. Orde, Government counsel asked of Sergt. Charles Smith, "hear anything of bad eggs being served to the men?"

"Yes," was the reply, "One man had a chicken in his egg."

"Did you hear that?" counsel asked in astonished tones.

"I saw it," Sgt. Smith quickly responded. "It was brought to the Sergeants' room for us to see," but Sgt. Smith admitted later that to have an egg on a ship was "buying a pig in a poke." He complained, too, that on one occasion two pints of water were put in the man's jam, to make it go round—"until it looked like this"—and here the Sergeant tapped the water jug standing on the table before them. With regard to the quality of the food generally, however, Sgt. Smith did not complain. His complaints were directed against the manner in which it was served.

FOUND MAGGOT IN HIS SOUP RATION

INVESTIGATION INTO TRANSPORT NORTHLAND CONTINUED TODAY.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottaw, Jan. 6.—Returned soldiers today continued their complaints against the transport Northland before Commissioner Hodgins. Private John Blackmore declared that he had seen a soldier take a maggot out of the soup served to him by the Northland stewards and he himself had been served with a piece of bone instead of meat. Other complaints sworn to today were that the latrines overflowed many gallons of filthy water into the soldiers' sleeping quarters.

Flags of the allies were presented to the Great War Veterans' Association of Sault Ste. Marie for its club room.

PLENTY OF WORK IN PROVINCES

TORONTO AND HAMILTON ONLY PLACES WHERE LABOR IS CONGESTED.

That the only two localities in Canada where there is unemployment on a large scale are Toronto and Montreal is the opinion of Mr. H. W. Harper general organizer of the International Association of Machinists, one of the trades unions which suffered severely through the closing down of munitions plants. Mr. Harper's duties carry him through the province and different parts of the country and accordingly he has more than a local grasp of the labor situation. He says that if skilled mechanics are willing to leave Toronto for some of the larger towns in Ontario ond for some other cities in Canada, they can find employment. If they can be persuaded to do so he thinks that a goodly portion of the skilled labor can be absorbed. He finds, however, that while many have accepted positions offered them in Peterboro, Collingwood, Sault Ste Marie and in the railroad towns, there is still a disposition on the part of others to remain in Toronto awaiting openings.

POLES SAIL FOR EUROPE

New York, Jan. 6.—The French liner France, which sailed Saturday carried a battalion of Poles, numbering 1,554a men recruited in America for the Polish army. Among the cabin passengers on the ship were J. P. Morgan and T. Ashley Sparks, director-general here for the British ministry of shipping.

Over 4,000 men have been discharged in the Winnipeg military district since November 11. During the year 7,611 men have been discharged in the district.

TORONTO WOMAN IS MURDERED BY HER BOARDER

SLAYER OF MRS. THOS. HUNTLEY ATTEMPTS TO TAKE HIS OWN LIFE.

Toronto, Jan. 6—Mrs. Thomas Huntley, 127 Campbell avenue, was slashed so severely by a razor in the hands of Thomas Cook, a discharged soldier, on Saturday afternoon, that she died in her home almost immediately. After committing the deed, Cook, who boarded with the Huntleys attempted to commit suicide by cutting his own throat.

He ran out of the house, at the same time shouting, "I've gone crazy but I am not done yet," but collapsed on the steps before anyone could reach him.

When the neighbors entered the house Mrs. Huntley was found lying on the parlor floor in an expiring condition, and although everything possible was done, she died almost immediately afterward. The principal veine in the throat had been severed by slashes from the razor. The attack had apparently begun in the kitchen, where there were evidences of a struggle, and later Mrs. Huntley had fled to the parlor where, with escape cut off, her assailant had murdered her.

Mr. and Mrs. Huntley had boarded Cook for several years previous to his enlistment. He went overseas and got as far as England, and was shortly aftefward returned to Canada. On his return he again took up his abode with the Huntleys. It was at first thought that Cook was recovering from an attack of delirium tremens and was not in his right mind. From what can be gained now from his actions, it would appear that he was in a jealous rage when he committed the act.

When Mr. Huntley, who was at work, learned of the murder of his wife he was prostrated. He knew no reason for the deed. "I can't tell you. I don't know," was all the statement he could make.

DR. J. H. EASTWOOD'S AUTO CAUGHT AT G. T. CROSSING

Doctor and Two Other Passengers Are Thrown From Car and Escape Injury—Engineer Failed to Blow Whistle.

While returning from Nicholls Hospital in his automobile Saturday at noon, Dr. J. H. Eastwood was caught on the crossing by the outward bound Lakefield train and his car badly smashed and thrown upon its side, while he and two little girls whom he had picked up to save them the long walk into the city were thrown clear of the auto and escaped injury.

The doctor had stopped in front of Jordan's greenhouse to let the two children into his car, which was not half over the tracks, when he heard the train approaching. He states that, while he is unable to say positively that the bell was not ringing, it is his impression that it only began to ring the moment when the engine was almost upon him.

Unable to clear the railway in time to avoid the accident he pulled his auto sideways and faced partly to the north, hoping that the locomotive would strike his machine while running in a semi-parallel direction. This was what happened, and, while the automobile was badly smashed, turned upon its side and given a complete right-about-face, the three occupants were thrown out and uninjured.

Dr. Eastwood claims positively that the engineer did not blow the whistle for the crossing, and is under the impression that the bell did not commence to ring until the train was a very short distance from him.

EX-PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT DIES AFTER BRIEF ILLNESS

EX-PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Oyster Bay, N. Y., Jan. 6.—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt died in his sleep at his home on Sagamore Hill in this village. Death is believed to have been due to rheumatism which affected his heart. The former President sat up the most of Sunday and retired at 11 o'clock last night. Hours later, about 4 a.m., Mrs. Roosevelt, who was the only member of the family at Oyster Bay, went to her husbands' room and found that he had died during the night.

Two of the Colonel's sons, Major Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., and Capt. Kermit Roosevelt, are in service abroad. Capt. Archie Roosevelt and his wife left New York last night for Boston.

Details of the funeral have not been arranged, but an announcement is expected late today. Telegrams of sympathy began to come in from all parts of the country today as soon as the news of the Colonel's death became known.

New York, Jan. 6.—The news of the death of the former President was received here by Miss Josephine Striker, the Colonel's secretary, in a telephone message from Mrs. Roosevelt. Miss Striker said that the Colonel had suffered an attack of inflammatory rheumatism on New Year's Day and had since been more or less confined to his room. It is understood that only Mrs. Roosevelt and the nurse were with him at the time of his death. The other members of the family are in other parts of the country or abroad.

Sketch of his Career

Theodore Roosevelt, 26th President of the United States; born in New York city, Oct. 27, 1858; was graduated at Harvard University in 1880 and began the study of law. The next year he was elected to the Assembly from the 21st District of New York, serving in the Legislatures of 1883, 1884, and 1885. While chairman of the Committee on Cities, he introduced reform legislation which has proved immensely beneficial to the people of New York One of his measures was the act taking from the Board of Aldermen power to confirm or reject the appointments of the mayor. He was chairman of the noted Legislative Investigating Committee which bore his name and which revealed many of the abuses existing in the city government in the early eighties.

In 1886 Mr. Roosevelt was the Republican candiadte for mayor against Abram S. Hewitt, United Democracy and Henry George, United Labor. Mr. Hewitt was elected by about 22,000 plurality. Mr. Roosevelt was appointed a Republican member of the United States Civil Service Commission by President Cleveland in his first administration. His ability and rugged honesty in the administration of the affairs of that office greatly helped to strengthen his hold on popular regard. He continued in that office till May 1, 1895, when he resigned to accept the office of police commissioner from Mayor Strong. His record as president of the board was of the highest character. He found the administration of affairs in a demoralised condition, but the same energetic methods that had characterised all his work the same uncompromising honesty that is the most prominent note in his character, when applied to police affairs, soon brought the administration of the department to a high degree of efficiency.

From his New York office he was called by President McKinley, April 6, 1897, to be Assistant Secretary of the Navy. There again his energy and quick mastery of detail contributed much to the successful administration of the department and the preparation of the navy for the most brilliant feats in naval warfare in the history of the world.

Spartacus Seize Newspaper Offices

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Amsterdam, Jan. 6.—A coup d'etat took place in Berlin yesterday, it is believed here, on the basis of advices from Berlin today. The last telegram received here from the Wolff Bureau announced the seizure of its office. Private advices say that the Spartacans occupied the bureau and also the offices of half a dozen big newspapers, including the Socialist Vorwaerts.

The people from Ontario districts are as follows: London, 12 officers, 7 men and 30 civilians; Toronto: 28 officers, 18 men and 215 civilians; Kingston: Two officers, 10 men and 16 civilians.

ULTIMATUM TO HUN COMMANDER

INVADING POLISH ARMY CALL FOR SURRENDER OF IMPORTANT POINT.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Brlin, Jan. 6.—Polish troops have occupied the railway station at Chroscunik, four miles from Bentschen, and have sent an ultimatum to the German commander in the latter place, a demand that he surrender. The capture of Bentschen by the Poles would be most serious for Berlin and all of Northern Germany. Its loss to thePole s would cut communication between Berlin and Siberia and would endanger the provisioning of Frankfort on the Oder and all of Northern Germany.

The Cabinet completed its consideration of the Polish situation today and directed the Ministry of War to take the necessary technical steps to strengthen eastern frontiers. When preparations have been completed, which will probably be next week, the Cabinet will probably appeal to the people to form a volunteer army to protect German borders.

SATISFACTORY PROGRESS.

Ottawa, Jan. 6.—Reports from various portions of the Dominion show that the sale of war savings and thrift stamps is making progress in a very satisfactory manner. Pembroke has asked for a $1,000 supply of thrift stamps, which meant 4,000 stamps. Now every merchant in the town is selling them. The town's first allotment was less than $400 worth.

GERMANY ASKS TO BE GIVEN CHANCE

DIPLOMAT PREDICTS THAT COUNTRY WILL RECOVER GREATNESS IN TIME.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Berne, Jan. 6.—Germany will slowly recover from the disasters wrought by the war and will in time regain its place among the nations of the world, but in a democratical, not a monarchalic spirit, according to Count Max Von Montgelas, formerly in charge of American affairs in the Foreign Office at Berlin and new German Minister to Switzerland, Vice Baron Von Romberg retired.

"This recover," he said today, "will be endlessly hard and will require every ounce of Germany's discipline, but it can be accomplished in case the Entente nations give Germany a sporting chance, that is to alleviate blockade sufficiently to permit Germany to pursue her fisheries as formerly, and not to impose suffocating industrial and economic conditions such as the occupation of territories west of the Rhine."

LABOR'S NEW POWER.

FOR THE PAST TWO YEARS the members of the City Council gave as an inducement for the postponing of public works the probability that when the war was over material and labor would be cheaper. The outfall sewer and the overhead bridge were deferred accordingly, and the policy was an easy one as relieving the public officials from a vast load of responsibility.

Everything is different now. Peace has not only been restored, but four members of the Labor party have been elected to the Council. It is taken for granted that at least one of the former members of the Council who was re-elected will cast in his lot and vote with the Labor men. It has already been arranged that he will associate himself with a Labor union in which he is eligible for membership.

The Labor men in the Council will be at least sufficiently strong to tie up any legislation to which they are opposed. They have announced their platform. All public works must be performed by day labor instead of by the contract system, and eight hours, instead of nine, as at present, is to constitute a day's work for all those in the employ of the city. Nothing like a reduction of the present scale of wages is to be tolerated, at least until there is first a fall in the current cost of living, and there is no immediate prospect of this. Work on the bridge is to be started at once, according to Labor's program.

The city, if this program is followed, will not be likely to have the public works carried on any cheaper than could have been possible any time in the past two years. If the price of labor remains at the present high figure, the present cost of material will certainly continue. There cannot be a cut in the wages of the factory hands who prepare this material if the scale in Peterborough is to be maintained.

The world is faced now with labor conditions that have never before confronted it. Canada, we are told, is to help build up the war-wasted portions of Europe and to send overseas manufactured goods to supplement the crippled industries across the ocean. How can the manufacturers in Canada, or in the United States for that matter, if they pay a rate of wages at least fifty per cent. higher than that paid by their competitors overseas, hope to remain in the contest for the trade of the world?

The difference in the rate of wages paid in England and in America cannot be better demonstrated than by citing the case of the trade in the cotton produced in the Southern States. The English manufacturer can buy the raw material from the American planter, pay freight charges across the ocean, manufacture it in his own mills, and then send back the finished product to America to compete with the manufacturers on this side of the Atlantic. In no case is the necessity for a protective tariff made so apparent. No case, either, can be cited in which it can be more clearly shown that a protective tariff is the workingman's one chance if he is to hope for anything better than the semi-starvation wages that are paid to his fellow toilers in Europe. Without a measure of protection the factory cannot exist, at least not exist and pay a higher rate of wages than those paid by the European competitor. The manufacturers and the wage workers have a common cause in protection. It is to the interest of the one as to the other to combine for its maintenance.

The peace conference has a long and important program mapped out for it. One of the duties with which it is to be charged is to establish a world labor court to standardize working conditions in America and Europe. Slums are to be relegated to the scrap heap with other forms of oppression that existed before the war. Wage-earners in all parts of the universe are to be protected in their rights and given a chance to make for themselves and their families a decent living.

This may be in a measure anticipating the industrial millennium, but it is something to which an enlightened world is surely coming. And when men and women the universe over work under relatively similar conditions, then, and not till then, will tariff walls be no longer necessary and universal free trade can safely prevail.

A LEAF FROM HISTORY.

ONE OF THE OBSTACLES to the granting of home rule to Ireland has not been the opposition to the measure which has always existed in other parts of the Empire so much as to the differences among the people of the unhappy island itself. Ulster always elected by a strenuous majority to remain a part of the Empire and to accept its legislative enactments from the Parliament in London.

Just before the war it was hoped that the home rule question had been satisfactorily settled. In order to reach a solution it had been found necessary to so circumscribe the prerogatives of the House of Lords as to render the peers a practically negligible quantity. At the most, they could delay but not frustrate legislation by the Commons. The home rule bill as passed for the second time excluded Ulster. That part of Ireland was to maintain its relation to the Empire while the rest of the island was to have a parliament of its own, while still represented in the British House. It was to be such a federation as holds the various Canadian provinces in the Federal Union.

The home rule bill was not given effect on account of the war. And now the dissatisfied portion of the Irish race ask more than ever. They would have been satisfied with a federal union four years ago. Disappointed with that after it was pledged them, they now demand an independent republic and the problem becomes more acute than ever.

It is difficult to understand the contention that Ireland must not be disrupted by the exclusion of Ireland. There are abundant precedents to be found for such action, the minority being permitted to remain as they are while the majority's demands are granted.

When the American Civil War broke out, Virginia was the sovereign state in the Southern Confederacy. Part of the state seceded while the remainder elected to remain with the anti-slavery North. There was discord, naturally, between these two elements of the population. The trouble was rationally settled. The loyal section demanded from the Federal authorities separation from the slave-holding portion of the state, and the request was granted. Virginia and West Virginia went their separate ways. Each played its own part in the war, and since the partition the two states have lived as amicably with each other as do any of the other American states or Canadian provinces.

Again, the contention is put up that if Ireland is given home rule, with Ulster excluded, the self-governing portion of the island will be a constant menace to the peace of the Empire as well as to the isolated province. Surely the British are able to take care of themselves and their interests in this regard. But why should a self-governing Ireland be a menace to its neighbor any more than is Belgium or Poland or any of the other long oppressed races who are promised emancipation following the war?

WHY NOT THE JUDGE?

A STAFF WRITER in the Toronto World shares in the horror which all humanely-minded people must feel when regarding the barbarous exhibition of hanging which occurred in the Queen City last Friday morning, when the man hanged fainted while protesting his innocence on the scaffold and lived for seventeen minutes after the trap was sprung.

The writer in the World, it seems, has not reached the point of objecting to the judicial taking of life, but he believes that hanging should be abolished and the electric chair substituted for the rope and the scaffold. Instead of a bungling hangman the World would have the deed of death performed by the twelve jurors who found the condemned man guilty, each to press one of twelve electric buttons to turn on the fatal current so that the responsibility could be equally shared.

Why stop with the jurymen? Why not compel the attendance, as a witness, of the judge who pronounced the death sentence with solemn tones and a stereotyped prayer for mercy upon the soul of the man whom he is sending into the presence of his Creator?

R. Bickerdike, ex-M.P. for one of the divisions of Montreal, session after session during his membership in the House, introduced a bill to abolish capital punishment. This was invariably voted down, each subsequent session, however, with a lessening majority against it. More men of the stamp of Mr. Bickerdike are required in public life, and it will be to the advantage of civilization if he is again sent to Parliament to resume his good work.

If all the men hanged in Canada were executed at a central point, say at Ottawa, and the men who maintain the capital punishment law on the statute books were compelled to attend as witnesses, it is safe to conclude that the first execution under such circumstances would be followed by the repeal of the law. No man is equipped to discuss this matter intelligently unless he has personally witnessed the awful end of a human being by hanging.

Again, in a number of American states the sheriff is personally required to hang such of his prisoners as are condemned to death, instead of securing the services of some degenerate who is not above accepting money for such work. In Canada the sheriff is allowed the privilege of hanging criminals by proxy.

Why should there be included in the duties of any public official in this country a task so far beneath any man that it necessary to find some creature to perform it who by the very fact of his service renders himself an Ishmaelite among his fellow creatures for all time?

The murderer may have the excuse of moral degeneracy or excessive passion for his deed. The State and the offending hangman have no such extenuation but act in cold blood. But the State at least privily prays for the victim of its reprisal.

THE BARBARITY OF HANGING

(Ida L. Webster in Toronto World.)

Can you as a citizen of Toronto in the year of our Lord 1919 imagine the old-fashioned method which is used to exact the death penalty from a murderer? If this stunt of hanging a man had grown with the city there would not have needed to be the harrowing sight of yesterday morning at the jail.

In the very old days the condemned were led to the block, and then after placing as much of their neck as possible upon the roughly hewn chunk of wood they had the pleasure of closing their eyes and waiting for the ax to descend. All that was considered quite the correct thing in those days, but what would the modern folks who pride themselves upon their social uplifting work do if that style still held the floor?

And yet the workers for the help and benefit of Christianity will sit still while the law takes its course, as it did yesterday morning. What is there in this world that would recommend the system which is the vogue here by hanging a man

To say that it is barbarous is putting it mildly. It is not only that, but what is more terrible still, it is being condoned in a city of churches—in the very city where everyone is supposed to be the keeper of his fellow-man. Surely the shepherds have fallen asleep on their jobs, and instead of being up and at it they are lying low, allowing the law to exact its payments, which are to say the least disgusting.

Why any man, and particularly one who is being put to death on circumstantial evidences, should be made the butt of a freak of some mid-Victorian jailer's mind is more than we can understand. Professional hangmen may have been wonderful inventions in the years which have passed, but today they are distinctly out of date, and the people of this country should be human enough to have the system of employing them abolished.

If the law is so very stringent that it will not allow of some other form of death as a penalty for murder, then for heaven's sake let us have the hangings done in a scientific manner [illegible] to the old gag of having a special man and a deputy pull a string which operates the floor, so that it will jerk from under the condemned's feet and thus in the course of time result in the breaking of his neck. It need not be pointed out to us that this operation happens almost immediately, because we have heard all of that, and at the same time we have heard that prisoners do not die for as long as 17 minutes.

Every man, woman and child in this city who read the papers knows that this state of affairs exists, but why do they not get together and do something? Would it not be a lot better to have 12 buttons, one of which would release an electric lever, which would result in the same death, only in a much safer way. Then let the jury who found the prisoner guilty be the 12 apostles to press the buttons. In this way no one would know who really did pull the string, as it were, and therefore, no one would have it on his conscience.

But to read of the jocular remarks of these professional hangmen is almost like reading of the life of Queen Elizabeth. The very idea that men are toted from one end of the country to the other to hang anyone is enough to put the brand of Cain upon the City of Toronto for a start.

"A life for a life" is all right, but surely it is not necessary for the taking of the life to consume 17 minutes. And also it will be quite the happiest day in the world when people stop protesting as to their love for the chance of hanging the kaiser. The professional gentlemen who featured at the three-reel drama at the jail yesterday need not sign for the pleasure, because it will never be given to them. However, they might devote their spare time to good advantage if they sat down and attempted to figure out some new way for hanging prisoners found guilty of murder in the Dominion of Canada.

SAILERS.

There is meny diffrentses between the army and the navy, the mane one being that the navy is full of sailers, wile if you saw a sailer in the army you would think he was lost, wich he proberly would be.

The easiest way to tell a sailer frum a soldier is by his pants, being so wide at the bottum you mite think the tailer forgot wich end of a sailer his waist is. Another easy way is by his hat, being a little round hat on the top of his hed, ony you know its reely his rite hat because all the other sailers have got one jest like it.

Insted of a house a sailer has a ship, ony if you woak up in the morning ad found your house was about 300 miles some place elts you would be mutch more surprised than wat the sailer is. Proving if you wunts get used to a thing you ixpect it.

If a sailer wunts to know ixactly ware he is wen there aint anything erround but wattir all looking alike, all he has to do is to ask the captin wat lattertude and longytude it is, and thats ware he is. He can also tell wich way north is by his compass, and if his compass ever got broak, some other sailer would lend him his. Proving that no matter how lonesome a sailer gets, he always has the satisfaction of knowing wich way he is looking.

TODAY'S STORY

Every now and then somebody discovers the meanest man and in a white heat of indignation seeks to pillory him in the newspaper.

The editor of the Hackensack Republican rises to a point—even though it is a pen point—of order that seems to be well taken:

"There are some other skunks in this little world of ours—petty, low-down contemptible curs, mangy mongrels of the nobreed type.

"He stopped to buy a basket of apples from a woman with a little roadside market.

"While she left the spot to get an empty basket this leprous wretch placed a second basket of fruit in his car and drove away without paying.

"He deserves to have seven-year itch, eczema, body boils, neck carbuncles, sciatica, neuralgia of the facial nerves, perpetual toothache, nightmare every night, burning dyspepsia and St. Vitus dane."

To all of which we subscribe with a fervent amen, only wishing that these various forms of punishment might be inflicted by the court-martial that tries the Kaiser.

Caught On to Sailors' Trick.

If a man's hat blew overboard while leaving port many British skippers would turn back and delay sailing until the next day. It was an omen that one of the crew would be lost over the side during the trip. This sign, however, became discredited, as wily deckhands, desirous of another day ashore with their wives and families, contracted the habit of going aloft and assisting the wind to foretell disaster.

"Gusher's" Day Never Long.

There is a certain class of people with whom the gushing person will get a hearing, but this is merely because that particular class enjoys flattery, an art in which the gusher is particularly skilful. But, taken on the whole, human nature appreciates frankness and sincerity. And these two qualities give to the eye an expression which is not to be overlooked in the seeker after beauty.

"Commonwealth and Coffee."

The introduction of coffee into England dates from the period of the Cromwellian Protectorate; according to a Restoration pamphleteer. "Coffee and Commonwealth came in together." Jacobs, a Jew, opened a coffee house at Oxford in 1650, and two years later the first one was established in London by Pasqua Rosee, the Armenian servant of a city merchant.

There was a fire at Alexander's premises in that part of London known as Pottersburg, and Alexander blamed low water pressure for his loss.

But Mr. Justice Rose holds that Pottersburg has no higher claim than any other section of the city. When Pottersburg was annexed the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board directed that water mains were laid. Presumably this was done.

BISHOP FALLON PRAISES S. A.

SAYS IT DID MUCH GOOD WORK FOR CANADIAN TROOPS.

That there is no race or creed in the appeal of the Salvation Army for one million dollars to carry on its after-the-war work among the returned soldiers and to continue its campaign in France and Germany until the last Canadian soldier is home, is evidenced by the hearty endorsement that comes to the Headquarters of the Army from Rev. N. F. Fallon, Roman Catholic Bishop of London, Ont., Bishop Fallon spent some months with the troops at the front, and is in a position to know what is being done there by the many social organizations. He writes to Lieut.-Colonel Rawling, 394 Clarence Street, London, Ontario, as follows:—

"I am in receipt of your letter of the 27th instant, and I beg leave to tender you my sincere thanks with the good wishes it contains. I heard and saw much of the good work done by the Salvation Army for the social welfare of the Canadian troops fighting in France and Flanders. Every organization which contributes to this cause has my deepest sympathy, and I am glad to know that your society is doing valuable and effective service."

City May Go Back To Ward System

ST. THOMAS COMPLAINS OF ONE-SIDED REPRESENTATION AT PRESENT.

(St. Thomas Times-Journal)

There is a strong possibility that a determined effort may be made this year by a number of ratepayers of the city to have the old ward system of electing a Council revived before the next municipal election. Some dissatisfaction is heard concerning the present general system which was adopted in 1899, electors living in the north-eastern sections of the city being the principal objectors, pointing out that they are practically without representation at the board this year, while the south-eastern portions of the city has nearly all the members. Another ratepayer points out that under the old ward system there was not the chance, that there is under the present system of parties and unions getting three candidates elected over others and thus obtaining a majority in the Council. No special legislation would be required, The Times-Journal, is informed, to revert to the old ward system, although it has been suggested if that plan were to be adopted some new revision of the wards should be made either according to the assessed property or the population.

Toronto, it has been pointed out by the ward system advocates had never adopted any other plan and London, which tried out the general system, had reverted to the ward system again.

HAVE DARK HAIR AND LOOK YOUNG

Nobody Can Tell When You Darken Gray, Faded Hair With Sage Tea

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and attractive with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, all ready to use, for about 50 cents. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and beautiful. This preparation is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

Soldiers Home — THE SALVATION ARMY — Coming Campaign

War Work and After-War Work

SALVATION ARMY

"FIRST TO SERVE—LAST TO APPEAL."

If one institution in the Empire was prepared for war, it was the Salvation Army. For fifty-three years it has been relieving distress wherever and whenever the need arose.

The Salvation Army has always been organized on a military basis—inured to hardship, sacrifice and service. It is always in action, day and night.

When the War came, intensifying human suffering and the need for bodily and spiritual help in a thousand ways, the Salvation Army was ready.

The twelfth day of the war found the Salvation Army at work behind the lines in Belgium. It has maintained 197 huts, 96 hostels and 40 rest rooms; 1,200 uniformed workers and 45 ambulances have been in service at the front—in addition to taking care of the needs of soldiers' families here at home, assisting the widows and orphans, and relieving distress arising from the absence of the soldier head of the family.

Hostilities have ceased, leaving vast and complex problems, and these problems arise notwithstanding all the Repatriation work the Government has undertaken, in addition to the granting of pensions. Above and beyond what other agencies are accomplishing, there are thousands of cases of urgent human need among soldiers' families that the Salvation Army is trained and equipped to meet—provided the financial help is forthcoming. Hence—

The Salvation Army Million Dollar Fund

JANUARY 19th to 25th

While it could do so, the Salvation Army has carried on without any general appeal. Now the crisis has arisen, because our three hundred thousand soldier boys are returning. The budget for essential work during the coming year has been prepared. A million dollars must be raised to continue the after-the-war activities, which include:

Hostels for Soldiers

Salvation Army hostels are vitally necessary for the protection and comfort of the soldier at the many stopping places between France and his home here in Canada. These hostels—or military hotels—provide good food, clean beds, wholesome entertainment at a price the soldier can afford to pay. In addition to hostels already in operation, many more are needed near stations and landing places, from Paris, through London, Halifax, St. John, right through Canada to Vancouver. If the boys do not have the hostels, WHERE would they go?

Care of the Wives, Widows, Dependents and Orphans of Soldiers

Scores, and hundreds, of cases could be cited where soldiers overseas have been comforted by the assurance that the Salvation Army had stepped in to relieve their families from dire need. For instance, a mother with six children is discovered—no fuel, weather freezing, food and funds exhausted by sickness and other troubles. They are taken to the Salvation Army Emergency Receiving Home for a few days until their home is made habitable once more. Widow of soldier sends for help; Salvation Army workers cope with immediate necessity—send mother to Maternity Home, three children to Emergency Home. Winter and 300,000 boys returning increase the demands on the Salvation Army, whose personal help alone is of avail.

Keeping the Family Unit Intact—Home Visitation

The women of the Salvation Army on their visiting rounds accomplish the apparently impossible. Is the discharged soldier out of a job? They find him one. Is the wife sick, the home-work piling up—are the children neglected? They nurse the wife, mother the children, wash and scrub. Is there need for food, fuel, clothes or medicine? They are supplied. Influence is brought to bear to guide the older children. Whatever can be done to keep the home intact, is joyfully done in the true spirit of the Master.

When the Soldier Needs a Friend

As long as a Canadian soldier needs the comforts the Salvation Army can offer, he will find them available. The Salvation Army Lassie will be there with the hot coffee, the pies, chocolate, magazines, writing materials, and always the spiritual comfort for which the boys feel the need over there. The Salvation Army Lassies have heard and carried out the last wishes of many a man who has made the supreme sacrifice. Until the last homeward-bound soldier is happily re-established in civil life, will you not help the Salvation Army to combat the discomforts and evils that beset his path?

The service of the Salvation Army, founded on sacrifice, demonstrates the true Christian spirit. It is directed to the extension of the Kingdom of Christ. For two generations the Salvation Army has stood out and out for God.

It approaches practical problems in a practical way and achieves results. It co-operates with all—overlaps none. It recognizes neither color, race, nor creed. No organization does greater work at less cost. To carry on its great work among the 300,000 returning soldiers and their families, it must have financial help. On its behalf members of the Dominion Government, business men, and returned soldiers endorse this appeal for funds.

LESSONS IN RIGHT LIVING

(By Dr. W. A. Brady.)

That which all the world admires in the fair sex is composed of equal parts of natural born pulchritude, good taste in dress and adornment and the grace and beauty derived from physical education.

A woman may have a beautiful face and display perfect taste in adorning herself, yet if she has neglected her physical education she never looks well, she is not graceful.

Not that I take particular pleasure in dragging in the corset, but it is necessary to repeat that gracefulness and the corset are at opposite poles and the woman who cultivates the one must renounce the other in the due proportion. Wearing braces or splints is not a sensible way to develop the human form.

Every woman who desires to look her best and feel her best and be her best will devote a few minutes daily to her physical education, which is self-improvement no less essential than brushing the teeth, dressing the hair or daily reading or study. And in every well regulated household this daily physical training will begin at least as early as womanhood itself begins, and nothing less than actual disabling illness will be permitted to interrupt the training for a single day, year in and year out. It doesn't matter so much if you neglect brushing the teeth or forget to bathe now and then, but you can't omit your daily physical training.

No apparatus no costume and no pseudo scientific nonsense in the shape of expensive instructions about exercising is required. The daily physical training is best taken in your own room and in the costume you wore when you were born, and preferably with a window open to admit cold fresh air to the room. It should be a regular morning and evening ceremony and nothing should be permitted to interrupt it on any morning or any evening. From ten to twenty minutes daily, divided into two seances, is the time required, and no one's time is so precious that she cannot afford to expend that much on her own welfare.

Any one not already accustomed to physical training should go slowly and be patient at first. One with neglected muscles quickly tires of becomes breathless, and any exercises taken should be carried short of the point of fatigue always. The first month is the hardest. If you have enough will power to drive yourself through the first month's training without any omissions, after that it will be no effort, but rather a pleasure to do your regular morning and evening stunts. With increasing muscle control and endurance, the natural result of physical training, you find increasing pleasure in taking exercise. It tickles your vanity to discover that you are gradually growing more efficient and at the same time improving in other respects which are obvious to your friends more than to yourself.

DR. MACGILLIVRAY IN PETERBOROUGH

RETURNED MISSIONARY PREACHED TWO INTERESTING SERMONS HERE SUNDAY.

On Sunday, Peterboro, received a visit from a representative of the Canadian Presbyterian Church in China, Dr. Donald MacGillivray, who has been thirty years at work there, first in the Province of Honan, afterwards in literary work in Shanghai.

In the morning he preached in St. Andrew's Church, in the evening in St. Pauls Church, and in the afternoon he addressed successively the Sunday Schools of St. Andrew's and Knox Church. He illustrated his sermons, which were on China, as a Mission Field, by interesting photographs, examples of British war propaganda in China, and the flag of the new Republic. The burden of his address was that the psychological moment for a forward movement had come. China was open and ripe. Other less desirable agencies such as beer, cigarettes, patent medicines, etc., were pressing in, and it was up to the people of Canada to send China the moral and spiritual help which would alone help her to solve the many problems of a freshly awakened people.

Political panaceas could only have surface effects. Real reforms proceed only from love to God and man which no opposition or ridicule can cool. China is a book-loing land and Dr. MacGillivray's special work is publicity for everything true and good. Through the press, secular and missionary, he has exerted a powerful influence on the leaders of China.

Dr. Mac Gillvray proceeds from Peterboro to Ottawa on Tuesday to Ottawa on Tuesday to address a meeting there. This is his first visit to Peterboro since he became a missionary. During his stay he was the guest of the Rev. Robert Pogue of St. Paul's Church.

GERMAN SUBS IN BRITISH PORTS

ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-TWO ALREADY SURRENDERED——MORE TO COME.

London, Jan. 6.—The allies destroyed or captured 202 German submarines during the war. In addition to these, 15 German submarines were destroyed by the Germans themselves—ten in the Adriatic and four off Flanders. Seven others were interned in neutral countries.

The surrender of German submarines is not yet complete; the number already brought into British ports is 122. There are at least 58 still to be surrendered. The Germans are still busily engaged in building submarines. The allies are making no objection to this for all these boats will be at the disposal of the allies when completed.

German surface warships actually brought into British ports were led by one battleship than stipulated in the armistice terms. The reason for this is that neither the Saxon nor the Mackensen has been completed in the German yards. The German battleship Baden is to be handed over instead. She will leave German waters for Scapa Flow within a week.

SOLDIERS ON NORTHLAND KICKED AT EVERY MEAL

Witnesses Say That Food Was not Sufficient and Was of Poor Quality—Ventilators Bad and Water Supply not Fit to Use

Ottawa, Jan. 6.—"I never heard so much kicking in my life," was the way in which Company Q.M.S. Flood, of Toronto, summed up conditions on the Northland, when the investigation was resumed before Judge Hodgins. During the first few days a number of the men were sick, and unable to take food. As rations were drawn for all, there were then no complaints about insufficiency. But later there were complaints at every meal. Ventilation in the men's section was also bad.

The Northland was due to sail for England at 10 a.m. Saturday. She is being held, however, to enable her officers to give evidence at the inquiry. While the terms on which the Admiralty took over the Northland on a time charter have not been made public, it is stated that the delay will cost in the neighborhood of $8,000 a day.

Company Quartermaster Sgt. Flood, Toronto, said that for the first two or three days, the men appeared to have enough to eat. There were a number sea-sick and as rations for all were drawn, there was enough. Later, however, there were complaints by the men at every meal.

"I never heard so much kicking in my life," Sergt. Flood said.

"Did that go on to the end of the voyage?" Mr. Orde queried.

"I never noticed any improvements. There were constant complaints at every meal."

He said that at dinner the whole ration—soup, meat and pudding would be served at one.

"Did they have anything to drink?"

"Nothing to drink unless a man drank the soup."

"What do you say as to the quality of the food?"

"I would say it was as good as the army supply."

About the fourth or fifth day out the men began to complain about having no fresh water. Lieut. Brown had told witness, he said, that all th drinking water in the first class saloon for a couple of days, from the same reason, I believe," the witness said.

For the first two days the men were not allowed on the promenade deck. Then they were permitted to use one side of this deck. The other side was reserved for officers and passengers—about 100 in all. Guards were put on to see that no one else used the officers' and passengers' side.

In reply to Judge Hodgins, Sergt. Flood said the men complained about one side of the deck being reserved to officers and passengers. He understood complaints had been made to the Conducting Officer.

"With what results?" Judge Hodgins asked.

"There was no change."

Ventilation was bad. There was a lack of fresh air. The men complained, port holes were not opened till they were in Halifax harbor.

Referring to Christmas Day Sergt. Flood said there was bitter disappointment among the men at not being able to go ashore.

Mennonites Would Express Gratitude

Members of the Mennonite sect in Ontario for some months past have been raising a fund to be given to the Dominion government to be devoted to a memorial for war sufferers. Between $60,000 and $70,000 has already been contributed by the members of this faith from different parts of the province, and the amount is still growing. A meeting is to be held in Kitchener in a few days of the special committee which has the collection in charge, when a deputation will be named to go to Ottawa and present the money to the government.

The Mennonites, being conscientious objectors to war, and having certain treaty rights, were largely relieved from combative service by the government. While enjoying this exemption they contributed to different patriotic funds. The money which is to be given to the Government was raised at the same time and earmarked for war memorial purposes.

RESTORE THE NATURAL SIGHT

The bachelor, whose penchant is musical comedy, the matinee Miss with a fondness for good looking leading men and the staid married folks who patronize only the outstanding "hits" of each season, will each have their inning during the engagement of "Turn to the Right" at the Grand, tomorrow, (Tuesday) night.

This play of laughs and tears which the United Producing Company Limited, are sending on tour after concurrent runs of thirteen months in New York and nine months in Chicago, appeals to all classes to a degree that has seldom been attained in the history of the theatre. It can be compared only with "The Old Homestead" and "Way Down East" for straight-to-the-heart wholesomeness; with "The Boomerang" and "The Fortune Hunter" for clean, refreshing comedy; or with "Ben-Hur" for an uplifting touch of the religious.

For the tired business man there is the "fly" comedy of the two nimble-witted crooks, Muggs and Gilly, just released from Sing Sing; for the matinee girl there is young and handsome Joe Bascom who returns to his mother's farm after seven years of wandering to claim the sweetheart of his boyhood and for those of more serious bent the Christian influence of a good mother in restoring Joe Bascom and his pals to the path of rectitude and honesty will hold a mellowing appeal.

The stage has never known a cleaner play than "Turn to the Right." In its prologue and three acts there is never a line or situation to bring uneasiness to the man who has brought his wife, sister or young daughter. Throughout its action it breathes an atmosphere of youth and happiness, blended with good old-fashioned honesty.

HYDRO WILL TAKE OVER THE RADIAL

LINE BETWEEN HAMILTON AND OAKVILLE TO RESUME OPERATIONS.

Hamilton, Jan. 6.—There is a possibility that the fight between Dundas and the Hamilton Electric Railway Company, the affairs of which have been placed in the court of the exchequer at Ottawa, will be terminated by Sir Adam Beck taking over the line as part of the proposed system of Hydro railways in his section of the province.

Ontario power minister has expressed himself as being anxious to afford relief to the municipalities suffering from a lack of transportation, and in a conference with Willoughby Ellis, a member of the local hydro board, stated that he might be willing to take over the lines providing it could be done while the company's liquidation proceedings were in the courts.

Immediate Service

"I proposed to Sir Adam that he take over the line and operate it at once, in order to have an immediate service. The question of purchase could be settled later by arbitration, but in the meantime the cars would be running. Sir Adam was very sympathetic, and stated that he would give the matter serious consideration," said Mr. Ellis.

Regarding power, Mr. Ellis declared that sufficient "juice" could be obtained to operate the line, and that more could be expected shortly. The chief difficulty to the scheme, he stated, was whether or not the line could be taken over while the court proceedings were on.

"That is one of the legal questions we have to look up but I am going to take the matter up with Sir Adam in Toronto on Tuesday, and am confident that he will act," he said. Beyond stating that the affairs of the company are now in court, the officials of the company are not giving out any information but there is not the least doubt that they would welcome with open arms any action by Sir Adam. The municipalities are also of the same mind.

PLENTY SPACE FOR SHIPPING

BRITISH MINISTER SAYS THAT RETURN OF PEACE EASED SITUATION.

London, Jan 6.—Sir Joseph McLay, Minister for Shipping, pointed out in an interview that the ending of hostilities had eased the shipping position enormously and had permitted tonnage available for bringing imports to the British Isles to be increased by something equivalent to 10,000,000 tons of goods per annum.

"Shipping losses having ceased and the output of tonnage continuing to increase," said Sir Joseph, "the position grows easier day by day. The time is not far distant when it will be possible to release tonnage from requisition on a substantial scale, and thereby create a free market in tonnage and freight.

"Already the amount of space available for commercial cargoes in the North Atlantic has been doubled, and instead of cargo competing for space, space is now competing for cargo. In spite of our heavy losses we have no reason to think that British shipping will not be fully equal to the demand likely to be made upon it.

"The great need of the moment is coal for export. On coal exports the whole of our shipping and financial positions depend. We hope that with the release of miners from the army it will not be long before ships which now have, perforce, to go in ballast, can take outward cargoes, thereby at once relieving the financial situation and reducing the cost of our imported supplies."

EX-PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT DIES

For years he had spent his summers on a Dakota ranch, and learned to know cowboys as strong, sincere men, on whom the nation could rely. From these the famous cavalry troop known as the "Rough Riders" was largely recruited. Four years' membership in the 8th Regiment of the New York State National Guard, to which he belonged and in which he was for a time a captain furnished at least a basis for his brilliant military career. But more than all else that induced him to go to the front were his devotion to the cause for which the war was fought and his love for an active life. These same reasons drew to him scores of young men of prominent families from all parts of the country, who joined all Western cavalrymen. The regiment thus formed was known as Roosevelt's Rough Riders. Though it was commanded by Colonel Wood of the regular army Roosevelt being second in command, with the rank, till promoted, of lieutenant-colonel.

For bravery in the battle of Las Guasimas Roosevelt was promoted colonel and in the three days of fighting before Santiago, and especially in the magnificent charge up San Juan Hill, he acted with conspicuous gallantry. On the return of the Rough Riders from Cuba, Roosevelt was the popular idol of the country; and despite considerable opposition from professional politicians was nominated for governor of New York on the Republican Ticket Sept. 27, 1898. He was elected by a plurality of 18,000, November 4. In the Republican National Convention held in Philadelphia in the summer of 1900 Roosevelt was enthusiastically nominated for Vice-President on the Republican Ticket headed by William McKinley. He was elected Nov. 4, and was formally installed March 4, 1901. On the death of President McKinley in Buffalo, N.Y., Sept. 14, 1901, Roosevelt took the oath of office as his successor, and became the 26th President of the United States. In 1904 he was elected President by a popular plurality of 2,545,515 votes and an electoral majority of 196 over Judge Alton B. Parker, the Democratic candidate. In this term he gave the country a vigorous administration and developed a characteristic line of policies having in view the betterment of the national life. Immediately after the close of his term he withdrew from public life, joined the editorial staff of "The Outlook," and spent fifteen months in travelling and hunting in Africa and in visiting the principal capitals of Europe. While abroad he acted as the special ambassador of the United States at the funeral of King Edward VII.

Early in 1912 he announced he would not be a candidate for the presidential nomination in that year, but later developed much opposition to the Taft administration and sought nomination. When the Republican National Convention met in Chicago in June he declared that he had been defrauded out of many votes by the decisions of the National Committee on contests by various sets of delegates, and instructed his supporters to take no part in the proceedings. Of the total ballots for the nomination on June 22, President Taft received 561 and Roosevelt 107, by delegates who disregarded his request. The Roosevelt following then organized the Progressive Party, and, in convention in Chicago on Aug. 7 following, nominated their leader for president with Gov. Hiram W. Johnson, of California, for Vice-President. After his nomination he made a vigorous campaign throughout the country until Oct. 14, when he was shot in the breast by an insane man in Milwaukee. He was able however, to make a speech in New York, on Oct. 30 followin. In the election he was defeated by Gov. Woodrow Wilson.

Ever since the breaking out of the war ex-President Roosevelt, has been a friend of the cause of the Allies and urged his fellow countrymen to resent the insults and outrages which the Germans were heaping upon the American nation. He offered to recruit a regiment and command it overseas but the war department turned down the request. All of his four sons who were of military age enlisted and one of them fell in battle.

BREAD USED TO HOLD ALCOHOL

NEW SCHEME FOR SMUGGLING HAS BEEN INVENTED IN HAMILTON.

Hamilton, Jan. 6.—Many methods have been taken to conceal liquor while importing it into the city, but it remained for Leo Lyniuk to present an entirely new one on Saturday at Police Court. He appeared there on an O. T. A. charge, and Constable Godard said he found him at the corner of Queen and Barton streets, lugging a large valise. The gurgling sound that emanated from it attracted his attention, and he seized the valise. It contained four large loaves of bread. Like a modern Moses he smote the end of one of the loaves, and forth gushed living streams of alcohol. Each loaf in its turn yielded a can of alcohol containing a gallon of the spirit. Hence Mr. Lyniuk's appearance before the court. He was fined $500 or three months in jail, and for lack of money took the time.

Leo stated that he got the "bread" from Trafin Urkin. Urkin was in court, and when called answered with "How do you do?" As he stepped forward a bottle of liquor fell down his trouser leg in court. He was allowed to go, as he stated that he gave Leo but one drink.

Depression Hard On Former Kaiser

Amerongen, Holland, Jan. 6.—Even the wonderful springlike weather of the new year did not bring the former German Emperor outside of Amerongen Castle, although his condition is improving daily. The principal cause of his indisposition appears to be mental depression, induced by the gradual realization of the full extent of his downfall. Recent reports from Germany are said to have accentuated this feeling.

Lack of open-air exercise and continual brooding have had such telling effect on Herr Hohenzollern's appearance that he scarcely is recognizable to those who saw him when he first came to Amerongen. His wife, who is with him almost constantly, displays much more buoyant spirits, and makes every effort to cheer him.

There is no sign of the immediate removal of the former Emperor, although many reports are current to that effect.

Board of Education

To the Electors:

I tender my hearty thanks to my nominators and supporters in the recent elections, and look forward with pleasure to the next contest, when I hope to be in the field again, with augmented forces.

I take this opportunity of expressing my appreciation of the friendly rivalry that existed between my competitors and myself, and, in bowing to the decision of the Public Vote, plead for better treatment at their hands next time. I play a quiet game but I "play to win" and, in winning, "plan to work," on this matter of the education and development of our children and young people. The coming generation must not look back on us with reproach in this respect.

Having entered the field in the cause of Education, I do not feel that defeat at the polls releases me entirely, and any service I render to the members of the board, individually or collectively, or to any student who may desire to consult me, will be gladly given, within the measure of my leisure and capabilities.

In conclusion I would ask my fellow citizens to regard their Franchise as a valuable heritage, handed down to us by hardy pioneers in the cause of human liberty, and exercise it accordingly, voluntarily, individually and independently, as a human unit carrying out a public duty. The dissected value to the public weal, of a high percentage collective vote cannot be overestimated, and, compared with which, the success or failure of any candidate in the returns, is a passing detail.

Yours very truly,

W. H. PRETTY.

Peterboro, Ont., Jan. 4, 1919.

IS COMING OVER TO SEE YACHT

SIR THOMAS LIPTON WILL PAY VISIT TO SHAMROCK NEXT MONTH.

London, Jan. 6.—Sir Thomas Lipton has accepted the New York Yacht Club's suggestion that his latest challeneg for the America's Cup should call for a series of races being sailed in 1920 and not this year.

He will visit New York in the near future sailing from England late this month or early in February, to inspect his Shamrock IV. and decide for himself whether she is in condition to serve as a challenger or whether it will be necessary for him to build a new yacht.

The Shamrock IV. has been hauled out at a yard in South Brooklyn ever since she arrived on this side, in August 1914, just after the world war began. The races for the cup were declared off that year on account of the war.

Sir Thomas Lipton issued a new challenge on December 12 for a series of races to be sailed this year, but the New York Yacht Club felt that the time was "inappropriate" with peace not actually declared but in reply said it would be glad to accept a challenge for the famous

British Writers Asking Who Got All the Profits During the Past Four Years

WHO is getting richer? is the proposition for a levy to pay the war debt is constantly heard with more frequency this question is steadily becoming more acute. Moreover, regardless of a levy on capital it is of extreme interest in connection with the tax problem. The Statesman of London, has made a study of the question as it concerns Great Britain, where conditions closely parallel those in this country, and the conclusion reached is this:

"Taking all things together, the proportionate distribution of the total net income between the wage-earning class, on the one hand, and all the other sections on the other, remains just about what it was six years ago. It must, of course, be remembered that whilst earnings have perhaps doubled, they go no further in the means of life than did those of 1913. Much the same is true of the distribution between the rewards of personal service and what the Inland Revenue calls unearned income. The proportions do not seem to have appreciably changed. On the other hand, if we ignore these distinctions and consider the distribution as between those families under £1,000 a year and those over that figure, it is our considered opinion, after surveying the whole position, it cannot be put any higher—that the class in excess of £1,000 a year per family has considerably increased in proportion to the whole community; and that the aggregate income of this class, taken as a whole, is now enormously larger than it was before the war—so much larger, in fact, as to leave its net receipts, after paying away possibly nearly half the total in income tax, super-tax and excess profits duty, possibly no less than they were before the war. Taking the families of £1,000 a year and upwards as a whole, the full amount of the unprecedented direct taxation has been met by the increase in gross income. The net incomes do not go so far as they did; and in the sense of disappointed expectation the mere £1,000 a year family suffers more than that of the artisan."

However, before accepting this conclusion as settling the whole matter, there are some important modifying circumstances to be considered. For example:

"We know, not by any means exactly, but within a relatively small margin of error, what was the aggregate capital value at market prices of the privately-owned wealth in the United Kingdom prior to the war. The calculations of various statisticians, based on the available official statistics, as summarized, for instance, in Dr. Stamp's very authoritative 'British Incomes and Property,' and latterly in Mr. Pethick Lawrence's 'Levy on Capital'—approximate in placing this total at somewhere about £12,500,000,000. About 88 per cent. of this was owned by 12 per cent. of the population (each family being 'worth' over £1,000); whilst 12 per cent. of the total was shared among 88 per cent. of the population, their average family fortune (including furniture and personal effects and all savings) being less than £40. We may go further and say that 2 per cent. of the nation owned twice as much wealth as all the remaining 98 per cent."

And the New Statesman remarks: "But when Mr. Bonar Law or another comes to consider how to adjust on suitable shoulders the burden of the state debt, he will not forget the fact that the private fortunes of the 12 per cent. of the community have, in the aggregate, been increased in value during the war by £2,500,000,000 — perhaps this will be the limit of the capital levy—and that the total drawn as unearned income may be found to have increased by some £500,000,000 a year."

"Measured in capital wealth, and subject to many individual exceptions, the rich will have become much richer and the poor hardly less poor in the course of the last five years.

"It looks as if, out of a total net product nearly twice the value of that of 1913-14, the wage-earning class is receiving in earnings possibly two-fifths, which does not differ much from the estimated pre-war proportion. Meanwhile, it looks as if the total drawn in rent and interest had gone up from about £600,000,000 to nearly twice that figure. A cautious private banker has just put the net increase in what he calls 'rents,' excluding all the profits of business men, at £431,000,000. The aggregate increase in the earnings of 'business men'—before deducting income tax, super-tax and excess profits tax—is admittedly enormous, conservatively put at an aggregate threefold increase over the corresponding figure of five years ago."

Work Among Blind Soldiers

BRAVER than a flourish of trumpets are the moving stories that come at intervals from St. Dunstan's Hostel for Blinded Soldiers and Sailors. They tell of the indomitable spirit and cheerfulness of the British soldiers who have lost their eyesight in action, their determination to make the best of things, their refusal to be pitied. They are blind, but they are men and many of them are almost gay and make little of an affliction that would seem to most of us the most terrible that a man should be called upon to endure. It is amazing to think that so far there have been only about 600 British soldiers and sailors blinded in the war. So far more than 200 of them have passed through St. Dunstan's, and 300 are still there. The others are to follow. It is hoped that all of these men will become self-supporting, and by none so earnestly as by the men themselves. They will be liberally pensioned, of course. Some of them have private means, but all are being taught an occupation.

This is being done not for the purpose of relieving the public of the expense of supporting these victims of war. The public does not want to be relieved of the privilege of dealing generously with these men. They are being taught occupations in order that they may themselves feel that they are not to pass the remainder of their lives in soul-destroying idleness, because they are happiest when busiest. They have not time to brood over their afflictions. Indeed, this is one of the points that the managers of St. Dunstan's keep always in mind. As soon as the blinded soldier is able to be moved from his hospital he is taken at once to St. Dunstan's, for the prompt comradeship with other men who have been blinded does not give the last comer time to slip into the slough of despondency which usually engulfs the man who has lost the precious gift of sight. His fighting spirit is roused again as he hears how others in like plight have conquered their affliction. He begins to forget and to think hopefully of the future.

About the first thing the inmate of St. Dunstan's is taught is to operate a typewriter, not necessarily as a means of livelihood, but in order that he may keep in touch with his friends by correspondence, it having been found that the handwriting of the blind rapidly deteriorates. He is also taught to read, and automatically becomes a life-member of the National Library for the Blind. Instruction is given in massage, shorthand, telephone operating, boot repairing, mat making, basket making, joinery, poultry farming and market gardening. It has been found that in all these occupations the blind man can do just as well as the man who has his sight. As far as joinery is concerned, the men are not taught to be cabinet makers, of course, but merely how to make such articles as picture frames, tea trays, corner cupboards and the like, things that are readily saleable. The telephone operators could not work on a switchboard system which uses flash signals, but on those where drop shutters are installed. In a short time the delicate sense of hearing enables the blind man to tell just which of the shutters has fallen.

The blind masseur is said to be better than the operator whose sight is normal, this being due probably to his greater sensitiveness of touch. There are many blind soldiers now plying this trade in military hospitals, and they are said to be the very best in England. Teaching poultry farming to the blind is a new departure, and has been first attempted on a large scale since the beginning of the war. There was one well known blind poultry expert in England, and it may have been his conspicuous success that suggested the business as one in which the blind might find a pleasant and profitable occupation. In a short time a blind man learns to distinguish by touch all varieties of fowl, to manage incubators, to prepare and truss birds for the table, and generally to conduct a poultry farm. The cobblers are speedily trained to repair shoes, and those who learn this trade are also taught mat making.

At St. Dunstan's, the magnificent house and estate which was put at the service of the blind soldiers by Mr. Otto Kahn, the American financier, the men are taught not only how to earn a living, but how to amuse themselves. There are frequent concerts (it is said that every inmate plays some musical instrument, even if it is only a mouth organ), and even dances. Each patient has an individual teacher, and most of these teachers are unpaid volunteers, who are doing their bit by helping the blind. The men row, swim, compete in walking and running races, and have tugs-of-war. The whole expense of training and settling the men of St. Dunstan's has been defrayed by the National Relief Fund, and the upkeep expenses are borne by the National Institute for the Blind. There are also many private subscriptions, and more from this source will be required when the work of devising what is called a scheme for after-care for the men settled at their various occupations is put in operation.

A Likely Story.

At Bembridge, Isle of Wight, twenty-five years ago, Mrs. Susan Wright in throwing out her washing water also accidentally threw away her wedding ring, which was vainly searched for. Her husband has just recovered the pledge of love through which the roots of a potato plant had grown. The story must be true for the recording correspondent notes that both Mr. and Mrs. Wright "teach in the Sunday School."

WHY DO MEN WEAR HATS?

Really, When You Come to Think of It, They Are of Little Use and Not Ornamental.

Men themselves do not know why they wear hats. Hats aren't ornamental. They do not keep off the rain. A man's hat is a legacy of tradition, brutalized in its descent from the age of adornment. Straw hats are the least awful.

The derby, the iron lid of common phrasedology, is a tragedy, and the silk hat is useful only to lend dignity to men who otherwise might be undignified. This dignity is traditional rather than real. Bridegrooms, undertakers and members of congress need all the dignity they can command. So they keep the silk hat handy.

Spring, which brings the straw hat, is welcomed by men, since it removes the hideous necessity of wearing other sorts of hats. The straw hat rouses a dim memory in the blood of the days of garlands. It may be worn with a bright band. On the whole, it makes life a little easier for those who haven't the courage to go without hats at all.

Gives Simplified Premium.

"John, the Oysterman" (everyone who sells bivalves here is known as John), has hit upon a unique scheme to make his customers eat oysters out of season. To each customer who comes into his place he hands them an envelope, pay size, with an enclosure. Printed on the envelope is the following: "Simplified Coat Hanger. The most universally used coat hanger in the world. Made of the finest drawn steel wire by automatic machinery. Easy to attach wherever and whenever needed. Warranted for five years with ordinary usage." And when one opens the envelope they naturally expect to find something new to hang a coat thereon. They are not disappointed, but it is a surprise. Wrapped in a small piece of paper is "the simplified coat hanger." It is nothing more or less than a new one-inch wire nail.

Lard Substitute From Fish Oil.

By treating fish oil with hydrogen a chemist has produced an oil, and also a solid substance very much resembling lard, which is entirely tasteless and when used in pastry or bread produces most satisfactory results, according to a demonstrator employed by the bureau of fisheries. The new product is to be placed on the market and it is the hope of the food administration that it will prove acceptable. Special value attaches to any process which, like the one referred to, makes available a fat obtained from sources heretofore unutilized.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Gray Copper.

The work of a Swiss investigator suggests that absolutely pure copper may have a light-gray color like that of most other metals, since it is found that copper which has been ten times distilled in vacuo has only a pale rose color, while the yellow color of gold becomes much lighter under similar treatment.

Bicycle to Travel on Water.

A unique device produced by a Jersey City inventor is a water bicycle. At first sight the machine looks like a bicycle, with sleigh runners instead of wheels; but it carries, also, two large air tanks to support both machine and rider. It is said to be nonsinkable.

Teaching Canaries to Sing Tune.

Canaries may be taught to sing a tune, such as, "A Life on the Ocean Wave," by repeatedly singing to them in falsetto, or even to speak a few words. Once in a while (though rarely) a female canary turns out a fine singer.

'Tis just immense

I'm getting sense.

Yes, It'll Be There.

Mrs. Fusserly (testily)—I shall not go to that butcher shop again. Why, the impudent thing gave me a pain.

Fusserly—Don't be too sure, my dear; he's probably included it in his bill.

Polishing Too Highly.

"When did you study elocution?"

"Elocution!" echoed Senator Sorghum. "I never studied it."

"Would it not have helped your oratorical style?"

Optimistic Thought.

Nature of Fatigue.

Fatigue is the presence in the blood of poisonous by-products of combustion. While we are awake the lungs accumulate faster than the system can remove them. When we are asleep, when the life combustion is slowed down, the system removes it faster than they accumulate. It is as though ashes accumulate in a grate at such a rate that the fire has to be put out every so often to make chance to remove them.

WAS 35 YEARS OLD LAST SATURDAY

INTENATIONAL LEAGUE IN ITS LIFETIME HAS WEATHERED MANY STORMS.

The Internation League, which successfully weathered the storm that put so many of its smaller brothers on the rocks celebrated its 35th birthday Saturday.

This organization was launched as the Eastern Association at a meeting held in Philadelphia on January 4 1884. It retained that name for three seasons, but in 1887 the name was changed to International Association. In 1891 the old name was restored, but in the following year was once more changed, this time to Eastern League. It retained that title until 1912, when it became the International League.

The circuit has had many vicissitudes in its long history, and last year faced one of the most critical situations in its career, as did so man other minor leagues which later succumbed under the treas of the war. The International was going along swimmingly until the Feds broke in and spilled the beans a few years ago, and since that time the going for the circuit has been rocky. With the rejuvenation of the national pastime about to take place, however, it is likely that the league will regain its full strength.

Trenton won the first flag of the league, in 1884. The New Jersey capital has long since vanished from the league's map, and dozen of other cities have since entered the ranks and have dropped out again. Detroit had an International League club in the early days and captured the bunting in 1889, and Philadelphia had a club in the circuit in 1892.

EARL SMITH GOES TO THE GIANTS

MANAGER McGRAW DENIES THAT HIS TEAM HAS BEEN SOLD.

New York, Jan. 6.—Earl Smith, the Rochester catcher, who was in big demand last season in the major leagues, has been purchased by the Giants. Smith was not only a good catcher, but was a sensational batsman last year with Rochester. He had a batting average of .358.

For the catcher the New York club gave Joe Wilhoit and Bill Kelly, outfielders; Waite Hoyt and Jim Ogden, pitchers; Firstbaseman Joe Rodriguez and a cash consideration. Counting the market value of the players, together with the cash, it is estimated that the new catcher cost the Giants about $12,000.

Will Understudy Veterans.

Manager MGraw has been dickering for Smith for some time. He has has not fully recovered from an injury which kept him out of the game Bill Rariden and Lew McCarty, who much of the time. Smith should make a valuable addition to the backstop department.

The Giants have also released two recruits, Pitt, an outfielder, and O'Neill, a catcher, to the Rochester club on optional agreements ,so they can be recalled at the end of the season.

Manager McGraw said that the Giants had not yet decided on a training camp, and nothing would be done about the plans for the coming season until after the joint meeting of the two major leagues here on January 16.

Giants' Sale Denied.

Manager McGraw, President Hempstead and Secretary John B. Foster were all of one mind today on the numerous rumors concerning the sale of the club. They all said that the club had not been sold and that as far as they know, no sale was contemplated.

BRINGING UP FATHER By George McManu

WALTER JOHNSON IS WORTH ALL MEN ON RED SOX TEAM

Griffith Denied That Famous Pitcher Is to Be Traded for Jack Barry and a Sack of Cash.

The Walter Johnson trade bubble, blown annually to enliven the winter league, has been punctured again, and by no less an authority than Clark Griffith himself.

Griff is all "het up" over the story that the great Kansan was soon to be traded to the Red Sox for Jack Barry and a sack of cash

Griff landed in New York the other day, met H. H. Frazee, owner of the Red Sox, and thereafter was as busy as a doughboy ducking bullets from a machine gun denying the yarn and explaining the real purpose of his trips The fact he did come to talk with Harry H. Frazee, owner of the Red Sox, made explanations difficult.

Walter Johnson had nothing whatever to do with the conference between the Boston and Washington magnates. The greatest pitcher in baseball will remain with the Senators for another season at least. That much is certain, for Griff said he wouldn't part with Johnson for the whole Boston outfit.

Griffith, however, is urgently in need of a couple of infielders with whom to bolster his club, and it was in the hope of acquiring either Harold Janvrin or Mike McNally from the world champions that he conferred with Frazee.

Griff's View.

"The trading of Walter Johnson is an annual pastime," Griff declared. "Johnson is still the greatest pitcher in baseball, his speed is just as great as ever and he is going to remain with the Senators as long as I stay with the club. I wouldn't give him to Frazee if he turned over his entire team to me. And I mean it.

"So far as the Senators are concerned I think we will have a mighty good chance to finish among the first three next season. I'm losing no time in assembling the team. I came here to talk with Frazee about getting one or two of his spare infielders, also to meet Johnny Lavan, who is serving as chief surgeon aboard the U.S.S. Mississippi, now at anchor in the North river.

"Lavan will doubtless return to the Washington team next season. He is in perfect health, for the life on the bounding main appears to agree with him. Johnny said he'd not be able to give me a definite answer about playing next season until January 15, but that's what all the boys are saying. When signing time comes round I think you'll find them all in line."

Like al other major league club owners and managers, Griffith condemns the attitude of Ty Cobb in regard to his player status. Cobb's claim that he is a free agent and therefore in a position to consider offers from any club in organized baseball has developed a storm of disapproval and his case will be one of the most important before the joint conclave of the major league club owners in this city on January 16.

Organized baseball does not intend to yield to Cobb. Should it permit the famous Georgian to have his way, other players who also obtained releases that summer upon the cessation of hostilities in the major leagues would have equal cause to demand with whomsoever they saw fit. And that is just what baseball wants to avoid.

WINNERS' LAST WEEK

Henderson and Thompson, Leaders in Difficult Contests.

The prize winners last week at the George street alleys were W. Henderson and A. C. Thompson in five and ten pins, respectively, each winning a 3-B pipe. Henderson's scores was 227, 235 and 177, with a total of 639; Thompson winning in five pins with a score of 581. In B class, Don Sharpe was first, D. Fulter second, and A. Frick third. Good prizes will be given this week in five and ten pins. The ten pin league will be resumed all this week.

MILLIONAIRE IN BIG AUTO RACE

CLIFFORD DURANT HAS PROMISED TO RETIRE AFTER THE EVENT.

Clifford Durant is the only millionaire race driver who has been a consistent supporter of the sport in recent years. Durant, who is the champion of the Pacific coast, has been praying for a revival of the Indianapolis 500-mile race ever since the armistice was signed. When the race was announced he did not waste time, and is the first to make entry to the Liberty sweepstakes race, which will be run on May 31, 1919.

Durant, as a man of means, ranks with the Late David Bruce-Brown and Caleb Bragg, the millionaires who raced in the first 500-mile at Indianapolis. Bragg may start this year, but at present he is an army aviator, and has not been a competitor since he was relief driver for Da Palma in 1916. It will be Durant's first start in an Indianapolis 500-mile, and he may be the only driver entered able to write a check of six ciphers.

It is not for a slice of the $500,000 purse that Durant races, but because as Pacific coast champion he wants to win the premier of all track races. In everyday life Durant is head of the Oakland factory of the Chevrolet company, and represents his father, W. C. Durant, the automobile magnate, on the coast. He will drive a chevrolet special.

Now Durant comes out and states that he will retire after coming season. It will not be his first retirement. His father does not look with favor on Cliff's speed flights. The first retirement came when the late Bob Burman, who incidentally taught Cliff all about an automobile, was killed in a race on the coast. It was at his father's request that he sold his several racing cars. In paying a last tribute to Burman, W. C. Durant thought only of his son when he wrote: "Shrapnel and shell furnish no greater danger than automobile racing, and there is but one outcome for those who persist in following it." It was said that "Pater" Durant threatened to cut the young driver off without a cent. However, it took only a few months for Cliff to convince his father that he could race in safety, and he was back again in the fall races on the coast. Now he asserts that business cares prevent his giving efficient time to racing, but the fans believe that the elder Durant has given his son a chance to win the "race of races" and then retire for all time.

Some Records In Last Year's Sport

Andrew Miller's Roamer established a new world's record of 1.34 4-5 for the classic mile at Saratoga Springs.

Charles Pores set a new world's mark of 24.36 4-5 for the five-mile run in Chicago.

Eddie Collins played in 473 straight games over a stretch of three or four years, and so set a new baseball record.

Ralph De Palma broke his own record for ten miles in an automobile and put the mark at 5.07 2-5.

Ty Cobb led the American League in batting for the eleventh time in twelve years.

Twenty-seven new swimming records were established by men and women.

Willie Hoppe set a new world's record of 25 points at three-cushion billiards.

FRIGHT AND SWIMMING.

Cramp Is Not Dangerous if Bathers Only Keep Their Heads.

The widest publicity should be given to Dr. Welzmiller's advice to the West Side Y. M. C. A. that it is fright, not cramp, which drowns many swimmers each summer. Cramp alone is innocent. This is Dr. Welzmiller's sound and useful rule:

"When seized with cramp, swim without using the crampy limb and, while swimming, alternately draw up and stretch out the limb as far as possible, thus helping nature to overcome the condition. If the cramp becomes worse turn over and float and exercise the cramped leg or arm as much as possible until the pain passes."

Scarcely a long distance swimming race is held that some competitors are not attacked by cramp. These experienced swimmers do not even stop, but go on at lessened speed while "kicking out" the local trouble. Yet every year swimmers quite capable of this easy trick become confused by the pain of a cramp, swallow a little water, remember what they have heard that "cramps and sudden death are synonymous"—and go down, literally frightened to death.

If Dr. Welzmiller's directions could become part of the mental habit and instinct of every swimmer they would enable many a promising young man seized with cramp to keep cool, and that is commonly all that is necessary to save his life.—New York World.

Possibly Hadn't Been Introduced.

Arthur owned a bulldog that he had been teaching to hunt rats, and whenever he called out the word to him he would run frantically to various places to scratch. A neighboring woman was so amused at the performance that she wanted to show the dog's tricks to her son, but to her repeated call of "rats" the dog only stood and looked at her. "Oh," said Arthur coming up at this point, "he doesn't know your rats."

What He Didn't Like About Helen.

Kenneth's little playmate, Helen, was to have a party. Only girls were to be invited, but Kenneth was unaware of this fact. He longed for an invitation and expected one up to the day of the party. But alas! the invitation didn't come. Downhearted, he said to his mother: "You know, mother, I like Helen awfully well, but I certainly don't like her ways."

Babies Burdened With Names.

It begins to look as if the same person who used to christen the Pullman sleepers has taken up his residence in this city and is now naming war babies. A glance at the vital statistics records shows that some of the girl babies are going through life burdened with Christian names that will compel the growing generation to give considerable time and study to pronounce them. All of which recalls the words of General Sherman.—New York Sun.

Is Life Insurance Safe?

How often we hear the question, "Would Life Insurance Companies stand the extra strain of a great epidemic?"

This question is now answered by experience. We have passed through the greatest war in history, and on its heels and overlapping it came the most malignant epidemic ever experienced on this Continent, one that claimed more victims in two months from the people of Canada and the United States than the war did in four and one-third years.

The fact that the surplus of every one of the old Established Companies of Canada has not only been maintained but increased, answers the above question most eloquently, and proves that Life Insurance is not only safe, but IMPREGNABLE.

Experience proves that it is as safe as a Victory Bond, and, in the event of death, infinitely better.

THE SUN LIFE OF CANADA has distributed more to compensate for the terrible wastage of the recent War and Epidemic than any other Company in Canada.

Is it not, then, a wise place in which to carry your Insurance?

Ancient Thessalonica.

British soldiers out at Salonika have little love to spare for the place. "They say out there," remarked a Welsh warrior home on leave, "that it dropped out of God's pocket." Yet 19 centuries ago it had a Christian church so important that St. Paul devoted to two of his immortal epistles.

Color of Copper.

Absolutely pure copper has a light gray color like other metals, since it is found that copper which has been ten times distilled in vacuo has only a pale rose color, while the yellow color of gold becomes much lighter under similar treatment.

Hell-Dog.

Cerberus in ancient Greek story was the sleepless dog which guarded the entrance to Hades; the lower or infernal regions in which dwelt the shades of the dead. He is usually represented with three heads, and with serpents round his neck.

Friendship is the transfiguration of service; the creation of a new motive; redeeming life from its drudgery, and sending the pulse-beat of joy into the most trivial task.—Donald Sage Mackay.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

WELCH—JONES.

A very happy event took place at St. Paul's Church, Lindsay, on Tuesday, December 24th, at 3 p.m. when Miss Edythe Isabella, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Jones, of Minden village, became the bride of Mr. Harry Welch, also of Minden.

The bride arrived from Toronto by the C.P.R. noon train and was met by the groom.

The marriage was solemnized by Rev. Canon Marsh and witnessed by Miss Marsh of Toronto and Mr. H. Marsh, son of Canon Marsh, of Trinity College, Toronto.

The groom's gift to the bride was a lovely pearl sunburst.

After spending a few days with a brother and sister in Peterborough, the newly wedded pair arrived in Minden and will make their home there.

Word has been received from Rev. W. L. H. Rowand, visiting in Minneapolis, that owing to Mrs. Rowand's health, he will not be able to leave for Peterborough for the present.

SKIRTS SHORTER; SHOES HIGHER

Chicago, Jan. 6.—Higher shoes for women for 1919, higher prices, and shorter skirts—these are the views of the National Shoe Travellers' Association as expressed in resolutions passed at the close of its seventh annual convention.

Woman's shoes of eight and one-half inches or higher, in brown, grey, beaver, black and white, were decreed by the shoe travellers, who added that "long skirts are unsightly, insanitary and prevent free action in walking or other pursuits."

BRITISH LABOR ALMOST A UNIT

FOR MEN WHO HELPED WIN THE WAR, SECRETARY SAYS.

London, Jan. 6.—"The people have spoken and the friends of Germany find themselves on the doormat," said W. A. Appleton, secretary of the General Federation of Trades Unions, in the course of a statement on the recent elections.

"Those who have had confidence in the common sense of the British workman have been justified.

"Most of the votes have been given to men who had not only done their best to win the war but had indicated their intention of making Germany pay for the war. The total votes given to the signatories of the soviet manifesto issued at Leeds—all of whom by the way have been defeated—were less than 62,000. Very few votes indeed—perhaps not, all told, more than a quarter of a million—were cast distinctively in favor of revolutionary candidates.

"The most obvious fact of the election is the affectionate regard which the Britisher has for his own country, for his own navy and for his own army, and for the achievements of these two forces.

"A labor party which takes up an attitude hostile to the forces or to the country will never secure any lease standing in Britain."

YESTERDAY WITH SALVATION ARMY

SPECIAL ADDRESSES WERE GIVEN BY OFFICERS FROM TORONTO.

A very successful series of services was held at the S. A. Temple over the week-end by Captain Spooner and Lieut. Shill. Captain Spooner is the territorial organizer of the S. A. boy scouts, and before holding this position, was identified with the Baden Powell scouts. At the coronation of King George, he was chosen to take a group of scouts to England, and has had wide experience with this movement. Lieut. Shill, of the B.E.F., has charge of a troop of boy scouts attached to one of the S. A. corps in Toronto. He went to France in the earlier part of the war and was badly wounded at Passchendaele, and has but recently returned.

At the afternoon service about one hundred and seventy-five commissions were presented to members of the local corps who hold office, either with the senior or junior side of affairs.

returned soldier who spoke at S. A. services yesterday.

Lieut. Shill then gave a vivid account of life at the front, dealing with conditions as he had found them, and the close attention of his audience devoted the interest the lecture held for them.

Altogether the services were voted among the best recently held at the Temple.

Tonight Captain Spooner will give an illustrated lecture entitled "Young Canada in the Making." This is only the second time this lecture has been given in Canada, and the slides which accompany it, are full of interest to Canadians. Come and bring your friends.

KEPT ILLICIT STILL

R. Goulet's Guilt Revealed by Fire Chief When Blaze Occurred.

Montreal, Jan. 6.—Pleading guilty to keeping an illicit still, R. Goulet of 1846 Clarke street was sentenced to a fine of $500 and costs or three months by Judge Lanctot on Friday afternoon. The still was discovered on Friday by District Fire Chief Hooper of the fire brigade, who responded to a call with his men for a small blaze which started in the cellar of the house. Chief Hooper on entering the cellar found several galvanised iron tanks, seven feet high, each containing about 75 gallons of spirits in process of fermentation. The police were called, and the inland revenue men also made a trip to the premises. Goulet was arrested and the liquor and apparatus were seized. The house is owned by M. Corbeil, 1862 Clarke street, who told Chief Hooper that Goulet had been in the house since May 1. He was not aware that there was an illicit still in the house.

CORONER'S JURY RECOMMENDS SALE OF POISON BE RESTRICTED

Find That Omer Bourgon Came to Death by Drinking Columbian Spirits—No One Apparently to Blame but the Victim and his Companions.

We find that Omer Bourgon came to his death on December 30th, from drinking Columbian spirits as a beverage."

A rider was attached to the verdict recommending that there should be some restrictions placed on the sale of wood alcohol, Columbian and Methylated Spirits.

This was the finding of the Jury, at the inquest held by Coroner Greer last night.

Last night in the police court chamber the adjourned inquest into the death of Omer Bourgon, who died in St. Joseph's Hospital on Monday, December 30, 1918, was resumed, Coroner Dr. Greer presiding and Crown Attorney Hatton conducting the examination of witnesses.

Mrs. Laura Bourgon, widow of the late Omer Bourgon, was the first witness called. The story as brought out by the questions of the examining lawyer was to the effect that her late husband had been visited on the Saturday night previous to the day of his death by two men one of whom was John Hetherington and the other was Emmet Faux.

Faux stated upon entering the house that he had brought him his bottle, whereupon Bourgon took the concoction which was in a ginger wine bottle and tried it giving a taste to his wife as well. The deceased complained that it was not strong enough and accused Faux of having spoiled it. Faux then left the house in an automobile and returned 15 minutes later with another bottle which he handed over to Bourgon and which the witness claimed cost the husband $4.00, although Faux in his evidence later denied this, saying that he had only charged $3.00.

Mrs. Bourgon stated that she went upstairs about eight o'clock—shortly after the arrival of Hetherington—to put her children to bed. She then retired herself but thought that her husband's guests left the house about eleven o'clock.

When the deceased had retired he seemed in good health and did not complain of sickness until the next day, Sunday, when he ate nothing and towards evening was bothered with vomiting. In the night and the early hours of Monday morning he became much worse and about four o'clock lapsed into unconsciousness and was removed to the hospital about 10.30 the same morning. He died soon after.

John Hetherington's Story

John Hetherington, Bourgon's companion in the fatal drinking bout of December 28th was next examined. He stated that Faux had told him earlier in the day that he would have a bottle of liquor at his home that night and invited him over.

He accept the invitation and arrived at Bourgon's about eight o'clock where he found only the family. The deceased told him that he had obtained the liquor from Faux after which he produced the bottle and each had four drinks out of it which half emptied it. The bottle which had been identified earlier in the proceedings by Mrs. Bourgon as the one which her husband had received from Faux was again produced and recognized by Hetherington.

Asked to describe the liquor in the bottle Hetherington asserted that it was by no means pleasing to the taste, and in fact had a tendency to nauseate and produce strangulation. He did not like it and Bourgon diluted it with water to a slight degree which seemed to make very litt difference.

Hetherington stated that he did not feel well on Sunday. He was drowsy and sleepy. That evening he went to see Bourgon but the bottle was not produced. Hetherington stated that while he had taken larger drinks than Bourgon and had had them just as often he found his companion of the night before in much worse condition on Sunday night than he was.

Dr. Wood's Testimony

Dr. Wood was next called to the stand and told of how he had been called to the home of deceased at a quarter to eight on Monday morning and had promised to call at nine. About eight fifteen he received another message stating that the case was an emergency one and to come at once. This he did, arriving at the house at eight-thirty where he found the late Omer Bourgon in bed with no sign of life save that afforded by his labored breathing. The patient was unconscious, pulseless, and the heart action could not be detected with the aid of the stethescope.

Dr. Wood stated that he had him removed to the hospital after administering a hypodermic and that he took the bottle which was shown him by the wife and smelt it. He concluded that the contents was methylated spirits.

Trouble Is Between Ebert's Government and the Spartacus Party Who Are Struggling to Secure Control—Decisive Battle Between Two Factions Is Imminent—Virtual War Between Russia and Germany.

Copenhagen, Jan. 7.—Berlin is in a state of complete anarchy and civil war has begun there according to the Munich correspondent of The Politiken. His information, he says, is based on telephonic messages from the German capital. All banks are barricated and a great number of public buildings are in the hands of the spartacan or extreme radical group. Thousands of armed workmen of the Spartacus faction, the correspondent reports, are crowding the streets, and at several points, firing has begun. The sound of machine gun fire could be heard from all parts of Berlin. The message reported the intention of the Ebert Government to make an effort to storm the building of the police guards later in the day and take possession of machine guns and cannon there.

Dr. Karl Liebknecht, the spartacan leader, has been seen here and there about the city organizing his troops for a final fight which, the correspondent says, is expected to begin very soon. Hundreds of persons are reported fleeing from the city.

RUMORS ARE CONFIRMED.

This morning's cables seem to confirm the rumors of yesterday that the expected blood letting that generally follows a nation's defeat and revolution is well under way in Germany's capital. Reports from Berlin on Monday, received through Amsterdam indicated a disturbed condition of affairs in Berlin on Sunday, due to another attempt of the Spartacus group to obtain control of the city and thereby of the Central German Government.

The Ultra Radical forces, opposed to the Ebert Government, sallied forth from the city's stronghold, near the district which contained the principal newspaper offices, and seized several of the newspaper plants, including those of the Tageblatt, Vossische Zeitung, Lokal Anzeiger, Vorwaerts and the Morgen Post, together with the office of the Wolff Bureau, the semi-official news agency. Apparently the Government still retained control of the German wireless service for contemporaneously with these reports of revolutionary activities on the part of the spartacus faction came an official wireless message declaring that Germany was about to take diplomatic and military measures again Russian Bolshevik Government for her own safety. The spartacus faction had maintained close relations with the Russian Bolshevik interest, and apparently it was the presence in Berlin of M. Radek, Bolshevik Emissary from Russia, who has been propagating the Bolshevik ideas in co-operation with the Liebknecht group that precipitated the Ebert Government's declaration of a virtual state of war between Germany and Russia.

Copenhagen, Jan. 7.—Adolph Joffe and M. Radek, the leaders of the Bolshevik mission to Germany, are in Berlin assisting Dr. Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg in fomenting in Bolshevik revolution, according to advices received here. They are believed to be at police headquarters which is the stronghold of the Spartacans. The Independent Socialists, whose leaders were recently dismissed from the Government, are reported to have gone over to the Spartacans. The two groups have issued a joint proclamation declaring that the final right to preserve the revolution must now be bought.

HON. F. B. CARVELL CANCELS VISIT

UNABLE TO COME HERE TOMORROW ON ACCOUNT OF ILLNESS.

Hon. F. B. Carvell will be unable to come to Peterborough tomorrow on account of illness, according to word received in this city today.

Mr. Carvell, the Minister of Public Works in the Union Government, was to have addressed a mass meeting in the Grand Opera House tomorrow evening. All arrangements were being made to give the Minister a reception worthy of Peterborough, and there is no doubt that the attendance at the meeting tomorrow night would have been so large as to tax the accomodation afforded. The word of the postponment of his visit was most unexpected.

New York, Jan. 7.—Explaining that it was Col. Roosevelt's wish that his funeral service be conducted entirely by those among whom he had lived so long and happily, Capt. BOLSHEVIK ACTIVE IN U. S.

BROUGHT HALF MILLION DOLLARS FROM RUSSIA TO CORRUPT AMERICANS.

New York, Jan. 7.—Department of Justice agents in New York, who have been watching German suspects in this city, have been assigned to the work of frustrating the activities of five groups of Bolsheviki which have established headquarters here, it was announced tonight. The spread of Bolshevism was admitted to have become "alarming."

Coincidentally, Alfred I. Becker, Deputy State Attorney-General, declared that his department has unearthed evidence that secret agents of Lenin and Trotsky have reached this city with a fund of nearly $500,000 to be used for propaganda purposes.

These agents, it was said, have been circulating in workshops and factories, holding secret meetings, which culminated today in the opening session of a three-day convention in the Labor Lyceum Building.

The prime purpose of this convention is said to be to absorb into the Bolshevik movement, in this and other cities, members of the Industrial Workers of the World, Anarchists and radical Socialists. Efforts also are being made, it is reported, to gain an affiliation with the Workers' International Industrial Union, the Workers' Defense Union and groups working for the release from prison of Emma Goldman, Alexander Berkman and other "political prisoners."

Plans of the agitators also are said to include a program for weaning of Labor radical members of 65 away from the American Federation unions throughout the country, who are to be urged to organize "Workingmen's Councils" under the Lenin-Trotsky plan.

Watching Agitators.

At the offices of the Department of Justice it was admitted that a card index of 2,000 "Red" agitators in this city, Chicago, Philadelphia, Detroit, Boston and other places, has been compiled and persons whose names appear in this index are being closely watched.

Postoffice authorities are said to be maintaining a careful scrutiny of three Russian newspapers, The Revolutionary Age of Boston, and The Novy Mir and The Peasant and Worker, published in this city.

Although most of the Bolshevik agitators are aliens and could be deported, Government agents admit that they are puzzled as to what course to pursue, and it is believed deportation would serve merely to strengthen their propaganda. More than 500,000 persons in this city, is was said, are active or passive followers of the Bolshevik movement.

PENSION SCALE FOR CHILDREN

GOVERNMENT ANNOUNCES NEW RATE SHOWING SUBSTANTIAL INCREASE.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Jan. 7.—A substantial increase in pensions for children of Canada's deceased or disabled soldiers is officially announced today. Up to date, $8 per month per child has been the rate of pension.

In future the children of deceased or disabled soldiers will bepensioned as follows: For the first child or dependent brother and sister, $12 per month. For the second, $10, and for the third or subsequent children, $8. In cases where the mother also is dead, payments will be doubled.

TO DEMOBOLIZE UNDER SYSTEM

PRIORITY RETURNS OF SOLDIERS CAN'T BE CONSIDERED BY OFFICIALS.

Ottawa, Jan. 7.—The Militia Department desires it to be known that an excessive number of requests for priority return of soldiers from overseas is being received both at Militia Headquarters, Ottawa, and at the Overseas Ministry, London, England. These requests cannot be acceded to, nor can consideration be given to them unless they are based upon compassionate grounds and are forwarded and recommended through the various military districts in the usual way.

It is pointed out that demobilization must be carried on in a systematic way. If the door is opened to return those for whom application is made by friends in Canada in priority to others, the inevitable result will be widespread dissatisfaction and complaints of favoritism on the part of the less fortunate soldiers with perhaps prior claim and longer service. It is not unnatural that requests should be made for the return of men to resume their civil avocations, and it is recognized that it is in the public interest that men for whom civil employment is waiting should not be held overseas longer than is absolutely necessary. On the other hand men are being returned in accordance with a settled policy at the rate of many thousands per month. Namely, 20,000 per month during December and January and 30,000 per month thereafter.

The regulations governing demobilization were settled only after prolonged and careful consideration and it is neither practicable nor desirable, viewing the situation as a whole, to deviate from the principles laid down, in favor of those who prefer requests for immediate return on account of private or business interests.

PTE. M'CABE WAS KILLED AS HE SLEPT IN DUGOUT

Letter Received From Overseas Gives Particulars of Death of Local Man.

Although word was received some time ago of the death on October 8 in France of Pte. Sidney V. McCabe, son of Mrs. Mary McCabe, 613 Union street, it was only a few days ago that she received from a friend of her late son particulars regarding his end.

It appears that he was to have gone on leave upon the day before he was killed, but something intervened to keep him on duty, whereupon he decided that he would obtain leave the next day. That night, as he and his friends were sleeping in a dugout, a bomb fell close to them and wiped out everyone in that part of the line.

Pte. McCabe previous to enlisting was a member of All Saints' Church and played upon its hockey team. In 1915 he enlisted in the 93rd Battalion and went overseas, transferring to the 5th C. M. R.

In addition to the letter from his comrade, which states that Pte. McCabe received a military funeral, his remains being interred in the British military cemetery at Cambrai, another communication was received from a lieutenant in his company speaking very highly of his fine, unselfish character. The usual letter of condolence was sent by Gen. Mewburn, Minister of Militia.

In addition to the mother, the departed young soldier leaves a brother in the 6th Reserve Battalion Band and formerly of the 59th Band, both having enlisted on the same day. "FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

TUESDAY, JANUARY 7, 1919

NEW EMPLOYMENT BUREAUS.

IT IS ANNOUNCED that the Ontario Government proposes to suppress private employment agencies, which will be no longer necessary now that the authorities themselves intend to take up the task of finding work for the unemployed, especially among the returned soldiers. These private agencies in the past have in a good many instances been institutions which preyed upon the unfortunate, who took in the shape of fees the money of the unemployed and then did nothing on their behalf.

There have already been a number of applications from local civilians for the position of manager of the Government Employment Bureau that is to be opened in this city. All such applications represent so much time and effort wasted. It is authoritatively given out that these positions will in all cases go to returned soldiers.

JOBS FOR RETURNING SOLDIERS.

(New York Commercial.)

THOSE WHO ENLISTED or were drafted into the military and naval services of the country should be preferred when applying for work, but they should not seek jobs for which they cannot qualify. In the mechanical trades there will be little trouble; but bankers, merchants and professional men are already swamped with applications for "kid glove" positions which the applicants are not qualified to fill. An insurance company cannot employ as an actuary a discharged soldier who knows nothing of higher mathematics, any more than a printing office can pay journeyman's wages to one who has never "learned the case."

Thousands of young men have received physical training in the army which has hardened their muscles and steadied their nerves. As they step out of the ranks they are capable of doing hard work, and should be impressed with the fact that the best chances to rise to fortune lie in the mechanical trades. Beyond all doubt, the producers will be the leaders in the years that are to come, just as they have been in the last generation.

Look over the list of presidents, managers, superintendents and executive officials of our great industrial and transportation companies. Most of them rose from the ranks, and all of them will testify that they are looking for men who combine technical with executive ability. The man who knows how to do a thing is sure of a job. If he has the technical ability to teach others what he knows and to direct their operations he can aspire to a salary of fifty thousand dollars a year.

When we become wise enough we shall dispense with the services of most of the lawyers and half the doctors; but we shall never have too many producers of real wealth, such as farmers and mechanics. The more who produce and the fewer who live on the producers, the higher will be the standard of living for the future people. Our returning soldiers should try to become producers of eggs or steel ships, or something that the world needs——and eggs are just as important as ships.

THE HISTORY OF THE WAR.

"WHEN THE HISTORY of the war comes to be written" has been decreed the most overworked phrase that is current today. At least one thing is certain—the lack of such a history is apparent. The people at large have a very vague idea of the details of the conflict, in spite of all the newspaper space that has been devoted to a daily record of the events, in spite of the letters written, or the eye-witness accounts brought home by the soldiers who actually took part, and the public addresses of so many enterprising visitors to the battle zone who viewed the conflict from a position safely distant from the actual scene of hostilities. The newspaper accounts were closely censored, any soldier in the line viewed but a fraction of the fighting, and the homilies of the non-combatants are largely the result of inspiration derived from the sound of the cannon and the rising clouds of the smoke of battle.

The history of the war will comprise a large volume, whether for school study or general reading. Many a student will come to grief in his career upon this academic rock. It is probable, too, that the historians in the various countries involved will treat the subject from their individual national standpoint and that nothing in the way of credit for the part each power played will be allowed to escape. This tendency is already in evidence.

No clearer idea of the true history of the war can be imparted to the masses than through the medium of the moving picture. The war films never fail to interest those who have neither the time nor the inclination for a long course of reading or close study. The picture of infantry in solid phalanx, of fighting men "full of lusty life," going into almost certain death with smiles on their faces, of troops of cavalry and moving guns, never fails to enthuse. The crowd will turn out to witness such pictorial representations, especially if they are convinced that they are true to life.

The complaint has been made, with ample justification, that there are too many American battle films shown in Canadian theatres. The fault does not lie with the proprietors of these places of amusement. There is a dearth of Canadian productions. Back in 1916 battle pictures were shown throughout the country under governmental auspices, and the result was that the martial spirit of the people was kept alive. The government that now advises moving picture houses to patronize home work should do something to supply the lead. Official war pictures will tend to instruct as well as amuse the people and develop the patriotic sentiment which is regarded as a nation's chief guarantee of safety.

THE LATE COLONEL ROOSEVELT.

IT IS ONLY NATURAL that the encowments that made for the late ex-President Roosevelt friends and admirers by the thousands would breed enmity for him among the members of his own immediate circle, especially political enmity. No man who, while holding a prominent position in a party, is given to startling departures in procedure, can hope to escape the censure of those especially who are in the front rank.

Early in his career Theodore Roosevelt was regarded as a coming figure, and his unbroken list of successes aroused the jealousy of every ambitious man in the Republican party. It was, however, the grim irony of fate that what was in reality a plot to sidetrack the fearless young politician in New York State turned out to be the very means of thrusting him into the highest place in the gift of the American people, a position which he would beyond a doubt have attained eventually, but which he would, in the natural order, have reached only by the stepping stones of years of strenuous effort.

When Roosevelt was elected governor of the State of New York in 1898, the old time leaders, the bosses of the party in that commonwealth, felt that their power was waning and realized that their light was soon to be eclipsed by that of the new star that has arisen on the political firmament. It was then that the late Senator Platt and other Republican leaders conceived the idea, or hatched the plot, to make Theodore Roosevelt vice-president of the United States as a running mate for President McKinley. According to party traditions, this would have been equivalent to shelving the young governor. After a term as vice-president he would have retired to the semi-obscurity that invariably envelopes those who have lived out a term in that office. With Roosevelt running for the second place on the ticket in 1900, the Republican bosses of New York would be able to run a man for governor who would do their will, and the Colonel would have been put out of the reckoning for all time as a presidential possibility.

When Col. Roosevelt finally consented to run for the vice-presidency, no one realised more clearly than himself the sacrifice he was making. But he was loyal to the cause, and at the conclusion of the struggle with Spain, the United States had another war issue on its hands. The argument used to overcome the last of the Colonel's objections was that he was the only available candidate who was certain of carrying New York in the presidential election, and that state was regarded as essential to the re-election of President McKinley.

Col. Roosevelt took the second place on a ticket when all his friends believed that destiny had marked him for the leadership four years hence. In less than a year, owing to the untimely death of McKinley, he was president himself. Fate frustrated the schemes of the plotters to disappoint him of the ambition of his life.

No other man than Roosevelt could have become president under such conditions, and three years later be re-nominated without a shadow of opposition and elected by a tremendous popular and electoral majority. All precedents were shattered by that period in American history, but shattering precedents was part of the life work of the late ex-president.

The late Col. Roosevelt cherished an ambition to hold the office of president for a third time. Even if he had been spared to the full measure of human life it is doubtful if he would have ever had the hope fulfilled. The prejudice against a third term would be difficult to uproot. Another thing, a large and influential section of the Republican party never forgot or forgave what the Colonel did to wreck that once invincible organization in 1912 when he placed himself at the head of a new faction and so made possible the triumph of the Democrats, a party with which he was at variance by every tradition which he cherished and by every principle which he preached.

Ever since the war broke out with the Central Powers the late Col. Roosevelt was found on the side of the Allies. Had he been president at the time, it is doubtful if he would have recommended United States intervention in the early months of the struggle, but it is certain that he would by his energy have worked up the enthusiasm of the nation to the fighting spirit long before President Wilson succeeded in the same task. Roosevelt as president in the years of the war would have found it necessary, just as Wilson did, to unite the different elements of the American people in a common purpose, in overcoming the popular objection to taking part in European broils, but Roosevelt would have attained his object with the dispatch and promptitude for which he was noted in all his public acts.

In the history of the United States, years or centuries hence, no brighter name will be found, no more honorable record will appear, than that of Theodore Roosevelt. In every sense he measured up to the requirements of a rugged manhood. He was fearless, sometimes to the point of indiscretion, he made the name of his country honored among the nations of the earth, he was honorable in all his public career and above suspicion in his private life. The American republic has produced great men and leaders, but none greater than he. Even his enemies could not fail to respect his integrity while they feared his invincible strength that prevailed against all obstacles.

CREMATION VERSUS BURIAL

(By Dr. Frank Crane)

Funeral matters are difficult to write of. In no department of human affairs does taste rule more tyrannically; and the taste is often very bad.

Still the subject is one we all have to consider. It is also a thing upon which the community as well as the individual has something to say.

The common practice in the United States is to bury the dead in the earth. About all that can be said for this is that it is consecrated by custom. It is certainly unsanitary, and it ought not to appeal to the cultured imagination.

A movement is now on foot to substitute the mausoleum for the grave. Instead of placing the dead in the earth, they are to be put into crypts in a permanent building especially erected for that purpose.

The first community mausoleum in this country as near as we can discover, was built at Granges, Ohio, in 1907. Since then others have been constructed in Toronto, Chicago, Philadelphia, Syracuse, Detroit, Atlanta, Cleveland and many other cities. Some of them are very imposing architecturally.

The idea is not new. The Romans buried their dead in structures called columbraria. They practised cremation and the crypts were not large. The inside of the building resembled a dove-lote (Columbarium). Interment of bodies in the ground was prohibited.

The custom of earth burial did not come into general use until the fourth and fifth centuries.

The problem of finding land suitable for burial, especially in the case of large cities, is becoming more and more difficult. The growth of cities has caused many a burying ground to be abandoned.

It would seem, therefore, that the erection of community mausoleums should appeal to people. There the dead can be laid in a beautiful house, endowed in perpetuity, a housing practically indestructible. The mausoleums of the ancients, many of them, still stand.

Strict scientifically sanitary provisions being taken, such houses need never become a health menace.

Those who believe in cremation can have their ashes thus preserved. Those who do not so believe can have their remains return by gradual dissolution to the original elements of which they were composed.

Those who have seen the remarkable Campo Santo at Genoa will not fear that respect for the departed will be lowered by this innovation.

TODAY'S STORY

Scrubby Stones bent his head under the shelter of the parapet as the glass of his periscope fell to the firestep in shattered fragments. Then he looked at his mate, who was sitting at the door of the dug-out opposite.

"That was a near go!" he said. "A hanged near go!"

"No wonder!" said the man opposite. "If you go pokin' your head up like that what can you expect, Scrubby?"

"Wasn't expectin' this, anyway, Bill," said Scrubby. It's so bloomin' quiet 'ere and us well on two 'unner and fifty away from the other trenches."

"Sniper, I bet," said Bill. "One o' our blokes in Company A got a packet this morn', and him in a mob that's a good three hunner away from the Gerrys."

Scrubby felt in his pocket, brought out a shaving mirror and fixed it to the point of his bayonet. This he held up, face to No Man's Land, and looked in it.

"Nothin' to be seen," he said. "Umpteen shell-'oles, half a dozen dead Gerrys, stumps o' trees, barbed wire and mud. I don't envy a bloomin' sniper as lies out there."

"If there is one, he's well camouflaged," said Bill, lighting a cigarette as he spoke. "They can't haff camouflage themselves, the swine."

Found Him.

"Ere, I see something!" shouted Scrubby. "Out in No Man's Land. Come up 'ere, Bill, and 'ave a peep.

The soldier by the dug-out door got to his feet, blew the ash from his cigarette, and mounted the firestep.

"I see it," said Bill excitedly. "At the foot of the tree a head or something that looks like a head. That's what you mean, ain't it?"

"To the left of the tree stump three dead uns, lyin' in a bloomin' 'eap, and behind them someting moved," said Scrubby, taking no heed of Bill's remark. "That's where the bloke, as tried to knock me out and bashed my periscope, is lyin'."

"That black lump at the foot of the tree stump is what I'd put my money on," said Bill. "It's more like a sniper than anything else out there."

"That ain't no sniper, no more than it's your grandmother," said Scrubby with an air of certainty. "It's camouflage. Bet you that it's a cap put there by the Jerry to throw off the scent. They're up to any hanged trick, them blokes. But I saw someting move out behind the dead 'uns. Bet that it's the sniper, out there, lookin' for his prey. Let me 'ave another peep at him."

The periscope changed hands, and Scrubby looked in it. For a while he kept silence, his body rigid, his mouth a little open. As he looked a rifle shot rang out clear and sharp across the levels. Scrubby brought his bayonet and glass down and looked at Bill.

"Got 'im that time," he said. "Saw the bloomin' smoke just where I said 'E's lyin' there behind the dead uns, and I'm going' to see that 'e'll lie there for duration. . . . And 'ere's the officar comin' along. I'll speak ter him and ask him about it."

An officer, a young man wearing the D.S.O. ribbon, came round the traverse into the bay. Opposite Scrubby and Bill he stopped.

"Anything doing out there?" he enquired.

"Plenty sir," said Scrubby. "I've got my eye on one o' them, and 'im camouflaged behind a 'eap o' dead uns. It's that there sniper that's been troublin' us since we've come in 'ere. Just 'ave a look, sir, and see."

Good Shooting.

The officer got upon the firestep, looked into the periscope, and saw the head of dead which Scrubby indicated.

"Out there?" he inquired.

"That's the spot, sir," said Scrubby. "E's lyin' back o' them dead uns. And if you keep a sharp look-out ye'll see the smoke if 'e fires."

The officer saw the spurt of smoke even as Scrubby spoke, and at the same moment the glass in which he was looking was smashed to pieces above his head.

"I saw where he is," he remarked. "Saw the smoke, so we've got to get the man by the heels. I'm glad my head wasn't in line with the mirror."

"And it was a handy one for shavin', sir," said Scrubby. Then, after a moment's silence: "I know what to do, sir. If I can have a free 'and and I'll put the snipin' bloke out o' business for good."

"What do you propose to do?" asked the officer.

"This is my plan, sir," said Scrubby. "There's a wood behind this 'ere trench, so if I get back there I can camouflage and 'ide myself. The wood is 'igher ground than No Man's Land, so I can lie behind a tree and let nip whenever I see this bloke up ter 'is game. 'Alf an hour will do for the job, sir, if you'll give me permission."

The officer recollected Scrubby's deeds of old, his cool confidence in the tightest corner and his skill with the rifle. This skill was vouched for by the cross rifles on the soldier's sleeve. If any man was suitable for the job it was Scrubby Stones. Fifteen minutes later he left the front trench and crawled back through a sap towards the wood at rear of the line.

It was the officer who saw how the deed was done, as he stood, twenty minutes later, on one of the firesteps looking at the field in front. A rifle shot rang out and a bullet swished past his head out to No Man's Land. Scrubby's rifle had spoken, and it spoke with effect. The officer heard a screech in front, and saw a form in field grey rise from behind a pile of dead men, claw the air for a space and sink to the ground again. The sniper had been hit, mortally, perhaps, but for the moment that was unknown. Only when night fell was the effect of Scrubby's shot known. A search party found the German sniper lying on the ground beside his rifle, a hole in his breast, and dead.

"And what is your father's business, my little girl?" questioned the long, lean, lanky miss at the girls' school.

"Must I tell?"

"Yes; you must give the information to the school board."

"May I whisper?"

"Yes."

"My father makes worm holes."

"Does what?" said the teacher in astonishment.

"Makes worm holes. He works in an antique furniture factory and he has to make the worm holes in the furniture."

Black and Green.

It happened at a certain famous American college. An old negro was sweeping the front steps when a gentleman walked up and said:

"Well, old uncle, soon will winter be here, and those trees will be as black as you are."

Quickly the old negro replied:

"And spring will soon be here and dem trees will be as green as you are."

Pat was a greenhorn just landed in New York. He went into a drapery establishment, there to purchase a hat, which he got. The price was a dollar, which is put on the counter to the Yankee. A monkey being employed as the cashier there, seized the gold dollar piece and put it in the till. Pat was about to go away when the assistant said: "I want a dollar for that hat, Pat; where's your money?"

"Thunder and turf, man," said Pat, "didn't you see your grandfather taking it?"

SETS FASHIONS FOR AMERICA

In spite of her recent bereavement, Irene Castle, the Pathe star, in the great screen success, "The First Law," remains the arbiter and leader of fashions in America. In a recent interview just before she sailed for France, where she is now entertaining the soldiers near the front, Mrs. Castle said that American women will be the style leaders more by reason of their manner of wearing clothes than the expense of their garments.

"The woman who wants to be well dressed, and this is the natural desire of every woman, must first of all learn to be honest with herself. She must see herself as she is and not as she would like to be. If she is short and broad, she must not imagine herself tall and thin, and vice versa. If she is angular and broad, she must not believe herself plump and rounded. And then, having seen herself honestly, as in a looking-glass, she should dress in a manner suitable to her own peculiar style.

Take the French women, for instance. They do not hesitate to admit their faults in face and figure, and this grand study of themselves leads them to the adoption of those patterns, fabrics and adornments which lend distinction, individuality and style to their appearance.

Go into a Parisian restaurant. You will never see, as in America, women of every height, weight, age and individuality all wearing clothes cut after the same design. American women are what one might call vogue crazy. They see a model, run across some particular style in a magazine worn by somebody or other, and are not happy until they get one like it. How much more sensible it would be to choose a style suitable to one's own self. Surely it is more comfortable and self-satisfying to be distinctive, individual, representative of yourself, than to be merely one in a crowd, like a paper doll in a long row cut from one folded sheet. Regardless of patterns or fabrics, the well-dressed woman is the women whose gowns, suited to the occasion, best express herself.

TO CLEAN NECKTIES

Get a quart fruit jar with rubber and cover; half fill it with naphtha and put the ties in, the white ones by themselves first of all. Having screwed the cover down tightly, shake the jar about for some minutes, when the dirt will almost be entirely removed. If necessary, repeat the process.

Smooth them out carefully and pat any streaked or discolored places with a bit of cloth—an old handkerchief will do nicely. Then hang them in the air to dry and allow the color to evaporate. It is best to leave them out some days. A bit of mosquito netting or cheese cloth will be required to cover them from dust or flies.

The darker ties may be put in the same naphtha. It is well to have two jars, one for first washing, another for the second dipping if necessary. The naphtha should be kept in a close stopped bottle and such work should always be done by day-light in a room without a fire and with open windows, if possible, as the vapor from the naphtha is highly inflammable.

GOOD TO KNOW

The Jars that have retained the smell of onions that were contained in them may be freed from it by filling them with earth and leaving them out of doors for several days. When thoroughly washed after this treatment they will be found quite fresh and free from odor.

A cleansing fluid with which to wash painted walls is made as follows: Dissolve two ounces of borax in two quarts of water. Add a teaspoonful of amonia. Use half of this mixture in a pail of water, without soap. After washing the walls rub them dry gently with clean, soft cloths.

WORTH KNOWING

A convenient way to melt chocolate is to put it into a glass jar and stand it in hot water.

The bones of a roast fowl and bits of left-over flesh are full of possibilities for the next meal.

Immediately upon finishing the cooking take all draughts off the kitchen range and save fuel.

If the candle is too large for the candlestick dip it into warm water until it is melted to the proper size.

Delicious extract of orange or lemon is made by paring the rinds very thin and putting them into a bottle of alcohol.

Apples, dried prunes and raisins are among the cheapest fruits.

If anybody has to go without milk it should never be the children.

MORE TESTIMONY TAKEN IN NORTHLAND INVESTIGATION AT OTTAWA.

Ottawa, Jan. 7.—Testifying at the Northland inquiry here Sergt. Howard H. Falfe, a former newspaper man, said he went to England with the first contingent, was taken prisoner by the Germans at the second battle of Ypres and spent 35 months in a German prison camp before he was repatriated. He thought the berthing accommodations for the third class passengers were as good as could be expected on an old boat. He had no complaints from his men as to food, although he was orderly sergeant for his district on two occasions. Mr. Merkel, of the Canadian Press, had asked witness about conditions on the ship and he had replied that he knew of no cause for the complaints. This was after the story had already appeared in Toronto.

Sergt.-Major Richardson of Halifax said he had been in the army since 1900. He was not a passenger on the Northland, but was on her in Halifax Harbor. He saw nothing unusual on her, stokers, on the Northland, tried to raid an apple stand in Halifax explaining that they were starving and had no food on the ship. Aside from this he knew nothing.

Pte. Percy Giles, of Halifax, was the next witness called. He came out on the Northland with the other Nova Scotia troops and found food and accommodation satisfactory. He made no complaints had heard none and was satisfied with conditions.

Col. E. E. Clark, Director of Supply and Transport, furnished the Court with a comparison of the rations issued by the Admiralty and by the steamers while carrying troops on a capita basis or under charter. The Admiralty ration was shown to be lighter.

Lieut. Vautelet, of Montreal, was re-called and explained his remark to Pte. Laurant that it might be necessary to "bring up a ship's crew to keep the soldiers off the promenade deck." He had orders to keep the soldiers off the deck and posted sentries to see that this was done. The sentries did not appear to be anxious to obey and witness complained to Major Westmore or the Adjutant, one of whom intimated to him that if the sentries could not do their duty they would have to call out the ship's crew with arms. He told that to some of the sentries to get them to perform their duty. He took the order as serious.

MODISH NOTES

TIPS ON TEETH

Teeth are the things which most parents are prone to neglect. It is estimated that more than 60 per cent. of the children in the public schools have at least one tooth which needs attention from a dentist.

Don't think that nothing needs to be done for a tooth just because it causes the child no pain. Decayed teeth are breeding places for germs and makes a child much more liable to all sorts of infectious diseases. If something is not done for them they may injure his mouth for life or they may cause the glands of his neck to swell up and form abscesses.

KITCHEN KINKS

To prevent batters from sticking to spoon when filling muffin tins dip the spoon in hot water each time before dipping into butter to fill tins.

A slice of fresh bread placed in box of cake will keep cake moist. Renew slice as bread dries.

Never let the white of eggs stand even for a moment during the process of heating, as they will turn to a liquid state which cannot be restored and also make a heavy cake.

In making cake sift all dry ingredients together, mix all lipuids together, and in combining the two be sure to pour the liquid into the solid to prevent lumping.

If you use pastry flour in recipe calling for bread flour, add two tablespoonfuls more for each cupful used.

Never wash poultry. Wipe with damp cloth. Washing renders the fresh sodden and the skin soft.

Pour boiling water on potatoes to be baked, let stand ten minutes, drain. They are fine prepared in this way.

One-fourth taspoonful ginger in doughnut batter will prevent soaking fat in cooking.

THESE ATTRACTIVE HEALTH RESORTS ARE EASILY ACCESSIBLE.

During the winter season many people plan, with advantage to health, a stay at one of the established sanitariums where, amid ideal social conditions at a comfortable home-like high class hotel, the overworked system may be re-invigorated and where treatment of proved efficacy for rheumatism and kindred ailments is available. Three of the most famous resorts of this character are reached by Grand Trunk lines, viz., St. Catharines Well, Ontario; Mount Clemens, Mich., and Battle Creek, Mich. "THE WANDERER"

THE MASSIVE PRODUCTION, STAGED BY DAVID BELASCO, COMING TO THE GRAND.

It is not often that the realization can be regarded with expectation, but such is the case with the brilliant, beautiful Biblical dram, "The Wanderer," which will be at the Grand Opera House for three days and a matinee, commencing Monday evening, Jan. 13th, with matinee on Wednesday.

The producers of "The Wanderer," Messrs. Elliott, Comstock and Gest, surely have every reason to be proud of their splendid achievement. There is so much to praise that a second and even a third review would be written with equal facility.

The tranquil pastoral scene, which is presented, as the curtain rises on the first act, with its impression of great distances, ripening fields, purple hills, quaint old homestead and that large flock of sheep with the shepherd dogs snapping and barking as they come romping joyously across the stage, keeps recuring to the mind as a picture that time will take long in effacing.

The second act stands out even more startlingly, for there never has been shown on the American stage a more utter disregard for expense in extravagant, gorgeous stage settings and costumes. The dazzling ensemble when the stage is crowded with dancing girls, slaves, courtesans and their rich young admirers, with the Prodigal Son being fleeced of his last penny, brings up another picture that will linger.

ALTER QUALIFICATIONS

Legislation to Change Act May be Sought

City Clerk Littlejohn of Toronto will recommend that the city seek legislation amending the Municipal Act so that the property qualifications for school trustee shall be the same as for aldermen, namely, absolute ownership of not less than $1,000 free of encumberances, and that such property be assessed in the name of the candidate or his wife, of occupancy of leasehold property assessed at $2,000 or over.

At present any citizen whose name is on the assessment roll and who is a bona-fide resident of the city is eligible for election to the Board of Education.

Power to reject candiadtes at the time of nomination unless they then file property qualifications is desired by Mr. Littlejohn for the City Clerk. At present the qualifications can be proven up till 9 o'clock in the evening of the day following nominations.

JEWS TO RAISE TEN MILLIONS

IF HOLY LAND IS PLACED UNDER TRUSTEESHIP OF BRITAIN.

Toronto, Jan. 7.—Vast national and commercial enterprises will spring into existence in the Holy Land the moment the Peace Conference announces that it has granted the request for the establishment of a commonwealth in Palestine under the trusteeship of Great Britain, declared Robt. D. Kesselman, comptroller of the Palestinian Restoration Fund, in an interview here.

It is the intention also of the Jewish leaders to float a national loan of $5,000,000 to be used towards the rebuilding of the devastated parts of the Holy Land and for the building of homes in Jerusalem.

There is on foot now a campaign for the raising of another $5,000,00 during the present year to be used for colonizing work in Palestine in the immediate future.

The budget calls for $5,000,000 for local and central Government administration in Palestine; another $500,000 for education, $500,000 for health and hygiene, and $2,500,000 for construction and loans to colonists and municipalities towards the advancement of agricultural pursuits, for the maintenance of law and order and the development of trade.

UNION SERVICE HELD LAST NIGHT IN ST. JOHN'S CHURCH.

The opening service of the Week of Prayer was held in St. John's Church last evening. The Church, still handsomely decorated with flags and greens, was filled with an enthusiastic congregation. A special expousive service was conducted by Canon Davidson, the congregation heartily joining in it, and in the well-known hymnes. Rev. A. J. Thomas read the lesson.

The subject running through the service was "The Great Brotherhood," and Rev. J. A. McKenzie discussed it in an able address, after which Rev. J. R. Webb spoke briefly, referring appreciation of the beauty of the Church, and the warm welcome received. All the ministers of Peterboro were present, with one or two exceptions, and after the service they and their wives were entertained at the rectory.

EXPLAINS PLAN OF SETTLEMENT

HOW GOVERNMENT PROPOSES TO PLACE RETURNED MEN ON LAND.

Lieut.-Col. R. Innies, Director of Agricultural Instruction for Returned Soldiers of Canada, addressed the provincial executive of the G.W.V.A. in Toronto yesterday on the arrangements which have been completed for the settlement on the land and instruction of soldiers in farming.

For the purposes of land settlement and education the discharged soldiers are grouped under three classes, men who have actually fought, men who have been on active service outside of Canada and soldiers who were never out of Canada. He explained that only the first two classes are being dealt with at present. The third class will not be debarred from the advantages granted to the others, but they are postponed until the first two classes are settled.

"The idea is not to put anyone on the land until their qualifications have been carefully looked into to make sure that agriculture is the proper business for them," he explained.

Col. Innes announced that a course at Guelph will be commenced on January 20, when complete practical instruction will be given. The course will last for twelve weeks, and next summer the men who have taken the course are expected to do practical work on a farm. An alternative scheme is for men to serve with practical farmers as hired men and these farmers will be carefully selected and made honorary instructors in agriculture.

When settled on the land which he is assisted to buy if he desires it, the soldier will be visited from time to time by district representatives who will be men of each district who have made a practical success of farming and who are therefore likely to advise the veterans to farm along profitable lines.

The full instructions for the course and the conditions for the loan of money to buy farms are issued today from the local office of the Soldiers' Settlement Board, which is ready to issue application forms to veterans desiring to settle on the land.

HOW TORONTO CITY COUNCIL REPRESENTS THE PEOPLE

Is Composed of Twenty-Five Conservatives Three Liberals, and One Independent—Methodists Are in the Majority.

Toronto, Jan. 7.—Now that the smoke of battle has cleared away, and the victors can be separated from those who went down to defeat, an analysis of the new Council is possible. From a political standpoint, the Conservatives have gained materially by the change, there being 25 members of that party in the new Council, as compared with only 20 in the 1918 Council. The Liberals had four members in last year's Council, but only three in this. There is one Independent and one Labor member, Controller Robbins.

As far as the religious beliefs of the members, the Methodists will be far in the lead, with 11 members of that Church sitting, practically the same number as last year. The Anglicans have 8 members; the Presbyterians have 7. Controller Caneron will be the lone Baptist, while the Congregationalists will be represented by F. W. Johnston. Although four Roman Catholic were in the field, including candidates for the Board of Education, not one was elected.

The prospects appear good for the reconstruction period, there being six builders in the new Council. Four of the new members are listed as "retired"; three are lawyers, three manufacturers, three insurance agents; three journalists, two merchants, two business agents, one master barber, one broker, one steamfitters' supplies agent, and one secretary. The names and analysis follow:

AMATEUR NIGHT AT THE GRAND

FOUR CONTESTANTS LAST NIGHT FOR THE THREE CASH PRIZES.

At the Grand Opera House last night the second of the amateur contests was held and from the crowd and the enthusiasm displayed it is evident that these contests are likely to prove a popular feature of the There were four entries last night.

Mr. John Smith, the accomplished baritone, sang a solo and responded to an insistant encore. His performance was greeted with a thunder of applause.

Primeau, Leonard and Morphet, the well known local actors appeared in their play "The Coon Rehearsal" which has been favorably received in the city on numerous occasions. Mr. Leonard took the role of the ghost and Mr. Morphet that of the colored man who furnishes all the comedy in the piece.

Clarke and Quinta, the first with his banjo and the latter as a clog dancer were also on the program.

Mr. Jack Perdue, the last amateur to appear, was the victim of nervousness, but did his best in the rendition of a song.

Then the contestants in the order in which they appeared were paraded across the stage, the applause that each received to decide the winners of the three cash prizes. The volumes of noisy praise increased as the procession passed before the footlights. The friends of the various contestants strove to outdo all previous demonstrations and they succeeded admirably. The dancing appeared the most popular feature of the entertainment, the play the second, while Mr. Smith's classical work was given third place.

There was an interesting and varied exhibition of moving pictures presented during the evening and the theatre was well filled by an appreciative audience. Tonight, one of the best plays now before the public, "Turn to the Right," will be presented.

CORONER'S JURY

He then read the report of the post mortem which had been conducted by himself and Dr. Cameron, on December 3st. The finding briefly was that judging from the appearance of the stomach and other organs of deceased, death was the result of taking some local, strong and irritant poison.

As bearing indirectly on the case Dr. Wood stated that on Sunday night he had been called to the Faux home and had attended the elder brother, who was suffering from the effects of drinking the same concoction as proved fatal to Bourgon. The doctor treated him and he recovered. On Monday night he was called to see Emmet Faux who was unconscious and whom he had removed to the hospital where Faux although stone blind for several days had made such a good recovery as to permit of his entering the witness box in connection with the case.

To Safeguard the Public

In answer to a question put by the Crown Attorney as to what preventative measures he would suggest in connection with the abusive handling of alcohol the doctor replied that it should be treated as a deadly poison.

Dr. Cameron who was associated with Dr. Wood in conducting the post morten stated that he had signed the report submitted by the preceding witness and agreed with its finding. In regard to the selling of wood alcohol he stated that it was quantities to use as an anti-freezing liquid for auto radiators.

Dr. Greer—"Don't you think the public should be safeguarded against its indiscriminate use?"

Dr. Cameron replied in the affirmative stating that it was a very dangerous poison.

No Restrictions on Sale

Mr. C. M. Moncur was the next witness. He stated that he did not handle wood alcohol in his drug store, only Columbian and methylated spirits. He explained the composition of each preparation and stated that methylated spirits was nothing more or less than ordinary grain alcohol treated by the government with wood alcohol in order to make it poisonous and undrinkable.

There was no limitations placed on the sale of these commodities by the government. Druggists were not required to register sales of that kind and the only obligation of the druggist was that he place a label on the bottle with the word "poison" thereon in letters of a good size. This alcohol was so refined to under the Ontario Temperance Act. It was a poison [illegible] undrinkable for that reason. Questioned on that point, Mr. Moncur stated that it was put as palatable as turpentine and so were poisonous. He did not see how restrictions could be placed upon the sale of the preparation. It was a commercial commodity used by painters in making varnish, etc., and in anti-freezing solutions for auto radiators in the cold weather. It was not similar in any way to grain alcohol and the only element of trouble was the name, alcohol. Mr. Moncur suggested that the name might be changed to metaylene or some such term and thus eliminate the suggestive term now applied to it which led many uninformed persons to believe that ti was not a poison and that the druggists were only bluffing when they labelled it such.

Mr. Moncur stated that his clerk sold Faux a bottle of alcohol on Saturday, Dec. 8th and later in the day he sold him another bottle himself. Faux stated that he wanted it for a horse and as it is often used for such a purpose, Mr. Moncur did not doubt him. He labelled both bottles poison.

Labelled as Poison

Mr. Joseph Clancey, the clerk who sold Faux his first bottle of alcohol, was the next witness. He stated that he had sold him a bottle which according to the buyer was for a horse. He remarked that it was poison and labelled it such.

Does Not Require Restriction

Mr. McDairmid, president of the local association of druggists was next examined. He described in technical terms the composition of wood alcohol, Columbian and methylated spirits. He did not see why the sale of alcohol should be restricted. It was a poison and so were many other drugs which people werenot required to sign for when buying.

Faux Still Sick

Emmett Faux was the last witness. He looked far from well and Coroner Greer directed that a chair be placed in the witness box for him. He told his story which was none too clear in regard to time and other points of importance.

Witness claimed that he had taken only $3.00 from Bourgon for the alcohol. He corroborated what the widow had said in regard to her husband refusing the first bottle he had offered him. He stated that it was Bourgon who had suggested getting the concoction which he made by mixing Columbian spirits equally with ginger wine. He admitted that the bottle had been labelled poison and upon drawing the attention of Bourgon to that fact the reply was "that's all bluff on the part of the druggists." Bourgon had asked that the stuff be brought to his home in a ginger wine bottle so that his wife would no see the poison label on the druggist's bottle.

A peculiar feature of the case was that when the bottle which was still half full was submitted to Mr. Moncur he stated that it was not Columbian spirits that was in it but methylated alcohol. He stated after rubbing it on the palm of his hand that there was a difference between the two preparations which was easily detected. This would lead to the supposition that if Faux purchased Columbian spirits as Mr. Moncur said he did and as he stated he did it his own evidence he must not have used them in preparing the liquor in that particular bottle.

Canadian Credits Likely To Be Established at Early Date.

Ottawa, Jan. 7. — With reference to the matter of Canadian credits to be available for the purchase of commodities in Canada required for the rebuilding and reconstruction of France, it is stated officially that immediately after the signing of the armistice, negotiations were opened by the Minister of Finance with representatives of the French government in the United States looking to the establishments of such credits. The matter was duly placed before the French government for consideration, and it is expected that the members of the Dominion Government now overseas and the representatives of the Canadian Trade Mission, who are about to visit Paris, will be able to complete arrangements at an early date. The Government here has cabled all necessary information as to the terms of the proposed credit.

DOMINION POLICE RECEIVE ORDERS TO RENEW THEIR ACTIVITIES.

Toronto, Jan. 7.—Within a week the Dominion Police under Capt. Thomas Flanagan will resume their task of apprehending defaulters and deserters under the Military Service Act. When the armistice was signed numbers of men were awaitng calls for service and had received extensions of exemption. Within a week or so these will have been sifted out fromt hose who are liable to arrest. To avoid unpleasant situations it was decided to move slowly until the Registrar had completed his duties.

The demobilization of soldiers from overseas and those who were awaiting orders in this district when hostilities suddenly ceased is being speedily proceeded with. Eight thousand men have returned from overseas to this district within the past two months, and a considerable number has been discharged. In addition 2,900 men who were on duty in the district have been released from further service. It is stated that the accommodation necessary for demobilization when the military authorities will have to vacate the Exhibition buildings which are now being used will be secured by renting buildings adjacent to the railway sidings, and possibly the airplane factory of the Curtis firm on Dufferin street.

WORK AGENCIES EAST AND WEST

GOV'T REPRESENTATIVES WILL TAKE UP ORGANIZATION AT ONCE.

Ottawa, Jan. 7.—Bryce M. Stewart, Director of Labor Research and Employment Service, who has charge of the Federal Government's work in connection with the establishment of employment agencies and clearing houses throughout the country will leave about the middle of the week for Winnipeg. While there he will meet Thomas Molloy, Secretary of the Saskatchewan Bureau of Labor, who is taking charge of organization work in the west for the Federal Government, to discuss the opening of the Government employment clearing house at Winnipeg. Mr. Molloy has already discussed with the Western Provincial Governments the points at which employment offices will be established, and has assisted at the installation of some of them. The better control of private employment agencies has also been the subject of communication between the Western Provincial Governments and Mr. Molloy.

The work of organizing the system of employment agencies in the Maritime Provinces has been placed in charge of E. McG. Quirk of the Canada Registration Board, who leaves Ottawa to-morrow evening, and will have a conference with members of the New Brunswick Government on January 9. The Dominion Government intends opening about a dozen employment agencies throughout the Maritime Provinces, and also one clearing house for labor. The financial burden will be borne by the Federal Government, as the Provincial Governments of the Maritime Provinces are not yet able to support it, but it is hoped to secure the co-operation of the municipalities to the extent of obtaining free premises, light and heat, the Government meeting all salary and other expenses. Mr. Quirk will also visit Halifax and Charlottetown.

UNIQUE SERVICE IN MONTREAL

PROTESTANTS AND NON-ENGLISH SPEAKING CLERGY JOIN IN SACRAMENT.

Montreal, Jan. 7.—A service that was probably unique in the history of Protestant Churches of Montreal was held in the American Presbyterian Church on Sunday. Holy Communion was administered by Rev. Dr. Johnston, who was assisted by representatives of all the Protestant churches of the city as well as by representatives of non-English-speaking congregations. The Welsh Church was represented by Rev. W. Jones, the Italian Church by Rev. Raphael de Piero, the French churches by Rev. Prof. Bieler, and the Chinese church by Rev. Mr. Thomson. The service was thus remarkable for its comprehensive national character as well as for its unity of spirit. The congregation was a large one, including members of many congregations, as well as several visitors to the city. In concluding the service, Rev. Dr. Johnston referred to it as a happy augury of the larger spirit of unity and brotherhood that characterized the new era, a spirit in which the Christian churches must lead.

Sometimes Judge Too Hastily.

It might be advisable for us to sound our own depths and backgrounds and cultivate a certain perspective and foreground for the people we ruthlessly condemn as hopelessly impossible, and so put so much greater an impediment in the way of their advancement to better things. Criticism is a cruel and too often an entirely unnecessary weapon to wield against those with whom we come in contact. There are very few people who are really "impossible" if only we would make the effort to find their good and worthwhile virtues.—Exchange.

Crimean War.

The Crimean war occurred in 1853-55, between Russia on one side and the allied forces of Turkey, France and Great Britain on the other. It grew out of dominating and aggressive claims by Russia. The war took its name from that it was mainly waged in a Russian peninsula on the border of the Black sea, a strip of country called Krim or Crim by the Russians and Anglicized as Crimea, pronounced Crim-ea, with the I short as in criminal and accent on the second syllable.

Cops Stand the Strain.

A well-known scientist informs us that closing the eyes and relaxing the muscles for a space of five minutes several times a day helps one to stand the strain of war-time conditions. And here we have been blaming the cop when they were doing a wise and excellent thing, especially when they were waited by belated citizens, who were holding a hurried session with

POPE BENEDICT MEETS WILSON

Rome, Jan. 7.—President Wilson was received at the Vatican by Pope Benedict.

The President's arrival was announced by the Master of the Chamber to the Pope who awaited the President in the throne room where placed. The President was admitted immediately to the presence of the Pope who was gowned in white.

On his way to the throne room the President was accompanied by a procession of Vatican servants. The procession made its way through halls filled with antique pictures and precious tapestries.

As the President entered the antechamber to the Papal apartments he was preceded by the pontifical chamberlain. Gendarmes in immense busbies and the Palatine Guard and the Noble Guard in their red tunics were drawn up to meet him.

In his conversation with President Wilson the Pontiff gave expression to identical sentiments and enlarged upon the themes. In view of the President's recognition of the papal peace offer months ago the reception of the American executive at the Vatican today was looked forward to with great interest in all official circles and the warm greetings exchanged by President and Pontiff were comented upon with much satisfaction here. President while here continued the discussion of Italy's proposed claims before the peace conference, but the measure of the American support of them has not yet been fully developed and seem not likely to be before further conferences.

Old New York Tree.

The oldest tree in New York, or anywhere near the city, is probably the famous tulip tree near the south bank of the Harlem ship canal, a few hundred yards from the Hudson river. The foresters have estimated its age at something near three centuries, but that guess may be somewhat short of its true age, for the trunk is far from symmetrical, and had been subjected to hard usage before the park department repaired its burned and rotted interior and put an iron fence around it to keep vandals at a distance.

Ideal Union.

What greater thing is there for two human souls, than to feel that they are joined for life—to strengthen each other in all labor, to rest in each other in all sorrow, to minister to each other in all pain, to be one with each other in silent, unspeakable memories at the moment of the last parting?—George Eliot.

Sang Praises of Heroes.

According to classic mythology Clio was the goddess who sang of glorious actions, bestowing her praise on heroes. An ancient statue represents her as a beautiful woman with a roll of manuscript and the trumpet of fame in her hand, as if recording and spreading the fame of heroes.

Latin Derivative.

Corporal is derived from the same Latin word as captain, but with an admixture of the meaning and spelling of the English word corps. Caporalis in medieval Latin meant a chief or commander; hence the French caporal.

Teach Children to Be Kind.

THIS WOMAN ONLY WEIGHED 90 POUNDS

TAKES TANLAC AND SHE NOW WEIGHS 135 POUNDS—CONDITION WAS ALARMING.

"When my wife began taking Tanlac she only weighed ninety pounds and she now weighs on hundred and thirty-five, giving her an actual gain of forty-five pounds," said Clarence E. Malin, the well-knwon contractor, living at 815 West Fifty-first street, Seattle, Wash., recently.

Mr. Martin's statement, while indeed remarkable, is by no means exceptional, as thousands of well-known people all over America have testified that they have used the Master Medicine with the same astonishing and gratifying results.

"Mrs. Milan commenced to fail in strength and go down hill two years, just after the birth of our last baby," continued Mr. Malin. "Her appetite was very poor and she would get so weak and dizzy at times that she would have to catch hold of something to keep from falling. The least little thing would bring on one of these dizzy spells. She always suffered this way just after getting up in the morning and was hardly ever free from headaches. I have known her to go five or six nights in succession without getting any sound sleep and I don't see how on earth she ever managed to law down every little while during the day. As I said before, she only weighed ninety pounds and her condition was getting to be alarming.

"She never seemed to be able to get anything to help her, so I got her to take Tanlac and now she is just like a new person and I have never seen her looking better. Her appetite is just fine, she thoroughly enjoys her food and has not had a sign of dizziness since she began taking Tanlac. She sleeps like a child now, is cheerful and happy all the time and her work is not the least trouble to her.

"Well, I had been suffering a great deal with rheumatism in my arms and shoulders. I could scarcely raise my hands to my head and my right arm especially was so stiff that it took every bit of nerve and will power I had to do any work. So I decided to try Tanlac myself, as it was doing my wife so much good and now I never feel a sign of rheumatism. I can swing my arms and use them without feeling a pain of any kind and I also have picked up five or six pounds since I began taking the medicine. I certainly have every reason for praising Tanlac, for it has been a wonderful thing for both my wife and myself."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co. Ltd.; in Havelock, by A. C. Dentke; in Lakefield, by Tanner Drug Co. Ltd.; in Fowlers' Corners, by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert, by A. J. Scott; in Westwood, by G. Pringle & Son.

IRVIN COBB ON SALVATION ARMY

BEARS TESTIMONY TO GOOD WORK DONE AMONG SOLDIERS AT FRONT.

(Saturday Evening Post)

I have yet to meet any soldier, whether a brigadier or a private soldier, who, if he spoke at all of the Salvation Army, did not speak in terms of fervent gratitude for the aid that the Salvation Army are rendering so unostentatiously and yet so very effectively. Let a sizable body of troops move from one station to another and hard on its heels came a squad of men and women of the Salvation Army. An army truck may bring them, or it may be that they have a battered jitney to move them and their scanty outfits. Usually they do not ask for help from anyone in reaching their destination. They find lodgment in a wrecked shell of a house or in the corner of a barn. By main force and awkwardness they set up their equipment, and very soon the word is spread among the troops that at such-and-such a place the Salvation Army is serving free hot drinks and free doughnuts and free pies. It specializes in doughnuts, the Salvation Army in the field does, the real, old-fashioned, home-made ones that taste of home to a home-sick soldier boy.

I did not see this, but one of my associates did. He saw it last winter in a dismal hole on the Toul sector. A file of our troops were finishing a long hike through rain and snow, over roads knee-deep in half-thawed icy slush. Cold and wet and miserable, they came tramping into a cheerless, half-empty town within sound and range of the German guns. They found a reception committee awaiting them there—in the person of two Salvation Army lasses and one Salvation Army Captain. The women had a fire going in the dilapidated oven of a vanished villager's kitchen.

One of them was rolling out the batter on a plank with an old wine bottle for a rolling pin and using the top of a tin can to cut the dough into circular strips. The other woman was cooking the doughnuts and as fast as they were cooked the man served them out, spitting hot, to hungry, wet boys clamoring about the door, and nobody was asked to pay a cent.

CONNIE MACK'S GUESS

Connie Mackq predicts—thus starting the season very early — that "the's nothing to it," between the Athletics and the other teams next year, if only Uncle Sam will release the club's former players from the army and navy before springtime rolls around. Mack's complete rooster for 1919 includes Pitchers Perry, Gregg, Noyes, Naylor, Jing-Johnson, Siebold, Adams, Myers, Watson, Geary, Anderson and O'Keefe; Catchers Haley, Cdy and Murphy; Infielders George Burns, Shannon, Dugan, Gardner, Witt, Bates and Dykes; Outfielders Walker, Kopp, Bailey and Sharman. Mack is of the opinion that in the pitching department the Athletics will compare favorably with the best teams in the American League.

THREE PLAYERS LAY CLAIM TO YEAR'S BATTING HONORS

Southworth, Wheat and Roush Are Close Together at the Top of National League —Each Has His Supporters.

Since the National League batting averages were published a few days ago the question of "Who is the champion batter of the league?" has come up frequently. It has stirred up considerable discussion among the fans, especially those who had a little wager on who would lead the list. The official figures place the name of Outfielder W. H. Southworth at the top with an average of .341, Z. D. Wheat of Brooklyn second with .335 and Ed Roush of Cincinati third with .333. These three players figure prominently in the controversy as to which is entitled to the crown of champion batsmen of the National League.

President John Heydler of the National league was in Chicago yesterday but he refrained from selecting a champion from among the three men when asked who, in his opinion, was entitled to the honor.

Southworth Has Best Mark

"I do not care to name an official champion. It propably would not be fair to the three men at the head of the list," said Heydler. "Southworth must be given a lot of consideration, although he played in only sixty four games, as compared with 105 by Wheat and 113 by Roush. In an ordinary season Southworth would not be recognized the champion, but in view of the short National League schedule one is compelled to refrain from taking any credit away from him."

Eastern experts and fans are handing the wreath to Wheat, because he played in forty-one games more than Southworth. This and the fact that he batted only six points less than the Pirates' outfielder, they think entitles him to championship. In Pittsburgh Southworth and no one else is regarded as the king of the 1918 batters in the National League, and in Cincinnati the fans believe Roush deserves a lot of credit because he played in 113 games, eight more than Wheat, and batted .333, only two points less than the latter.

Think Roush Deserves Honor

"A wonderful catch of a difficult fly ball deprived Ed Roush of the batting championship of the National league. And a strange feature in connection with it is the fact that Roush made the catch himself, and didn't have a hit taken away from him. This apparent impossibility, first pointed out in the Times-Star, is confirmed by the official averages, and goes on record as one of the most freakish happenings, perhaps, in baseball history. If Roush had muffed that fly, or let it drop untouched, he would have led the league in batting.

"During a game against St. Louis with a Cardinal runner on third, Roush tore in for a short, fast-dropping fly. He got hold of the ball but stumbled, went to his knees, and let it go out of his hands. By a marvellous, lightning grab, he got the ball before it touched the ground and, rising, threw to third base, whence the Cardinal runner had started for the plate. Roush claimed a double play on the ground that the runner had left before the ball was caught, and Hank O'Day, the umpire sustained the claim.

Game is Thrown Out

"But the rules say that a runner can start from a base after a fly ball has been "momentarily held." Jack Hendricks, manager of the Cardinals promptly protested the game on the ground that Roush had momentarily held the ball before he dropped and recovered it. The St. Louis claim was allowed; the game, and all that was done therein went off the records. And, as it happened, Roush had made two hits out of three times at bat that afternoon. He lost the hits, and with those hits, he lost the championship and the honor of leading the league two years in succession.

"According to the official records, Zack Wheat of Brooklyn finished with 409 times at bat and 137 hits—a record of .335. Roush wound up with 433 times at bat and 145 hits. Put in the ousted game, and Roush would have had 438 bats with 147 hits—a record of .336."

May Not Declare Champions

Although Southworth, Wheat and Roush are the three leading hitters in the National league, and their friends and admirers in the towns in which they played think they are entitled to the championship, not one of the three will be officially crowned with the title. The season will have to go on without champion unless President Heydler takes it upon himself at a later date to make a ruling that will concede the slugging honors to one of the trio. If he does not do this it will be the first year in which the league has not had a recognized champion.

Is Life Insurance Safe?

How often we hear the question, "Would Life Insurance Companies stand the extra strain of a great epidemic?"

This question is now answered by experience. We have passed through the greatest war in history, and on its heels and overlapping it came the most malignant epidemic ever experienced on this Continent, one that claimed more victims in two months from the people of Canada and the United States than the war did in four and one-third years.

The fact that the surplus of every one of the old Established Companies of Canada has not only been maintained but increased, answers the above question most eloquently, and proves that Life Insurance is not only safe, but IMPREGNABLE.

Experience proves that it is as safe as a Victory Bond, and, in the event of death, infinitely better.

THE SUN LIFE OF CANADA has distributed more to compensate for the terrible wastage of the recent War and Epidemic than any other Company in Canada.

Is it not, then, a wise place in which to carry your Insurance?

40th YEAR No. 6 Peterborough's Oldest Newspaper PETERBOROUGH, ONTARIO, WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 8, 1919. Price Two Cents Per Copy

WILL TAKE OVER BONDS OF THOSE WHO CANNOT PAY

W. B. Cumming in City Yesterday on Mission Which Will Bring Comfort to Victory Bond Buyers Now Out of Work.

Mr. Wallace B. Cumming of the financial firm of C. Meredith & Co., Ltd., Toronto, who was the efficient county organizer of the victory loan campaign in Peterborough, was in the city yesterday in connection with business of the most vital importance to a great many people.

When the loan campaign was in progress many employes in munition factories subscribed upon the instalment plan, the money to meet their obligation being deducted by their employer upon each pay day from the amount they received.

The amount subscribed to the loan by such employes and in this manner was most important, especially in centres where large munition industries were being carried on as was the case in Peterborough.

Shortly after the start of the Victory Loan Campaign came the signing of the armistice and the resultant closing off of contracts for munitions. As soon as the contracts were completed there being no others to engage the plants, operations ceased and a great army of shell workers were turned out of work many of whom had assumed obligations to contribute so much money out of each week's pay towards discharging the debt they had incurred by their subscription to the loan.

These employes contracted for so many bonds believing that the work in which they were engaged would continue long enough to assure them of an opportunity of making good their promise. Many of them had only made one or two payments before the armistice rang the death knell of the employment which had been paying them wages of such a liberal nature as to justify them in assuming such a financial responsibility.

The question arose what was to be done in the case of this great army of subscribers to the loan who through lack of further employment could not redeem their bonds? It was a problem which caused the government thought and which worried the employers who felt a certain measure of responsibility in connection with the matter. The employes themselves were at a loss to know how to proceed.

Yesterday Mr. Cumming made the statement that the house he represented was ready to take over the bonds of all such subscribers who felt they could not continue their payments and redeem their bonds. These bonds will be assumed and the holders reimbursed for every cent they expended upon them. In other words the Meredith Co. takes over their bonds after paying them back the money they have put into them and frees them from further obligation in connection with them.

This was the business which brought Mr. Cumming to the city, yesterday and which was responsible for his visit to Lindsay today. The scheme seems very reasonable and presents a solution of the difficult situation in which some of those who subscribed to the loan and are unable to carry out their good intentions find themselves.

There is no doubt as to the value of Victory Bonds as an investment. During the campaigns in this city and elsewhere the fact that the loan aside from its patriotic aspect presented an excellent field for investment was continually emphasized. The fact that financial companies and bond houses are ready to buy these securities is conclusive evidence of their value and no one who can continue payments or can afford to leave the money subscribed, in the loan, should part with the bonds but for those who cannot continue their payments upon the stipulated plan the opportunity to unload their holdings and at the same time receive back the money they have put into them should be well received.

GOVERNMENT IS PLEDGED, SAYS R. R. HALL, TO HELP IN BUILDING THE NEW BRIDGE

Asserts in Open Letter to Mayor Duncan That as Much Was Promised Him While He Was Member for West Peterborough

Dear Mr. Mayor,—

I have noticed by the press that the Hon. F. B. Carveli, Minister of Public Works is visiting Peterborough and that you have made certain representations to him in reference to the construction of the new Hunter street bridge and the contribution that the Government should reasonably make.

During the time I had the honor of being member for West Peterborough this matter was informally taken into consideration by the Hon. Sidney Fisher, who was then Actinv Minister of Public Works, and later by the Hon. Wm. Pupsley, who subsequently became Minister of Public Works early in the fall of 1907.

I observe that on the 1st of April, 1907, Mr. J. G. Sing, engineer in charge for the Department of Public Works, wrote me as follows:

"On the 23rd June last I sent to the chief engineer a report, plan and estimate of cost of constructing a channel north of the Hunter street bridge about 100 feet in width with a turning basin at the northerly end, thereof 150 feet x 300 feet. This channel extends about 1,000 feet north of the Hunter street bridge.

"Also on the 27th of December last, I wrote to the chief engineer with reference to constructing the channel north of the Hunter street bridge, stating that a certain portion of this work would have to be blasted and that I had made an examination and was of the opinion that the blasting could be carried on successfully during the winter months. The material would then be ready to be removed by the dredge in the spring.

"In reply to the above I received instructions from Ottawa dated the 6th of February, to proceed immediately with the workof drilling and blasting in the Otonabee river in

SAYS IRWIN DIED A NATURAL DEATH

CORONER'S JURY RENDER VERDICT AFTER HEARING MASS OF EVIDENCE.

Last night the inquest into the death of Walter Irwin, who it was thought to have died as did Bourgon, as a result of drinking methylated spirits, was resumed in the police court chamber before Coroner Dr. Greer and the original jury empanelled.

Mrs. Gray, the mother, was the first witness called. She said there was no bottle found and that her son had complained of a pain in the back of his eye on Sunday and although he got up on Monday he soon went back to bed. His last words were: "You may think I have been drinking but I haven't."

Wm. Flood testified that he had seen Walter Irwin at the King George Hotel on Saturday night and again on Sunday night but judging from appearances he was sober on both occasions.

Dr. Malcolm McCulloch in his testimony stated that he had been called to Irwin's bedside on Monday morning at 9 o'clock and that he had found his patient unconscious and delirious and just got him to the hospital when he died.

He concluded that the immediate cause of his condition was an overdistended bladder.

Emmet Faux, one of the more fortunate victims of the wood-alcohol drinking bout, inasmuch as he escaped with his life appeared in the witness box looking much better than he did on the previous night when he gave testimony at the Bourgon inquest.

He stated that he met Irwin on the Saturday night before his death on the corner of Simcoe and George streets. Deceased asked him if he knew where he could procure some liquor whereupon Faux told him of the recipe which Bourgon had compiled for making a drinkable beverage.

Irwin was interested in the hope held out to him by Faux of obtaining some drink and accompanied him to a drug store where he remained outside while the witness went in and purchased a bottle of Columbian spirits which he stated he handed over to Irwin upon emerging from the store. This was the last he ever saw of the deceased, who according to the testimony of the mother given at the beginning of the inquest complained of a pain behind the eye next day passed away with great suddenness on Monday morning as described by the doctor.

CANADA LIKELY TO PAY COSTS

OF BRINGING SOLDIERS' FAMILIES BACK TO THIS COUNTRY.

London, Jan. 8.—It is reported that a decision has been reached by which the Canadian Government is to bear the cost of taking the wives and families of Canadian soldiers in England out to Canada, which scheme will probably involve reimbursing those who in the past paid out of their own pocket for the bringing out of their wives and children. This question has been agitating thousands of overseas men.

The exhibition of the new Canadian official war photographs was opened at the Grafton Galleries this afternoon before a large gathering. Brief addresses were delivered by Lord Beaverbrook, Sir Edward Kemp, Sir Robert Borden and General Sir Arthur Currie. The latter received an ovation as he rose to speak.

A tribute to the photographers' work in the fewest words came as General Currie concluded tensely viewing the pictures. "Thoughts come to my mind too deep for words," he said.

HON. F. B. CARVELL HAS INFLUENZA

WILL KEEP ENGAGEMENT HERE AS SOON AS HE RECOVERS.

A message received by Capt. Burnham, M.P., states than Hon. Frank B. Carvell, who was to have arrived in the city today and would have addressed a large mass meeting in the Grand Opera House this evening is very ill with influenza.

It is stated in the telegram that the Minister of Public Works is so ill as to be unable to leave his bed and that his voice has been affected to such an extent that he is unable to speak above a whisper. Capt. Burnham is assured, however, that as soon as he has sufficiently recovered Mr. Carvell will keep his engagement and visit the city.

FIGHTING FOR VILNA

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Warsaw, Jan. 8.— Fighting for possession of Vilna has begun between the Poles and the Bolsheviki, having first lapsed into unconsciousness as did Bourgon before his demise and denying that he had drank anything.

After hearing the evidence the jury brought in a verdict ascribing death to natural causes.

SOLDIERS URGE POWERS TO ACT

DEMONSTRATION IN LONDON REQUESTS GOVT. TO SPEED UP DISBANDING.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Jan. 8.—Soldiers objecting to delay in the demobilization of the British armies engaged in further demonstrations today. The vicinity of the war office was invaded by lorries filled with men and by marching soldiers. They came from Shoreham Camp. Many of them were on leave from Salonica and objected to being sent back. On the sides of the lorries were signs reading "Get a move on, We won the war. Give us our tickets, Get on with it, Lloyd George," and other similar sentiments. Although they refused to disperse until deputation by officials who assured them that Viscount Milner and General Robertson were adjusting their grievances.

General Hemming Dies Suddenly

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Kingston, Jan. 8.—Major-General T. D. R. Hemming, commanding Military District No. 3, died here this morning, after a brief illness. He had recently been promoted from brigadier-general and was to retire shortly, to be succeeded by Major-General V. A. S. Williams.

Military men in the district had planned to tender the late General Hemming a farewell banquet, which was set for this evening. Col. J. Mills of this city left for Kingston today to attend the funeral.

REPORTS DIFFER AS TO SITUATION

ONE NEWSPAPER SAYS THAT SOLDIERS' COUNCIL HAS JOINED GOVERNMENT.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Basle, Switzerland, Jan. 8.—The German semi-official Wolff bureau, which was removed to Frankfort when its Berlin office was seized by the Spartacans, sent out a message yesterday declaring that the Berlin Soldiers' and Workmen's Council and garrison of the city had placed themselves on the side of the government. The Frankfort Anzeiger, on the other hand, declared that the Spartacans continued to occupy some of the public buildings. They easily gained control of the railways, the newspaper adds, and the employes ceased to run trains.

PREMIER LENINE IS UNDER ARREST

BY ORDER OF TROTZKY WITH WHOM HE HAD DISPUTE.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Copenhagen, Jan. 8.—Nikolai Lenine, the Bolshevist Premier of Russia, has been arrested at the command of Leon Trotsky, Minister of war and marine, who has made himself dictator according to a Moscow despatch. Trotsky was prompted to make the arrest because of a difference of opinion with Lenine concerning Bolshevik reforms. The despatch states that Lenine desired to effect a coalition with Mensheviki or Moderates, while Trotsky wished to continue the reign of red terror.

BLOOD FLOWS IN BERLIN STREETS; TROOPS READY

MARSHAL HINDENBURG IS SAID TO HAVE ARRIVED IN CITY.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Jan. 8.—Several hundred persons have been killed in fighting in Berlin, according to a Copenhagen despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company, but up till 2 o'clock this morning no details or conditions in that city had been received. The government seems, at least provisionally, to be master of the situation.

Early on Tuesday morning the Berlin government massed troops outside the city. The troops are ready to enter, it is said, in a despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co. Field Marshal von Hindenburg is reported to have arrived in Berlin. Street fighting has been particularly sanguinary, it is said, owing to the fact that the Spartacus element has plenty of weapons taken from the munition factories at Spandau. While machine guns were firing and bombs were dropping, moving picture operators were busily recording the scenes enacted in the streets. It was announced recently that the American army had sent moving picture operators to Berlin.

POLES FIGHTING DESPERATELY TO SAVE LEMBERG

TWENTY THOUSAND TROOPS ARE NOW ENGAGED AGAINST BESEIGING FORCE.

(By Associated Press)

Warsaw, Jan. 8.—Stiff fighting still continues around Lemberg, where the Poles are defending themselves tenaciously against the Lutheniens. The water and electric supplies to the city have been cut by the besiegers. Bloody hand to hand fighting has occurred daily in the suburbs. Virtually all available troops of the polish army have been sent to Lemberg in an effort to save that city. The Polish forces there are said to number twenty thousand and are being assisted by many civilians, men, boys and women. The civilians are dressed in Austrian uniforms and helmets left behind when the Austrians retired from Lemberg.

The Railway Commission heard arguments at Ottawa by representatives of express companies which are seeking the permission to increase their rates.

The testimony of returned soldiers about conditions on the Northland is concluded and Mr. Justice Hodgins will hear Major Westmore conducting officer and officers of the ship.

DANCING IN THE COLLEGIATE HALL.

AS A SIMPLE MATTER of justice to a considerable percentage of the ratepayers of the city, Trustee G. N. Gordon's protest against the proposal to allow dancing in the assembly hall of the Collegiate Institute should prevail when the matter comes before the Board of Education as constituted for the current year. There are people in Peterborough who object to dancing on religious and other grounds. It is not a question of whether in this these people are right or wrong. They are entitled to their opinions, and their scruples must be respected when it comes to debating the question of dancing in a public building in the city. The ratepayers who object to dancing would not voluntarily contribute to a fund to erect and maintain a building in which this form of amusement was to be permitted. Is it fair, then, to employ the machinery of the tax law to compel them to do so?

The assembly hall in the Collegiate Institute was designed for the holding of gatherings of an educational nature, gatherings to which no man, however keen his power of discernment, could possibly object. Dancing has not yet been placed on the curriculum of the Ontario schools. Even its educative value has not yet been satisfactorily established by its most ardent votaries.

In nearly every city in Ontario and in towns where such annexes are found in connection with the school buildings, this same question has at some time or other arisen. Almost as invariably it is decided, too, in favor of the conscientious objector to dancing.

A FIFTEENTH PEACE POINT.

SINCE THE SIGNING of the armistice the Cologne Chamber of Commerce began preparing for peace, as it properly should. It adopted a set of resolutions, however, expressing the hope that the destruction of French and Belgian industries would allow a rapid recovery of German power. This makes it seem as if freedom of the seas and some other points might be laid aside for a little and consideration given to a fifteenth term for peace.

In substance, that point should declare that Germany shall not profit through the wrecking of any Allied industry. Except to admit necessary foodstuffs, the blockade should not be lifted until every Allied country from England to Serbia has been industrially rebuilt. One object of the wholesale murder of civilians was to weaken industrially the enmey countries. The greater proportionate loss of man-power in the Allied countries should be met by restrictions on the entry of raw materials into Germany. Every piece of stolen machinery should be returned before her own industries are allowed to resume.

One of the departments of the Government at Washington, according to the Wall Street Journal, has in its files a report of a German commission on industry after the war. Reading this, one can understand the motive for what at one time looked like pure vandalism. Vandalism it was, by descendants of the Vandals, but it was a deliberate destruction of international competitors, killing the workmen—and workwomen—and destroying plants and machinery for the one purpose of removing competition. A physical injury to a child helped to weaken future competition in the world's trade; and it was upon the power gained thereby that Germany hoped to launch another war for world domination.

Of the 240 beet sugar factories in France the day war was declared, only 69 remain, and those are not in the invaded district. Three-fourths of the French sugar industry is laid low in order that German sugar may have a wider market. The same is true in Poland where sugar was largely produced. The coal mines in France and Belgium have been flooded and the surface machinery destroyed so that it may take one or two years to pump out and retimber them. The cotton, wool, flax and silk spindles and looms of France and Belgium were competitors of Germany, therefore towns were razed to the ground, and large numbers of the workers shot, starved to death, maimed or sent into Germany, all for the advancement of German industry and "kultur."

A peace that gives the cold-blooded perpetrators of these crimes an advantage over their victims would not be [illegible]. It may not outlaw, but let it be those who are guilty, but don't give them a start ahead of their victims.

SALVATION ARMY DRIVE.

ALL THE FORCES are being organized for the Salvation Army drive which will be inaugurated in this city and throughout the country on January 19th. The object is to raise in Canada one million dollars to help the Salvation Army in its war work, and of this amount the city and county of Peterborough is asked to contribute $30,000.

A long list of reasons can be urged in support of the claims of the Salvation Army upon the generosity of the public. The organization was the first to take up systematic war work, and it can be taken for granted that the Salvation Army will remain in the same field so long as there is any deed of mercy to perform.

Even though the Army has been working from the first at home, in the training camps and on the battle front, this is the first campaign to raise funds for war work that has ever been inaugurated on its behalf.

In war work, as in its own chosen duty at home, the Salvation Army gives special attention to the corners of the vineyard that are neglected or overlooked by the other denominations.

The Salvation Army's war record, so far as actual fighting is concerned, stands above reproach, as over ninety thousand of its members took their places in the fighting line. When reinforcements were needed for the battalions, every officer of the Salvation Army gave his services in the work of recruiting.

In Peterborough, the Salvation Army has done all that could be expected of any organization. Its members were among the first to enlist, and when the draft law was put into effect here, not one eligible man could be found in the local corps. All such had volunteered for the service. This is a record which cannot be equaled by any denomination or organization in the city, and demonstrates that in the more strenuous branch of war service the Salvation Army members in this city realized their duty and did not hesitate to perform it.

Brigadier Jennings of the Salvation Army is here to help in the work of organization for the coming drive. No better man could have been selected for this duty, as he was formerly in charge of the corps in this city, during which time he won the esteem and confidence not only of his own associates but of the public generally. The captains and workers who helped so efficiently in campaigns in this city conducted on behalf of other organizations will again render their aid, and there should be no doubt as to the result.

The war work which the Salvation Army has assumed as its special mission will be necessary for years to come, so long as there is a soldier to be cared for or a widow or orphan threatened by want as a result of the sacrifice made by husband and father.

THE REPATRIATION COMMITTEE.

THE REPATRIATION COMMITTEE of Canada is directed by Mr. H. J. Daly. It co-ordinates and concentrates the various governmental activities touching the demobilization of soldiers and war workers, the opportunities offered them for employment, and the readjustment of industrial conditions in Canada.

The problems which the Government faces are four:

To bring the soldiers home.

To fit those who have suffered overseas for useful employment.

To have ready for each soldier and war worker an acceptable opportunity for employment.

To insure proper living and working conditions.

Governmental and voluntary activities solve these problems. The Repatriation Committe guides their solution, prevents overlapping and waste motion and promotes harmony and efficiency.

WITH FLYING COLORS.

(Saskatoon Star.)

ONE RELIGIOUS organization at least is going to emerge from the war with flying colors. The work of the Salvation Army at the front is going to be remembered by the soldiers as long as they live. A little story, published some time ago, of a Salvation Army doughnut wagon blown up by a German shell, and the prompt and decisive revenge accomplished by the American soldiers, who, fighting mad, laid down a curtain barrage and smashed the enemy trenches by a well-organized and effective raid, is merely illustrative of the fact that the Salvationists are working in posts of danger, and in doing it appealing to the men to whom they are ministering.

The Salvation Army folk have a somewhat different conception of duty from other organizations. They are not over there for the sole purpose of ministering to the souls of the soldiers or solely to their bodily comfort. They are over there to be useful as opportunity presents itself, and their work has won them high regard. When opportunity offers they hold evangelical service. When the boys want "smkers" and coffee the Army men and lassies supply them if they can beg, buy or steal them. They are working efficiently and gaining the love and admiration of the troops by their work. None of the soldiers, when they come back, will sneer at the other "Army."

OPINIONS OF OTHER EDITORS.

Why Not Perpetuate It?

(Toronto Star.

The Allies have been acting together in the closest and most cordial way during the war. Why should this co-operation cease after the war? It may take a long time to frame a constitutional for a league of nations.

NO CUT IN COST OF LIVING

The outlook for any reduction in prices that will materially affect the cost of living is remote at the present time, the general opinion in most of the leading lines of industry being that until the cost of labor comes down and the difficulty of obtaining raw materials at cheaper prices is removed, the public cannot expect any reduction in the prices of merchandise. The most favorable indications of a lowering of prices during the coming year come from the grocery and food lines of business.

Some of the leading firms in these lines express an opinion that there may be an easing up of prices on all imported goods, such as tapioca, dried fruits and other things that were received from Europe in large quantities before the war. Sugar will be reduced in price somewhat now that the transportation situation is likely to be better.

All sea-borne cargoes have been extremely high during the war, and much of the imported stuff has been out of reach. This has tended to raise the cost of all such things as were formerly supplied to a considerable extent from abroad. One leading wholesale house stated that not long ago the sea-borne charges on tea, for instance, were nearly as much as the tea itself.

Dry Goods Remain Firm.

The situation in the dry goods lines is much the same. People who were optimistic and expected a quick reduction in prices following the signing of the armistice and the declaration of peace will not realize their hopes in the near future. One leading firm of wholesalers in the dry goods line says that as a matter of fact the manufacturers' prices for 1919 are higher than those for 1918. There is some diversity of opinion as to how long the situation will remain as it is, but the general impression is that prices will remain stationary in woollen, cotton and linen goods for some time yet, though so long as wages are high this will not mean any hardship to the consumer.

Big Demand for Leather.

In the leather industry there is every indication that the demand for leather will tend to keep prices high. There will be a big demand for harness leather of all kinds in the west, owing to the fixing of prices for grains, and the consequent encouragement to the farmers to cultivate more land. This will, of course, affect the supply of leather for all purposes, such as shoe manufacturing, and along with the big demand for shoes in Europe will help to maintain the present high prices for this line of necessities. One wholesale leather firm said recently that Europe has walked itself barefoot now and will have to be supplied with shoes and all sorts of leather to a tremendous extent.

The requirements of Europe during the reconstruction period will materially affect the price of all kinds of hardware also. The cost of raw material in this industry is so high that there is no prospect of any reduction in prices for household articles in the immediate future. Wages will remain high, too, and this, with the high transportation charges, will fix things stationary for some time.

Crockery and Glassware.

The crockery and glassware trade has been affected equally with all other lines of business, but the situation in this line is more dependent on the cost of labor than anything else. In staffordshire, where most of the imported crockery comes from, the manufacturers have made a wage agreement with their employes that will keep the prices up indefinitely. The same thing applies to the manufacture of American glassware, which is mostly pressed glass. Wages have been guaranteed at high rates for a long time, and until labor is cheaper the cost of the manufactured articles will be high.

Formerly a lot of fancy crockery was imported from Germany, but this trade has gone almost entirely to Japan in the last year or two, and there is a far better handling of this Japanese articles than there ever was of the German goods. Japan will hold this trade now as she can supply the demand at lower prices than the Germans will ever be able to manufacture for again.

TODAY'S STORY

A two-seater was amling along one day about 10,000 feet in the sky. The pilot looked about him constantly as he watched for dangers, but the observer made notes and corrected his maps as he noticed what was happening on the ground below. These two men were not expected to fight, they were out for information, and their airplane was hardly adapted for combat.

But just as the flight was over and the observer was folding his notebook and maps he was made to look up by the rocking from side to side of his machine. That was the signal used by the pilot to draw the other man's attention. The observer sighted trouble. German airships were making a formation, and twelve to one was big odds. It was hopeless to think of getting back to the lines; the only thing to do was to use the guns.

Things went badly from the first and the speed of the propellers being lessened the pilot dipped the nose of his machine and the two men seemed to be at the mercy of the enemy. Just then, however, four British machines appeared in the distance, and the Germans turned their attention to the newcomers, leaving two of their number to finish up the damaged two seater.

These two German scouts dived at their unfortunate foe, but one of them underestimated his distance and shot past his opponent. That gave the British airmen their chance, though with a foe above and a foe below, it couldn't be considered an extraordinary one. Both men fired at once. The Huns tried to get out of the way, but they were too late. The pilot's gun caught one machine fairly above the engine and the petrol tank. The airship wavered; her nose dropped, and as she began to spin flames burst from the damaged tank.

Then the pilot turned to see how the other man was faring. He had heard the crackle of his gun, but had been too busy with his own affairs to notice what had happened. He was just in time to see the end. As he turned his head the observer's shot took effect, taking off the enemy's planes completely. Whirling rapidly the German machine plunged to the ground, thousands of feet below.

CLASSES FOR BRIGHTER CHILDREN

(By H. Addington Bruce.)

In virtually every city special provision is now made for the education of children who are uncommonly dull. In every city special provision ought also to be made for the education of children who are uncommonly bright.

Some cities already have met this need, which is a really vital one. When it is not met serious criticism of the school system is justified.

For, obviously, if dullards should be put into special classes for their own good and in order not to delay the class work of brighter children, those children who are exceptionally bright should not be handicapped by being obliged to keep pace with children of an intelligence inferior to theirs.

Such exceptional children are surely worth more to any community than its mental defectives, and should be given at least as much consideration.

From their ranks will come the leaders of the future, whose leadership will be efficient and enlightened in proportion as their natural talents have been propery developed.

And the best development is impossible unless the school system is adjusted to the exceptionally bright child's individual needs and possibilities. If this adjustment is not made it may truly be said, in the words of one earnest student of school problems:

"The public schools are not giving the bright child a square deal. He is marking time, waiting for the lame duck to catch up."

Or, as another critic puts it:

"The public school attempts the impossible feat of making a course for all children, irrespective of strength, mentality, inheritance or home environment—whether they are to be lawyers or blacksmiths, artisans or mathematicans. Plainly this course cannot suit all children. It has been suggested that the course has been designed for the average pupil. The 'average' pupil does not exist.

"Instead, then, of a school to fit the pupil, the pupil is made to fit the school. The lockstep masquerades under the name of discipline. The regid curriculum tends with each passing year to produce more and more the type of factory employes, obliterating individuality and forcing all into the same mold."

Happily, as said in the beginning, the bright pupil is here and there getting today the square deal he always should have had. May the process of dealing with him more justly and more rationally than in the past be rapidly and universally extended.

LESSONS IN RIGHT LIVING

(By Dr. W. A. Brady.)

The United States treasury department says, in a pamphlet issued to the public, that

"There should be no peace with prostitution, no truce with the 'red light' district, no armistice with venereal diseases. Unconditional surrender is the government's demand from this enemy at home.

"How do you stand on the program, Mr. Citizen? It is no easy task. It is not a job for sentimentalists or fly by night enthusiasts. It is a task for hard headed business and professional men and capable women. It is a job for citizens who feel responsibility for their community and their nation in time of peace as well as war. With war's final end many war buildings, war jobs and institutions will go to the scrap heap. Don't scrap your patriotism and community spirit in this matter. Make your blows knockouts against vice."

If you wonder why the treasury department is conducting a campaign against venereal disease it may be explained that money in America is an important institution, while health is comparatively unimportant. Therefore the United States treasury department issues this bulletin through one of its subsidiary branches, the public health service. The dollar's the thing.

These pamphlets will not teach you the whole truth, but they will enable you to acquire a reasonable understanding of vital problems. If you fail to avail yourself of the opportunitstive and valuable information tunity here presented to obtain auabout a much misunderstood subject the fault is your own and you may indeed feel ashamed of your dense ignorance. It is now a sin to be ignorant.

Ordinary Doctors Do.

"Do ordinary doctors treat syphilis —I mean are they competent to treat such a disease or should one consult a specialist?" D. E. P."

Specialists are ordinary doctors, are they not? At least I am not aware that a doctor who confines his practice to a given field is extraordinary—more often he is just disinclined to carry on the drudgery of general practice. Every doctor who has as many as a dozen patients must treat more or less syphilis.

Butter Vs. Oleomargarine.

"Please tell me whether oleomargarine, which is said to be made from vegetable oils wholly, is a satisfactory substitute in the diet for butter. MRS. S. C."

If a reasonable quantity of fresh milk is added to the diet the substitution of oleomargarine for butter is unobjectionable from the viewpoint of physiology and nutrition, and certainly an economical advantage. If fresh milk is not included in the diet the oleomargarine made from vegetable fats may (this question has not yet been finally settled) supply insufficient fat soluble vitamin for normal nutrition and growth.

A Peroyide Myth.

"Kindly let me know through the paper whether the continued application of peroxide of hydrogen will eventually kill the roots of superfluous hair on the face? If so, is one year enough? Do you approve the electric needle for the same purpose? A. M. E."

Neither peroxide nor any other known substance applied to the skin will kill the roots of hair. The electric needle in skilled hands is the only effective remedy for superfluous hair on the face; sometimes X-ray treatment is effective for the removal of hair on other parts of the body.

ALARMING SPREAD OF FLU IN OMEMEE AND DISTRICT

Twenty-Five Cases in Village, Eighty in Township and Forty Down With Pneumonia—Only One Doctor in Attendance

(Special to The Review)

Omemee, Jan. 8.—The increase in the number of cases of influenza has reached an alarming stage in and around Omemee with only one doctor here.

In an interview with the busy physician he stated that there are at least twenty five cases of "flu" in the village and over eighty in the country and he is in attendance on forty cases of pneumonia. The New Year's night concert for which great preparations had been made was cancelled as a safeguard.

All stores will close at six p. m., each day except on Saturday when they will remain open until seven. Church service will only be held in the morning and only one Sunday school.

All township schools are closed until further notice and the village school is also closed indefinitely.

19 STATES FAVOR DRY AMENDMENT

TEMPERANCE FORCES IN U. S. CONFIDENT OF GENERAL PROHIBITION.

Washigto, Jan. 8—The claim that congress did not properly adopt the resolution by a two-thirds majority under which the national prohibition amendment to the Federal Constitution is now being submitted to the States was disposed of by the U. S. supreme court in an analagous case. Leaders at he national headquarters of the Anti-Saloon League of America are jubilant not only because this decision, delivered for the court by Chief Justice White puts every real legal obstacle out of the way, but because it was supplemented by news that the legislatures of the States of Ohio, Colorado and Oklahoma yesterday ratified the national prohibition amendment. This makes nineteen out of the necessary thirty-six states that have so far ratified the national prohibition amendment. Enough legislatures will meet this month to have the national prohibition amendment submitted to them all. Prohibition leaders here are claiming that forty-two out of forty-eight states are sure to ratify the amendment. They predict that before the end of January more than the necessary three-fourths of the forty-eight states will have ratified the amendment.

REFUSE TO TREAT WITH TRAITORS

Troops in the government buildings have been equipped with flamethrowers.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH TO RAISE MILLIONS FOR WORK

Branch in United States Begins Campaign to Help Stricken Christian Branches in the War Zone.

Prominent Chicagoans form a part of the laymen's council of the new era movement of the Presbyterian Church of America which began a national drive Sunday and which is expected to prove one of the epochal campaigns of the church. Every Presbyterian church in Chicago and vicinity will observe "Re-enlistment day," on which members will pledge their allegiance to the advanced church program. Henry P. Crowell is chairman of the national laymen's council, and Cyrus H. McCormick, James H. Forgan, John V. Farwell and Frank J. Loesch are members. Associated with them are prominent men from other sections of the United States.

Following the observance of re-enlistment day when the 36,000 members of the church were expected to be enrolled as active workers in the movement, a conference of Presbyterians from four states has been arranged for Chicago on Feb. 11 and 12 at the Fourth Presbyterian church and the Church of the Covenant. Two thousand delegates are expected to attend. They will represent twenty-five presbyteries in Illinois, Indianna, Michigan and Wisconsin.

National Leaders Here

Attending the convention will be many of the nationally known leaders of the church. Among them are Dr. J. Frank Smith, Dallas, Tex., moderator of the general assembly Dr. William H. Foulkes, general secretary of the new era movement; Dr. John A. Marquis, New York, secretary of the board of home missions, and Dr. John R. Davies of Philadelphia, Pa.

"The new era movement was launched by the Presbyterians of America to re-organize the church to meet the demands of changing times," said Henry P. Crowell, who is chairman of the national laymen's council. "It co-ordinates every board and agency in the church. It aims to create a great spiritual awakening in every home, and to put the finances of the church on a modern business basis."

$1,000,000 for Post War Work

The church already plans to appropriate $500,000 for stricken protestant churches in France, Belgium and Italy, and another $500,000 for aiding young men who went forth to war from Presbyterian homes and who return from the front wounded or crippled. The general benevolence budget of the church next year will be $13,000,000, which includes home and foreign missions, educational work and social service activities, and is an increase of 100 per cent. The church aims to carry on relief work as spiritual activities and will seek to alleviate sickness, poverty and distress in every community. Homes touched by the war will have special consideration."

The new era program has an ultimate five year program which will involve the raising and spending of $75,000,000 for progressive church work. It will be done in co-operation with other denominations, and duplication of effort will be carefully avoided. In the homes, the custom of family prayers will be revived, a league of prayer is to be built up among the young people of the church under the name of Comrades of the New Era, and church attendance and the religios life will be emphasized.

HOUSE SERVANTS ARE ON STRIKE

WARSAW DOMESTICS REFUSE TO WORK UNLESS MISTRESS HELPS.

Warsaw, Jan. 8.—The waiters and janitors of Warsaw, who are among the few having steady work and good pay, have gone on strike, and the house servants are expected to follow their example. The domestics even now are only consenting to work if the mistress does her share of the labors of the household, especially the dish-washing and similar services. The waiters demand 15 per cent. of the profits of the hotels and restaurants, while the cooks are asking 25 per cent.

The janitors demand a ten-hour day, with the front doors closed at 9 o'clock in the evening. As the tenants have no keys to the front doors of the apartment houses they are obliged to stay indoors through fear of being compelled to pass the night in the streets. The janitors, however, express a willingness to concede permission for the tenants to go out after 9 o'clock and come in late if they pay a fine of one mark for each time they thus trouble the janitor. Most of the evening engagements of apartment dwellers are being given up owing to this situation and the streets are virtually deserted at night.

HOW JOE BASCOM MADE THE TURN

"TURN TO THE RIGHT" IS PRESENTED TO LARGE AUDIENCE AT GRAND.

Joe Bascom, convicted of a theft he never committed, although the appearances were all against him on account of his free and easy methods of life, spent a year in Sing Sing Prison. Upon his release, his heroic struggle to mend his ways and his efforts to effect the salvation of two former boon companions, form the basis for the story in the play, "Turn to the Right," that was presented to a large and well-pleased audience at the Grand Opera House last night.

Bascom's crop of wild oats had been harvested, when, like the Prodigal Son, save in the matter of attire, he returns home after an absence of fours years, to find everything at sixes and sevens. His sweet-faced and patient old mother and his young sister are to be driven from the homestead for debt by a close-fisted church deacon. Like most playwrights, the author of "Turn to the Right," when he depicts a grasping miser, chooses to camouflage him with a garb of piety. Bascom's former companions appear accidentally in the scene, and by a combination of good work and distinctly questionable practices—the latter not countenanced by the hero—the family estate is saved to its rightful owners. Everyone is reformed who stood in need of reformation, and the play ends with the marriage of at least half a dozen of the leading characters.

The cast was a most excellent one. Joseph Striker, as Joe Bascom, had a difficult role, but was equal to it, while his free-and-easy friends, Howard I. Smith and Allen Mather, made comedy for the audience, especially in their suspicious operations which, when the occasion for them was considered—the happiness of a woman who had befriended them—almost appeared meritorious. Mat. Thompson, as Sam Martin, was a genius in his part, and every member of the cast brought strength and interest to the presentation.

"The Hearts of the World," D. W. Grimth's picture masterpiece, will be at the Grand for the last three days of this week with a daily matinee. This picture had run one day of its engagement here some time ago when the theatre was ordered closed on account of the flu epidemic. It is one of the greatest moving pictures ever produced, and its return to Peterborough will be warmly welcomed.

THIS WOMAN SAVED FROM AN OPERATION

Black River Falls, Wis.—"As Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound saved me from an operation, I cannot say enough in praise of it. I suffered from organic troubles and my side hurt me so I could hardly be up from my bed, and I was unable to do my housework. I had the best doctors in Eau Claire and they wanted me to have an operation, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cured me so I did not need the operation, and I am telling all my friends about it."—Mrs. A. W. BINZER, Black River Falls, Wis.

It is just such experiences as that of Mrs. Binzer that has made this famous root and herb remedy a household word from ocean to ocean. TAPPED SEWER TO SAVE LIQUOR

PLAN OF HULL FIREMEN FAILS AND THEY LOSE JOBS.

Ottawa, Jan. 8.—Canada's thrift campaign appears to have left a permanent impression on certain members of Hull's Fire Department. Under judicial instruction the Hull police undertook to pour several barrels of what was described as "good whiskey" into a civic sewer.

The news of the edict had spread and two thrifty and enterprising Hull firemen decided to do their best to avoid the waste. With care and skill they "tapped" the sewer pipe at the psychological time and place with the result that they secured a considerable quantity of the liquor. Unfortunately for the firemen their scheme was discovered, and before they could make any use of the elixir they were caught by one of their superiors and later discharged.

BEGIN HOT WATER DRINKING IF YOU DON'T FEEL RIGHT

Says glass of hot water with phosphate before breakfast washes out poisons.

If you wake up with a bad taste bad breath and tongue is coated; if your head is dull or aching; if what you eat sours and forms gas and acid in stomach, or you are bilious, constipated, nervous, sallow and can't get feeling just right, begin inside bathing. Drink before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This will flush the poisons and toxins from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels and cleanse, sweeten and purifying the entire alimentary tract. Do your inside bathing immediately upon arising in the morning to wash out of the system all the previous day's poisonous waste, gases and sour bile before putting more food into the stomach.

To feel like young folks feel; like you felt before your blood, nerves and muscles became loaded with body impurities, get from your pharmacist a quarter pound of limestone phosphate which is inexpensive and almost tasteless, except for a sourish twinge which is not unpleasant.

Just as soap and water act on the skin, cleansing, sweetening and freshening, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels. Men and women who are usually constipated, bilious, headachy or have any stomach disorder should begin this inside bathing before breakfast. They are assured they will become real cranks on the subject shortly.

HASTINGS

(Special Correspondence.)

Hastings, Jan. 8.—A rousing reception service was held in the Town Hall on Thursday evening for Pte. W. Langley and son, Fred, who recently returned from the front. The hall was well filled to do honor to the returned heroes. The chair was taken by the reeve, Dr. Hess, who called upon several prominent townsmen to address the gathering. Mr. Garrard, of Peterboro, favored the audience with two vocal selections, which were well rendered and heartily encored. Some patriotic selections, "The Maple Leaf" and "Red, White and Blue" were sung by the audience with great enthusiasm, after which Dr. Hess read an address and on behalf of the citizens of Hastings presented the guests of the evening with beautifully engraved lockets. The gathering dispersed after singing God Save the King.

Wednesday being New Year's Day, all places of business were closed and a great number spent the day with out-of-town friends.

A sad death occurred on Saturday morning when Charles, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Beamish, succumbed to a severe attack of flu. The deceased young man had been for some time in Western Canada and had come home for the Christmas season when he was taken ill and in spite of all that medical assistance could do, he gradually sank until Saturday morning when death put an end to his suffering. Universal sympathy is expressed for the bereaved parents and family. The funeral was held on Sunday afternoon to the T. V. C. where interment took place.

An accident which might have proved very serious occurred on Monday morning when a horse, driven by Mr. Frank Keenan, took fright at some children sleighriding, and ran away, throwing Mrs. Keenan out and causing a dislocation of the shoulder. Those who witnessed the accident consider Mr. and Mrs. Keenan very fortunate in escaping with so few bruises.

A miscellaneous shower was held on Friday evening for Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Lobb at their home in Asphodel. A large crowd was present and many useful and ornamental gifts presented to the young couple by their friends. A pleasant evening was spent together and many congratulations showered upon the bride and groom.

Mr. Ostrander and family left during the week for Desoronto where he has secured a good positon in one of the schools there.

The council for 1919 will be composed of Dr. Hess, reeve, and Councillors Charlie Plant, Dr. Wilson, A. Chapman and R. C. Doksee.

Rev. Father J. Peyton, of Parry Sound, spent the holiday with friends here and officiated in the R. C. Church on New Year's Day.

Mr. Joe Mulholland, while at work in the kindling factory, operating a saw in some way had his hand drawn under the machine and suffered a severe wound, whereby the flesh was badly lacerated and only for a board interfering, the hand would, in all probability, have been sawn asunder.

Mr. Wesley Huycke, of Peterboro, was the guest of his brother, Mr. T. Huycke, last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Winter Runnels, of Peterboro, visited during the week with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Runnels.

The reeveship in Asphodel was warmly contested by Messrs. Brown and Fallon, the result of the election being that Mr. Max Brown was returned to the chair.

A number from here attended the funeral of the late Mr. Tedford near Norwood on Sunday and report a very large cortege. Much sympathy is extended to the bereaved family.

Miss Laura Smith has gone to Nichol's Hospital, Peterboro, for treatment of throat affection. Her many friends wish for her a speedy recovery.

New Year's Wedding.

A very pretty, but quiet wedding, took place at the home of Mr. Thomas H. Aiken, on New Year's Daf, when his youngest daughter, Ethel Ruby, was united in marriage to Nathaniel Belch, oldest son of Mrs. T. Belch, all of Cavan, the Rev. Wm. Higgs officiating. Only the immediate friends were present.

The bride, leaning on the arm of her father, passed under an arch of evergreens and Christmas bells, and entered the drawing-room to the strains of Mendelssohn's Wedding March, played by Miss Mary Higgs, of Millbrook. The pretty bride wore a nigger brown chiffon-taffetta dress, beautifully embroidered in blue, and carried a bouquet of pink carnations with ferns. The groom's gift to the bride was a pendant of amethysts set in pearls, and to the pianist, a brooch with a clover leaf set in pearls. After a sumptuous repast the happy couple left on the four o'clock train for a short trip to Toronto and other western points, the bride looking charming in a navy blue serge suit and black hat.

Mr. and Mrs. Belch will be at home to their friends after March 1st.

Letter of Appreciation.

Dear Mrs. Eakins,—

We, the officers and workers of the War Relief Society, felt we would like to make some tangible expression of our appreciation of your services as president of this society. It is owing chiefly to your energy and tastefulness, that the Society has been able to accomplish what it has, so we thought it fitting now at the close of the war to make you a life member of the Canadian Red Cross.

We have done this, hoping it will be in accordance with your desires, and assuring you it comes with the very good wishes of all concerned.

Yours on behalf of the War Relief,
R. L. MacNAMARA,
Secretary.

Mrs. Eakins' Reply.

Dear Miss MacNamara,—

Will you please convey to the officers and workers of the War Relief Society my sincere thanks for my life membership to the Canadian Red Cross.

I assure you nothing you could have done could have given me greater pleasure, although I feel you over estimate my efforts on behalf of the War Relief work as so kindly expressed in your note. All the officers and workers who have worked so splendidly with me, are quite as deserving of the happiness of wearing this Red Cross pin, which means more to me than a life membership. It means the kindly thought and good will of my fellow workers, which I am so pleased to have, after working together for four or more years.

Gratefully yours,
MARY EAKINS.

The Morning After The Big Night

The Wise Precaution of a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet After the Banquet Brings Pleasant Memories With the Morning Coffee

If It Hadn't Been For Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets Like as Not I'd Have a Headache This Morning.

If you ever feel distressed after eating be sure to take a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet. For no matter what you eat there will be no gas, no sour risings, no lump in your throat, no biliousness, no dark brown taste in the morning. And should you now be troubled, eat a tablet as soon as possible and relief will come promptly. These tablets correct at once the faults of a weak or overworked stomach, they do the work while the stomach rests and recovers itself. Particularly effective are they for banqueters and those whose environment brings them in contact with the rich food most apt to cause stomach derangement. Relief in these cases always brings the glad smile. Get a box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, 50 cents, in any drug store. Be good to your stomach.

Keeping the Home Fires Burning

THERE ARE MANY MEN YET LIVING who can tell about going to the neighbor's, miles away perhaps, to "Borrow" a chunk of fire. Until it arrived, no warmth, no light could be kindled. Whole families have shivered for hours until the messenger could return with the precious spark from a neighbor's fireplace.

Today, with a box of

on the shelf, you need not worry least the fire die down in the night, and you can leave your house for weeks without making elaborate plans for getting a fire started when you return.

A match is a little thing, perhaps, but it has made a big difference in the world. And it makes a difference whether you get good matches or poor ones.

The best assurance of match satisfaction you can have is to see that Eddy's name is on the box.

LABORERS OUT IN LOCAL PLANT

G. WALTER GREEN'S MEN WOULD NOT STAND CUT IN WAGES.

All laborers at the plant of the G. Walter Green Company are on strike as a result of a reduction in their wages announced to the men last night.

The molders employed at the foundry are off work also, not on account of any grievance of their own but because they cannot carry on their work without the assistance of the laborers.

It is stated that the idea was to establish the pre-war scale of wages, but the men, who are members of the International Laborers' Union, declare they will not stand for this, and announce their intention of remaining out until some more favorable decision is arrived at.

QUESTION OF TEACHERS' PAY IS REFERRED TO NEW SCHOOL BOARD

Motion Deferring This Matter Until June Meeting Has Been Rescinded—Shall Collegiate Hall Be Used for Dancing?

Last night the Board of Education for the year 1918 held its final meeting. The question of a new schedule of teachers' salaries, making allowance for an increase, will be dealt with by the new Board at its first meeting, by virtue of a resolution passed last night rescinding the original motion which put off the settlement of this question until June. The estimates for the year 1919 cannot therefore be struck or submitted until the February meeting.

Inspector Mowat submitted his report showing the attendance at the public schools for December and stating that fire drill had been practised at regular intervals during the month and that the time recorded was from 45 to 75 seconds.

Inspector Mowat, who was present at the meeting, expressed himself as pleased with the good attendance at the schools since they re-opened after the Christmas vacation. Only one teacher is absent as a result of illness.

Principal Kenner's report regarding the attendance at the Collegiate for the month of December showed the number on the roll to be 364, the average 342, making a percentage showing of 94.

A report forwarded by Col. Gillespie, the inspector of the Collegiate cadet corps for the province, stated that the local Institute's corps had been reviewed by him, and he had found the standard generally good, discipline satisfactory and the body on the whole efficient.

Chief Grange, in his report upon his recent fire inspection, commented favorably upon the fine, orderly manner in which the pupils of the schools had responded to his alarm. He had found the schools free of all debris and a credit to their caretakers. He recommended several minor improvements in connection with the Queen Mary School, such as placing a clear-out hole in the pipe leading from the furnace.

Dancing in the Collegiate.

A communication from Principal Kenner was received drawing the attention of the Board to the fact that by virtue of regulations made some time ago, the pupils of the Collegiate were debarred from holding their annual dance in the assembly hall of the school. This event had been held a few days ago in the Empress Hotel, and as it was strictly a school affair he suggested the advisability of allowing the pupils to use the hall.

This question was referred to the supervision committee with power to act, after some discussion by members of the Board.

Mr. G. N. Gordon maintained that as the participants in this dance attended upon invitation it was hardly fair to the ratepayers that a building which had been erected and was being supported by them should be devoted to the holding of a social event of an exclusive nature. Only those who received invitations could attend the dance, which was being held in a public building.

There was also the question of religious scruples to be considered, to say nothing of the damage which might be done the plastering and furnishings as a result of using the hall for such a purpose.

Chairman Eastwood stated that the decision of the Board some years ago to forbid the use of the hall for an affair of the kind had not been arrived at as the result of any abusive practice and he could see no reason for continuing the ban.

Mr. Gordon asked if the Board would also be so considerate as to provide a smoking apartment for the young men who did not indulge in dancing. He could not see why the hall of the Collegiate should be thrown open to a chosen few who attended the dance by virtue of an invitation when the building was supported by the public.

Dr. Neal was of the opinion that if a dance of this kind war to be held it would be much more satisfactory to have it in the school hall than in a hotel.

Inspector Mowat Re-Appointed.

Inspector Mowat was re-appointed to the Public Library Board for a term of three years, upon motion of Trustees Denne and Fowler.

As a result of a motion of Messrs. Gordon and Patterson, the report of the Fire Chief was referred to the proper committee for consideration.

An account of Mr. G. M. Miller amounting to $50, as payment for his services in connection with drafting plans for a ventilation system for the Collegiate some years ago was ordered paid.

Praise for Chairman Eastwood.

In moving a vote of thanks to Mr. Vincent Eastwood, the retiring chairman of the Board of Education, Mr. G. N. Gordon referred to the efficient manner in which Mr. Eastwood had discharged his duties during his tenure of office. He had for many years devoted himself most assiduously to the task of advancing every movement which had for its object the improvement of educational conditions in this city.

As chairman of the Board he had presided with fairness and had served most faithfully on the committees at the sacrifice of his own time.

Mr. Denne, in seconding the resolution, added a few words of appreciation, and Mr. E. G. Patterson spoke briefly of the loss the Board would suffer as a result of Mr. Eastwood's withdrawal.

In thanking the members for the hearty vote of thanks which had been accorded him, Mr. Eastwood referred to the office he had held for the past two years as a great honor. It had been a pleasure to him to discharge the duties which fell to his lot, and in presiding at the meetings he had endeavored to carry forward the business which came before the Board in as expeditious a manner as was consistent with the importance of the matters considered.

The inaugural meeting of the Board of Education for 1919 will be held on Thursday night, when the question of the revised schedule of teachers' salaries will be considered in pursuance of the motion passed at last night's meeting.

Irish Rebels Interned

Trying to Make Trouble Among the Australians

THERE can be little doubt that the Federal Government of Australia has been guided wisely in coming to the decision that the detention of the seven members of the Irish Republican Brotherhood, arrested last August on charges of disloyalty, must continue. The story of the Irish intrigue as they have come to light, disclosed at the recent trial, was full of significance and instruction as to the true status of several different agencies which have invariably been found acting together when open disloyalty in Ireland, as against Great Britain, has been the issue involved. At the beginning of last year, the Defence Department of Australia first learned that branches of the Irish Republican Brotherhood had been formed in New South Wales and Victoria. In the june of last year, Mr. W. A. Watt, the acting Prime Minister, announced that the Government had determined to take decisive measures in regard to this society which had come seriously under suspicion, and had simultaneously arrested seven of the ringleaders and interned them. For several weeks after this internment, the authorities were collecting evidence, and then, early in September, the trial began.

The strange story which was unfolded in the course of the prosecution traveled far afield, from Australia to America, from America to Ireland, and from Ireland to Germany; whilst across the stage there passed several familiar figures, and groups of people, some playing a very distinctive part, others barely on the stage before they were off again; but all linked together with that curious indefinable fitness which is at once recognized and is not difficult to explain. There was Maurice Dalton, the Fenian, signing himself in a letter to Dr. Mannix, the Roman Catholic archbishop of Melbourne, as "an old campaigner of '65 and '67"; John Doran, the organizer of the Irish Republican Brotherhood in Australia; Albert Dryer, the German Irishman; Prof. De Valera; the Irish clergy; and so on.

The story showed that, in 1915 or 1916, John Doran had been in Australia interesting himself in the formation of branches of the brotherhood referred to; that he went to America in September, 1916; and that he took with him credentials from Dalton to one John Devoy, a leading spirit in America of the Clan-na-gael Association, allied with the Sinn Fein Association, with the Irish Republican Brotherhood in Ireland, and directly with German agents. Letters were produced, at the trial, from Doran to Dalton, written from Sydney, showing clearly enough the nature of Doran's enterprise, indicating the sale of arms to young Irishmen in Sydney, and reporting the progress of his propaganda. Then there was a letter from Doran to Devoy in New York, sent by means of a messenger in order to elude the censor, and urging the American society to secure means of shipping Doran and a band of 200 strong, anxious to do something "practical," out of Australia. A year later there was another letter from Doran, now in San Francisco, to Dalton, in Australia, referring with evident gratification, to "strikes and riots all over the United States," and telling his correspondent not to worry about America's entrance into the war, as it had thrown the Irish and Germans together in a united mass, and that even amongst the pro-Ally element a "reaction against England" was beginning to set in.

Then there had been found, in the possession of several of the men in court, circulars addressed, apparently, to the Irish clergy, together with collection slips referring to a fund to assist De Valera and his followers to win the next general election in Ireland, or to be used otherwise at his or their discretion. And there was much else of a similar nature. As Mr. Justice Harvey, who conducted the inquiry, stated, the evidence tendered to him was almost entirely documentary. It was disjointed, and in many cases fragmentary, but went overwhelmingly to prove that the aim of the internees, and of the brotherhood to which they belonged was, as the judge expressed it in his summing up, "collecting moneys in Australia for the purpose of assisting armed rebellion in Ireland against the British Government on the first available opportunity, and that this money was expended in the purchase of warlike material from Germany, with which country the leaders of the movement were in communication."

The facts revealed in the course of this trial are of peculiar importance at the present time. They throw, once again, into a strong light the aim and object of the Sinn Fein movement. They also throw into strong relief the recent statement of Cardinal Logue, in Ireland, in the course of which he declared that if there were any pettifogging difficulties raised in opposition to the settlement, as between the Sinn Feiners and Nationalists, for joining their forces, "as proposed by the bishops," he would consider it his duty "to advise the people to go straight and vote for the Sinn Fein candidate in all the constituencies in which a division would endanger the seats."

South Africa Raised 150,000 Men.

Thanksgiving services throughout the Union of South Africa, some held partly in English and partly in Dutch, emphasize the fact that in all war operations in Africa and overseas the Union gave the services of nearly 150,000 men, of whom 313 officers and 6,320 men were killed in action, 11,661 of all ranks were killed in action, 11,661 of all ranks were wounded, and 1,344 taken prisoner and 293 missing.

Held by the Bolsheviki

ONE of the most high-handed outrages by the Bolsheviki in Russia has been the arrest and imprisonment in the Fortress of St. Peter and St. Paul of the British residents of Petrograd. The Petrograd correspondent of the London Times, who was among those arrested, is back in England, and has written a description of his experiences for his paper.

"We were taken from the embassy to the 'Tchrezvitchaika' on Aug. 31 and thence transferred to the Fortress of St. Peter and St. Paul on Tuesday evening, Sept. 3, at five o'clock. When we went downstairs between lines of soldiers into the yard, where I had seen a prisoner shot down from behind without condemnation or warning by the soldiers of his escort as they were bringing him out in the same way for some unknown destination, I felt serious misgivings as to our being destined for any other place than the next world.

"The first impression was horrible as we filed along the long, narrow and gloomy passage and saw the eyes of prisoners eagering scanning us through the small holes in the doors of their cells. These cells were already crammed with prisoners of all classes from princes, generals and bourgeois citizens down to proletarian vagabonds, including thieves and murderers.

"I and half a dozen other British subjects found ourselves herded together with a number of Russian anti-Bolshevist officers, who received us with a shout of delight when they discovered we were British.

"We were altogether twenty men in a vaulted limewashed cell about 20 feet long by 11 feet broad and 12 feet in height, with hard cemented flooring. In one corner near the door was a modern latrine, also a small sink with a tap of running water, one bare iron bedstead fixed to the floor, and a small shelf fastened to the wall close to the bedstead and serving as a table. At one end of the cell was the door with a small peep-hole, which was sometimes shut up, and at the opposite end, very high up, an iron barred double window looking out against the high wall of one of the fortress ramparts. Two panes of this window were left open for ventilation, and the space between was used as a larder for keeping our food as fresh as was possible. We had to stand on each other's backs to reach up to it. From 7 o'clock in the evening until midnight the cell was lighted by an electric lamp and reflector in the wall close to the bedstead. There were from seventy-five to eighty of these cells along our corridor, all of the same size and type.

"With so many human beings huddled together in a space intended for only one the atmosphere was awful, and it was difficult to move arms or legs when we lay packed together on the bare, cold floor.

"The monotony of our existence was otherwise relieved by the washing out of our cell once a week, for which purpose we used some of our dirty underclothing; by attempts to cleanse the rest of our linen when we got soap enough, by conversing with one another from cell to cell through the doorholes, by listening to 'It's a long, long way to Tipperary' and other popular songs by the younger members of our prison party.

"One day five Russians were taken out to go to the 'Tchrezvitchaika.' Among them was a very decrepit old man burdened with a heavy bundle, who was unable to keep pace with the other prisoners. A soldier of the convoy prodded him on for some little time, and at last shot him down and threw his body into the river. On reaching the 'Tchrezvichaika' the list of prisoners, of course, did not tally with the number actually produced. 'Where's the fifth prisoner?' asked the commissioner. 'Oh,' said the soldier, 'I could not get him to come along. He was too old and feeble, so I thought it best to shoot him down and get rid of him in that way.' This murderer was locked up in a cell not far from ours, and that was probably the only punishment he would ever get.

"Two elderly Englishmen were sent away and liberated a week or two before our release, but I believe they are still not permitted to leave Petrograd. They were very ill, and the doctor, who was allowed to visit us at the insistence of the Dutch Legation, managed to persuade the commissioners to send them home. On the whole, we did not suffer much in health with the exception of colds and slight fevers, and in such cases the one iron bedstead was given up for the use of the sufferers. The doctor brought us medicines and insect powder, for we were overrun by vermin. A good deal of our time was as first occupied in lice hunting, and we only got free of the pests by continual powdering and cleansing.

"It was difficult to keep food long in the bad air of the cells. Meat and potatoes soon developed 'whiskers' and turned sour and moldy. Food parcels arrived twice a week, and the day was looked forward to as a great treat. Mrs. Oudendyk generally accompanied them in a motorcar, and the consul was often allowed to go outside and speak with her for a few minutes. Two or three of the British prisoners were also sometimes let out to help in carrying and distributing the parcels."

He Knew.

At an examination for entry to an officers' training school, one of the men was given a mental test. The first question was answered correctly, as was the second; then the lieutenant in charge asked the man if he knew where the Suwanee river was. The candidate thought for a minute and then with a self-satisfied smile, answered: "Far, far away."

Allies Held Supremacy

In the Warfare in the Air.

Figures Furnish the Proof

ALTHOUGH the total score of the war in the air has not yet been made up, an intelligent idea of its magnitude is found in the figures compiled for the first four years of the conflict by Laurence La Tourette Driggs and printed in his "Heroes of Aviation." That the collection by laymen of official data about sky battles was difficult became evident early in the war. The French, who would not publish their army casualties, gave out the records of their aces. The British, who regularly issued casualty totals, had little to make public about the exploits of their airmen. Even now, when Mr. Driggs is able to give the records of the British aces, the total number of German aircraft brought down by all Britons can only be guessed at, but the guess must be a big one, for on the work of aces—men who had five or more kills—the British easily lead the Allies, says the New York Sun, and it might be added that Frank Simonds, the Tribune's expert, is of the same opinion. Here are the number of victories won by the aces of each nation and the number of men who did the trick:

	Victories.	Aces.
Britain	1,629	111
France	847	77
Italy	193	14
United States	121	14
Belgium	77	8
Russia	28	3
Totals	2,895	227

The score of the aces who flew for the Central Powers is, of course, based on German claims. It was pointed out frequently during the war that while a French aviator received credit only for victories accomplished within the sight of an official observer, the German airmen made up their own scores. Here, however, is what Mr. Driggs sets down for the Germans and Austrians:

	Victories.	Aces.
Central Powers	2,108	101

Were the German fliers, with an average of twenty victories for each ace, better trained or equipped than the Allies? Berlin was notoriously liberal with credits to its airmen. The British were careful in checking. The French were what might be called stingy; almost every French ace brought down within the German lines and beyod the view of his observer from 40 to 100 per cent. more German aircraft than appeared in the citations. As for the appearance of German superiority over the British in the clouds Mr. Driggs says: "It was not until I visited England in 1918 as the guest of the British Government that I discovered that twenty British airmen have exceeded by more than 100 the number of victories claimed by the best twenty aces of the Huns.

The five leaders in the Royal Air Force at the time the book was written were these, with the number of their victories:

Major Raymond Collishaw	77
Col. William A. Bishop	72
Major E. Mannock	71
Capt. Jas. McCudden (killed)	58
Capt. P. F. Fullard	48

The five leaders of the French airmen were as follows:

Lieut. Rene Fonck	59
Capt. G. Guynemer (killed)	53
Lieut. C. Nungesser	38
Lieut. G. Madon	38
Lieut. M. Boyau	39

Lieut. Barachini, of the Italian flying forces and Lieut. Coppens, of the Belgian army, ranked with the great fliers named; one with 31 victories, the other with 30. America came too late to have a chance to make a very high score in the air, and 12 Yankees landed on the immortal list of aces. The top five men are listed as follows:

Capt. Raoul Lufbery (killed)	18
Lieut. D. A. Putnam (killed)	13
Lieut. F. L. Baylies (killed)	12
Lieut. Frank Baer (captured)	9
Major William Thaw	6

Of the Americans who fought in the air, Lufbery may be longest remembered in the United States, just as Capt. Albert Ball of the British will be best remembered in England. Putnam, however, was the Albert Ball of the American air force, for he brought down five Germans in one day, a feat exceeded by only two men in all the war—Fonck of the French and Trollope of the British. American aces are credited with 121 wins, but the total of German airplanes sent to earth by all American aviators was 167. Of the German fliers, Capt. von Richthoffen heads Mr. Draggs' list with 80 claimed victories. His predecessor in prominence, Capt. Boelke, who was killed in October, 1917, has a score of 40. Immelmann made only 15 kills.

War's Glory.

War, like all other situations of danger and of change, calls forth the exertion of admirable intellectual qualities and great virtues, and it is only by dwelling on these and keeping out of sight the sufferings and sorrows, and all the crimes and evils that follow in its train, that it has its glory in the eyes of men.—Bryant.

Want to Build a Pyramid?

If the great pyramid of Cheops in Egypt were to be built today its total cost would be not less than $150,000,000, according to experts who have studied the vast structure. Cheops is 480 feet high and covers almost thirteen acres. Upward of 90,000,000 cubic feet of stone were used in building this great pyramid.

Practice Kindness.

Kind words cost no more than unkind ones. Kind words produce kind actions, not only on the part of those to whom they are addressed, but on the part of those by whom they are employed, and this habitually in virtue of the principle of association.—Jeremy Bentham.

Fifty Dollars for Newfoundland.

Henry VII was so pleased with the discoverer of Newfoundland, the first colony added to the crown, that he presented him with a $50 note. Mr. E. Hall of the Navy league alluded to this circumstance at a meeting of the Society of Engineers at Burlington House. The first effort to colonize for the British empire, he said, was made in 1500.

To Mend Broken China.

Tie the broken parts of china together with stout string, being sure that the edges meet evenly; then completely submerge the dish in a pan of skim milk and place on back of stove to gently simmer all day. Do not remove from the milk until thoroughly cold and even then don't cut the string for 24 hours. Hot water will not cause the cups to come apart again.

Won $16,014 With Race Horses

George M. Hendric's stable, Hamilton, was $16,014 in purses during the season of 1918. His old standby, Rancher, figured as his principal winner, although for a time he was out of form. But in the spring he was good enough to make two new track records at Douglas park and win the Inaugural handicap and the Independence day handicap at the Latonia meeting. His three-year-old, Springside, won only one race for him, but that race was the one dear to the hearts of all Canadian owners and greatly coveted—the King's plate. Its value was reduced from previous figures, but if nothing but King George's fifty guineas had been offered it would probably have been contested anyhow by every one of the thirteen horses which went to the post. Sweet Alyssum and Exhorter proved useful contributors. Had racing been carried on in Canada it is quite probable the stable would have won more importantly. As it was, its record for 1918 was:

Horse	1st.	2d.	3d.	Won.

BAN JOHNSTON'S BIRTHDAY

Baseball Magnate is Fifty-Six Years Old.

The 6th of January stands out on the calendar as the natal day of Bryron Bancroft Johnson, czar of the American League. He was born 56 years ago, in the town of Norwalk, Ohio.

The greatest of all the Johnson clan is a big man, physically as well as mentally. There is a tradition that he once followed the calling of a soda squirt, but it was as a baseball reporter for a Cincinnati paper, at a salary of twenty-five dollars a week, that Mister Opportunity knocked at his door and found him waiting with a club.

The old Western League gave Johnson his first experience as a baseball executive. Charlie Comiskey was largely responsible for the elevation of the reporter to that job. The presidency of a circuit comprising a number of large cities of the west was quite a jump for Johnson, but his ambition did not stop there. In 1900 he and his associates changed the name of the circuit to American League, with clubs in Chicago, Detroit, Buffalo, Indianapolis, Kansas City, Minneapolis and Milwaukee. The following year Philadelphia, Boston, Washington and Baltimore were invaded. In 1902 a club was placed in St. Louis, and in 1903 New York was added.

Throughout this period the new circuit, under the guidance of Johnson, waged unceasing war on the National League. And, thanks in no small part to Johnson's ability, the fight was won. In 1910 Byron Bancroft Johnson was rewarded by re-election to the presidency of the American League for a term of twenty years, at a salary of $2,000 per annum. Which is not such a meager emolument even in these days of high prices.

SAYS DEMPSEY CAN SETTLE WILLARD IN FIFTEEN ROUNDS

Provided Big Champion Can Be Induced to Try Conclusions With Man From Utah

(By Cross Counter.)

If Jack Dempsey continues to topple over each man he meets in the ring in jig time, those who express skeptical views as to the merits of his performances soon will be in a quandary. There are only a few more heavyweights who have sufficient ability to warrant matching them with Dempsey, and after they are disposed of Willard will be all that stands between the Utah thumper and the title.

Notwithstanding all objections, Dempsey continues to clear the road leading to Willard, and by defeating Gunboat Smith, the man who defeated Willard, makes a strong bid for a bout with the champion.

Dempsey Real Fighter.

Dempsey's career has provoked considerable comment in the way of comparison with the champions of past decades, and the bulk of conclusion are unfavorable to the modern thumper.

There were only four heavyweight champions of the past who would have bothered Dempsey as he stands today. They were Fitz, Corbett, Jeffries and Johnson.

Dempsey not only has the speed of Corbett, but has a destructive punch behind the speed which Corbett lacked. Jeff's iron jaw might have withstood the Dempsey punch and the fight would have been a pretty one. Fitz's strategy might have enabled him to get over a knockout punch, but if Dempsey hit Fitz first the Cornishman would have had trouble in recovering.

Sullivan at his best easily would have been vanquished by Dempsey, but Jack Johnson at his best would puzzle the Utah man. If Dempsey succeeds in getting Willard into the ring the title will change hands by a knockout inside of fifteen rounds.

Indication are that when boxing comes back to normal and the stage is all set for real titular battles, some of our champions will be found to have outgrown their classes.

Johnny Kilbane, featherweight champion of America, is one of the title holders who shows a disposition to utilize his championship as a purely business asset. The Clevelander recently made formal denial of a report he had retired and announced he would defend his title as soon as he had conditioned himself.

Kilbane won the featherweight championship of America from Abe Attell at 122 pounds ringside, but it is nearly three years since he made the weight for a title contest. As a matter of fact Kilbane had in most of his bout sinsisted on his opponents making 122 ringside, while he entered the ring at catchweights.

Herman Also Poses.

Kilbane at the present time is a 130-pound man, and it would be impossible for him to reduce to 1 pounds. Yet there is every rea to believe that he intends to pose the featherweight champion a box with inferior lightweights, the sake of the gate receipts.

Pete Herman, world's bant champion, is another of the offe ers in the matter of weight. Hern won the title from Kid Williams 118 pounds ringside, but for the l two years has fought at 120 to 1 pounds. He could not make pounds, no matter how hard he tra ed, and his failure to go across water and meet Wilde was not credit. Pal Moore gained all honors. Herman will be compel to meet some good man at 118 confess he cannot do so.

It is high time these were smoked out and the men can make the weights at w titles were won should start a has paign to bring the overw nate champions to terms. ovak

SPLENDID COURAGE.

Men Who Are Physically Afraid Are Moral Heroes.

There is a familiar story of an soldier sneering at another because of his evident trembling just before battle. The one thus attacked replied: "Yes—and if you trembled as much as I do you would not go at all." This incident is an illustration of the essential difference between physical and moral bravery, and also of the fact that a man may be physically afraid and yet be a moral hero. The present war has done much to emphasize this distinction, which is one of the greatest value and the most vital importance in many phases of life. It will be abundantly worth while calling attention to the power of moral courage as illustrated by the war.

Bishop Taylor Smith, Chaplain General to the British Forces, preaching the other day in Westminster Abbey, told a striking story of self-sacrifice:

A wounded Australian soldier in a military hospital, who was asked about his home and family in Australia said:

"There were six of us lads and mother. We all enlisted, and left mother alone. It was her wish. She said she hoped no boy of hers would hold back when the Mother Country called. And now five of us are asleep, buried on the battlefields of France, and I am the only one left." There were a few moments of silence, and then he added. "But I have not told you the worst. When I got this wound some one cabled to my mother that I had been killed, and that fetched grain killed her."

Very similar is the testimony of a leading Baptist minister in England, Rev. F. C. Spur, who has had abundant opportunities of gaining experiences of camp life since the early days of the war. After four years he observed the vast change that has come over camps and huts. Instead of the rollicking, gay, careless, and confident attitude of men in those days, Mr. Spur says that determination, hope long deferred, and grave questionings about the future have arrived. Here is one characteristic incident:

The youths of 18 were the most cheerful; the men of 47 the least so. One, a chemist, drew from his pocket a wallet, containing a photograph of his wife, his children, and his grandchild, and he said: "I feel the uprooting more keenly than I can say; I am dazed. I can scarcely realize what has happened; but"—with a sob—"it is for that little fellow, and others like him that I am here, and I hope I'll go through like a man. I am afraid I am not of much use for fighting, but I suppose I shall have a job I can do." And thus it was with more than one man who had passed his 45th mile-stone.

Nothing could be finer than the moral heroism evinced in these stories. They show beyond question what has been so often and abundantly proved, that the present war is unique in the way in which the cause of righteousness and liberty for which the Allies are fighting has brought out some of the noblest and truest elements of human life, which would have been impossible in a war of aggression, greed, and tyranny.

DAZZLING COSTUMES AT VICTORY BALL IN LONDON

Mrs. Asquith Set a New Pace in Feminine Attire—Lady Carberry Also a Centre of Attraction.

(By a London Dowager)

Official "peace" may not be with us yet, but certain it is that London is swinging on a dizzy round of pleasure and rejoicing, and night and day, publicly and privately, everybody seems to be "going the pace" in order, apparently, to make up for lost time. The first big public function since the fighting ceased was undoubtedly the victory ball held at the Albert Hall. All the "everybodies" as well as the "nobodies," were present, the necessary equipment that make people eligible for entrance to the big building being the possession of $15 the price of the ticket) and a whole-hearted desire to have a good time

The most marvellous people and the most marvelous clothes were to be seen in every part of the vast flag-decked hall, and the polished parquet flooring that was laid for this occasion was continually crowded with the dancing multitude. It is said that no members of our own royal family were present "officially," but if I am not mistaken one of the boxes which harbored the Duchess of Sutherland also served as an observation post for England's prettiest princess, who is as well known on your side of the world as she is over here.

Nearly everybody in the multitude was in fancy dress.

Mrs. Asquith's Dress

Mrs. Asquith, in oriental draperies of black and gold, with an amazing head-dress was in tremendously high spirits. She attracted a lot of attention in her black satin coat with its outstanding skirt worn over black satin breeches gartered with diamonds. Her head-dress was truly a miracle and consisted of a close-fitting turban ornamented with diamonds and having a glittering diamond-set top, from which rose two golden pheasant's tail feathers that waved and curved nearly to her knees. She carried in her black-gloved hand an ebony, diamond-encrusted stick with long tassels of black jet and diamonds, while the heels of her shoes and the turned-up toes thereof were set in arabesques of diamonds—a wonderful and graceful figure, surely!

Another pretty woman who excited much interest was Lady Carbery, who was with a large party of Americans. She had a gown made of heavy aluminum-colored tissue belted with jet and diamonds. On her head was a monstrous erection of yellow paradise plumes sprouting from a many-pronged diamond comb.

The odd part of it is that although all of us are actually happy in the thought of peace the soldiers and sailors with whom one talks on the subject are not as rejoiceful as they might be. "If we had only kept on another month," an officer said to me recently. "Just one more month and we would have had the joy of giving Fritz just what he ought to have had, and in the right spirit"—that is the cry of all the fighting men, British, French and American, to whom I have spoken on the subject.

GOVERNMENT IS PLEDGED

accordance with my report of the 27th December last, and as you will see, in that report I referred specifically to the work north of the Hunter street bridge, and it was for this locality that my report and estimate in the first instance, was sent to the Department accompanied by a plan showing the channel from Hunter street bridge north."

You will observe that Dominion Government authorized dredging to be done north of the Hunter street bridge and proceeded with this work and I believe substantially completed the turning basin in question.

I might say that at the time I discussed this work with the Hon. Sidney Fisher and subsequently with the Hon. Mr. Pugsley, Minister of Public works, that their attention was ing basin north of Hunter street ing basin north o Hunter street re could not be used unless a were placed in the bridge at the nce of the Dominion Government inless a man was kept in constant ge by the Government and at its nse to operate the swing bridge that this swing in the bridge d have to be maintained at the se of the Government. Both the sters conceded to that.

dvised them, however, that the of Peterborough contemplated ing a high level bridge across Otonabee river at this point and there was no immediate necessfor the placing of a swing in ridge. It was distinctly underthat when the time came to con a high level bridge and if the ment were relieved of the ex putting in a swing and operd maintaining it, the Government would make a substantial contribution to the cost of the construction of the bridge in lieu thereof. I remember distinctly that this proposition was acquiesed in and approved of by both the Hon. Sidney Fisher and the Hon. Mr. Pugsley. I do not appear to have any letters from either of the Ministers particularly referring to the Hunter street bridge, but I do remember distinctly reporting the result of one of my interviews of the late Mayor Best and to Mr. Robert Stuart as to the Government's willingness to make a substantial contribution to the construction of the new high level bridge at this point in lieu of having to build a swing in the present bridge and maintain and operate it for all time to come.

Yours faithfully,
R. R. HALL.

EBERT'S PARTY IS OUSTED AND SPARTACUS ARE NOW IN CONTROL AT BERLIN

New Revolutionary Government Has Been Proclaimed After Desperate Fighting in Streets of Capital and Heavy Loss of Life—Re-action Is Looked For.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Jan. 9.—The Ebert-Scheidmann government in Germany has been overturned, extremists having gained the upper hand in Berlin after sanguinary fighting, according to the latest German advices received here. A new revolutionary government has been proclaimed, composed of independent Socialists. A part of the government troops are reported to have gone over to the rebels, and the Spartacans now hold the principal points in Berlin.

DESPERATE FIGHTING IN BERLIN.

Negotiations between the government and the revolutionary element in Berlin were in progress all day long Tuesday, according to Copenhagen and Amsterdam despatches received here last night. The despatches state that it was apparent that none of the leaders who appeared had any control over the masses in the streets of Berlin during the entire afternoon, and spasmodic fighting took place in various parts of the city. The rumor that Field Marshal von Hindenburg had come or was coming to Berlin was followed by the report that General Ludendorff was on his way back to Germany from Sweden, where he took refuge not long ago.

Th Spartacan group, the despatches show, has proclaimed a general strike for January 19. The Spartacans declared they will prevent the elecetino of a national assembly by all possible means. It is asserted that the seizure of the central railway offices in Berlin, after the government troops in charge had surrendered, has placed the entire railway system of Germany in their hands.

CIVIL WAR IS SPREADING.

Civil war is spreading to the other parts of Germany, the despatches indicate. Parts of the Rhenish provinces and Bavaria are now reported to be involved. Gustav Noske, commander-in-chief of the German government troops, will send new forces against the capital in an attempt to regain control of it. It is reported that a desperate reaction by the more conservative elements is expected.

The casualties in the Berlin fighting are reported to be heavy. The Independent Socialists, said to be at the head of the new government, are Georg Ledebour, Herr Liebmann and Herr Tiek. Dr. Karl Liebknecht, leader of the Spartacans, is continuing his activities, presumably in an effort to instal a government of his own choosing.

MR. A. J. BOLWELL IS ELECTED PRESIDENT OF TRADES COUNCIL

Chosen by Acclamation as Compliment to the Good Work He Did as Chairman of Labor's Campaign Committee in Recent Election—Last Night's Meeting.

OFFICERS FOR 1919.

President—A. J. Bolwell.
Vice-President—E. Marchand.
Corresponding Sec'y—W. Stevens.
Financial Sec'y—T. Quinn.
Sergeant-at-arms—Donald Wiree.
Auditors—Robt. Reid, J. Begley, M. L. Campbell.
Trustees—Harry Gainey, Peter McArthur, Thos. Stenton, A. J. Bolwell, T. Ogilvie.

The above officers were elected at a postponed meeting of the Trades Council last night, every one being chosen by acclamation. They will be installed at the next regular meeting on Wednesday night of next week. When nominations were called for last night for a president to succeed Mr. J. J. Hartley, Delegate Doris moved that A. J. Bolwell be elected by acclamation as a recognition of the good work which he did in the recent election as chairman of Labor's campaign committee. The motion was unanimously carried and the remainder of the list was made up in the same way. Mr. Bolwell is also President of the Peterborough Typographical Union and is a valued member of the mechanical staff of The Review.

Three Aldermen-Elect.

There were three aldermen-elect present at last night's meeting as delegates, Alex. Murray, Robt. Morrison, who headed the aldermanic poll, and Harry Gainey. An air of jubilation over the sweeping success pervaded the meeting, which was one of the largest ever held, there being about seventy-five in attendance. C. H. Hammacott, a former president of the Trades Council, but now of Ottawa, wrote congratulating his former associates upon their success in the election.

May Have Public Meeting.

It was decided to ask Minister of Labor Robertson, who will be in the city next Thursday to speak at the Canadian Club luncheon in the Empress, to address a meeting of Labor men after the luncheon. It is likely that such a program will be arranged. Mr. Robertson will reach the city about 3:30 and will probably be interviewed at the Empress later by a delegation of Labor. Among the requests proffered by the local men is that the Minister work for an eight-hour day and a minimum scale of wages.

Has a Balance.

The financial report of the board of trustees as presented by Chairman Gainey shows a balance on hand of $453.04. The report was referred to the board of auditors.

PEACE DELEGATES IN SESSION TODAY

INFORMAL GATHERING IN PARIS WILL ARRANGE PRELIMINER FOR CONFERENCE.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Jan. 9.—President Wilson's conferences with the Premiers of Great Britain, France and Italy, which were to open today have been delayed and will probably not begin before early next week. Mr. Lloyd George is detained in London by the work of the reconstruction of his cabinet. Premier Orlando of Italy will return to Rome where his presence for forty eight hours is necessary because of matters under consideration by the Italian Parliament. There will, however be a meeting today at the office of Stephen Pichon, Foreign Minister. It will be attended by Mr. Wilson, Premier Orlando and the Japanese representatives but it will be informal because of the absence of Mr. Lloyd George. Although British representatives will probably be present it was considered best to hold a meeting and clear up some preliminary points and it is believed that important details of procedure will be settled. If this is done the delegates will be in a position when Lloyd George arrives, to complete the preliminary work rapidly and be ready for the opening conferences on Monday and Tuesday.

PEACE LEAGUE AN ESSENTIAL

TO THE PRESERVATION OF HARMONY LORD ROBERT CECIL SAYS.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Dec. 13.—Lord Robert Cecil, who has arrived here with the first section of the British peace delegation, expressed the opinion to the Associated Press today that a definite organization or the League of Nations is indispensable as the first step toward the conclusion of that enduring peace and satisfactory settlement of international problems which have arisen out of the war. Lord Robert made it clear that his statements were his personal views and not an attempt to give the views of the British government.

EARL OF READING QUITS

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Jan. 9.—The Earl of Reading will not return to Washington as British High Commissioner. Lord Cecil Robert will probably succeed him.

SHOTS WENT WIDE

WANT CONTROL OF THEIR STREETS

LARGE DELEGATION FROM MUNICIPAL ASSOCIATION WAIT ON ONT. GOVT.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Jan. 7.—Careful consideration was promised by Hon. W. D. McPherson, Provincial Secretary on behalf of the Ontario Government in regard to resolutions of the Ontario Municipal Association for various amendments giving municipalities greater control of their own streets against company owned utilities. A large and representative deputation from all parts of Ontario presented these demands to the Government this morning. The resolutions were passed at the last convention of the Association.

JUDGE ROGERS SAT IN JUDGEMENT

FORMER RESIDENT OF PETERBOROUGH HEARS A CASE IN CAMPBELLFORD

A case originating in the Township of Percy, in the County of Northumberland was tried at Campbellford before His Honor Judge Rogers, formerly of Peterborough, yesterday.

The plaintiff was Charles O'Neill, the owner of lot 12, in the 11th concession of the Township of Percy and the defendant was Fred. Richardson, had, without O'Neill's consent, pastured his cattle on O'Neill's property. The action was to have been tried at Peterborough but was transferred to Campbellford. Mr. J. A. O'Brien, of Gordon, Widdifield and O'Brien, appeared for the plaintif, O'Neill, and Mr. G. A. Payne, for the defendant, Richardsen.

After hearing all the evidence offered His Honor decided that Mr. O'Neill was entitled to damages, it having developed during the course of the trial, that Richardson had, unknown to Mr. O'Neill, pastured his cattle on O'Neill's property, by the defendant's own admission, for at least two and one half months. The cattle did a certain amount of damage to the orchard on the premises and His Honor gave judgment for Mr. O'Neill for $25.00 and costs. Mr. O'Neill claimed that the hay crop had been destroyed on a portion of his property by the cattle trespassing there. Mr. O'Neill's home is in the Western part of Canada.

Labor Is Ready To Fight Bolshevik

New York, Jan. 9.—Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, declared that American organized Labor will fight the spread of Bolshevism with every energy at its command. Mr. Gompers made the statement on the eve of his departure for Paris to attend the International Labor Conference to be held during the sessions of the peace envoys.

"Bolshevism," said Mr. Gompers, "is as great an attempt to disrupt the trade unions as it is to overturn the Governmene of the United States." He added that victory over the menace was assured, however, because of the sane Americanism of the American Federation of Labor.

15,000 AFFECTED BY NEW YORK STRIKE

MARINE WORKERS ARE OUT—70,000 LONGSHOREMEN MAY QUIT WORK.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

New York, Jan. 9.—With approximately fifteen thousand affected a strike of the Marine Workers Affiliation went into effect here at six o'clock this morning. At that hour ferry boats, steamers, lighters, tow boats, coal barges, grain boats and other harbor craft were at a standstill, according to the strike leaders. Union officials announced that all the city's fire and police boats would be tied up by the calling out of the crews. They threatened to call out the longstoremen, numbering seventy thousand.

OVER A MILLION FELL IN BATTLE

OFFICIAL STATEMENT PUBLISH OF FRENCH LOSSES IN WAR.

Washington, Jan. 9.—Casualties in the French army, excluding colonial troops, up to Nov. 1, were 4,762,800, according to official figures made public by the French high commission to correct conflicting reports hitherto published.

Men killed in action or dead of wounds numbered 1,028,000, and to this total must be added 299,000 listed as missing and given up for lost, making a total of 1,327,000. The number of wounded was 3,000,000, with 435,000 listed as prisoners. Three-fourths of the wounded have recovered either entirely or at least to such an extent as to be fit for work again.

Slightly less than 700,000 are absolutely unable to work and have been pensioned. To this figure must be added those who will come back from prison camps in Germany unfit for work. The French government estimates that the total number of troops coming from French colonies or protectorates were 42,500 killed or died of wounds, with 15,000 missing and very probably dead. The number pensioned after wounds or illness was 44,000, to which must be added those of the 3,500 held as prisoners of war who will have to be pensioned.

PREMIER EBERT HOPEFUL THAT HE WILL YET BE ABLE TO CRUSH THE SPARTACUS

Reports From Berlin Are Conflicting as Some Dispatches State That Ebert Has the Situation in Hand—Others Say That the Spartacus Are in Control.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Amsterdam, Jan. 9.—Street fighting in Berlin attained the greatest intensity between 11 o'clock Tuesday night and 5 o'clock Wednesday morning, according to a Berlin telegram to the Frankfort Nachrichten. Heavy artillery firing continued uninterruptedly. The despatch says the government is still master of the situation. Large bodies of troops, particularl artillery, it is added, continue to be sent to Berlin. Premier Ebert is reported to have told a friend that he had no doubt about the issue of the fighting. The government has decided to take energetic measures and has assembled a large number of troops. Premier Ebert has issued a manifesto to the workers, bourgeoise and soldiers denouncing the Spartacans as being responsible for many persons being killed and wounded.

Reports Are Conflicting.

London, Jan. 9.—Reports are conflicting in regard to conditions in Berlin. Paris says the Ebert government was turned out and that the independent Socialists are in control. Despatches from Switzerland declare that the Ebert government soldiers have fought the rebels out of the main buildings and streets of the capital. One thing sure is that bloody fighting has been in progress there for days.

WHERE SLEEP THE GALLANT DEAD

OVERSEAS COUNTRIES WILL HELP IN MAINTAINING SOLDIERS' CEMETERIES.

London, Jan. 9.—At a meeting of the Imperial Graves Commission, over which Rt. Hon. Walter Long, Colonial Secretary, presided, and at which all British overseas representatives were present, the Chairman states that all overseas Governments had unreservedly agreed to bear their share of whatever expense was involved in worthily honoring the memory of their dead. The Commission, therefore, was free to discharge its task in no ungrudging or niggardly spirit. The Commission adopted the recommendation that the most suitable method of honoring those whose graves could not be found or identified would be to place a tablet appropriately inscribed in a cemetery near the spot where it is believed

HEAVY SENTENCE FOR EX-OFFICER

FORMER TORONTO POLICEMAN HAD BANNED LITERATURE IN HIS POSSESSION.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Jan. 9.—Three years imprisonment in Kingston penitentiary and a fine of $500 or a further six months imprisonment was the sentence imposed by Magistrate Kingsford today on Charles Watson, a former city policeman, who was convicted yesterday of having objectionable literature in his possession. The literature included a pamphlet entitled "The Red Terror" with which Toronto and other Ontario cities were recently flooded. This circular was issued by a Provisional soldiers' and Workmen's Committee of Canada, and incited the returning soldiers and workers to take charge of all affairs of the Government and industry.

CAPT. BURNHAM CALLS ON MR. R. R. HALL TO EXPLAIN

Why Dredging of River Was Stopped by Laurier Government—Crux of Present Difficulty—Letter to Mayor Duncan and Council.

Capt. J. H. Burnham, M.P., has addressed the following letter to the members of the city council.

To the Mayor and Council of Peterborough:

Gentlemen:—With reference to Mr. R. R. Hall's letter to Mayor Duncan regarding the Hunter Street Bridge, permit me to say that the Laurier Government stopped dredging the channel leading up under the Hunter Street Bridge to Quaker Oats after the appearance on the Question Paper in Parliament of inquiries about it. This stoppage by the late Government is the crux of the whole present difficulty.

When the request for a contribution was laid before the Honorable Robt. Rogers later he found that after dredging the race-way of Quaker Oats an alleged turning basin above the bridge and part of a channel below the bridge the Laurier Government stopped the whole project and thus rendered it useless.

If Mr. Hall will appear before the minister when he comes in a week or two and will explain away this change of policy by the Laurier Government he will do much to free Mr. Carvell from the awkward box regarding a contribution to the bridge by the present Government, by reason of that fact. It would look very bad for us to further consider something which the late Government found it necessary to discontinue.

Incidentally, I may say one answer by the late Government to a question on the Question Paper of Parliament in 1909 regarding this work reads as follows:

"Work done by day's labor with dredge hired from Conroy Bros." It was understood that the people who hired the dredge from Conroy Bros. and did the work by days labor were Messrs Clarry & Co. This fact may have had something to do with the sudden stopping of the work when it was exposed.

However, Mr. Hall, had nothing to do with that matter as he was not then member, but he can now have much to do with enabling us to take the Hunter Street Bridge matter up legitimately as he will explain the dredging of Quaker Oats tail-race by the Laurier Government and other things connected with that job and the stoppage of the work. I hope the Council will invite Mr. Hall to be present. We will need all our resources to convince the present Government that Mr. Rogers refused to do something by way of expenditure that the present Government ought to do.

J. H. BURNHAM

BILL'S HOLE.

This is not the "better 'ole" of Bairnsfather's Old Bill, but it is the hole in which Wilhelm II. of Germany used to take refuge when there was an air raid during his occupancy of the Chateau at Spa, now the headquarters of the Allied generals. The steel doors on the right were pulled down when the "All Highest" had descended; now they are placed in position at nights to prevent accidents to passers-by in the grounds.

THE GOVERNMENT AND THE BRIDGE.

WHEN MR. R. R. HALL was a candidate for election to Parliament a little over a year ago one of the charges that appeared in the list of alue of omission and commission that he laid at the door of Capt. J. H. Burnham, M.P., was that the latter had done nothing to secure Federal financial aid in the building of the overhead bridge at Hunter street. Why was exertion on the part of Capt. Burnham necessary if, as Mr. Hall claims in a communication to The Review yesterday, he himself had cinched that matter as much as eleven years ago? At the time of the election campaign referred to the prospect of building the Hunter street bridge was remote, even though the ratepayers of the city had almost unanimously voted the estimated cost of the structure. It was understood on all sides that nothing would be done until the war had been disposed of. There was no occasion for Capt. Burnham or any other public man to importune the Government for assistance in a work that might not be taken up for years. It has always appeared to us that Mr. Hall made a tactical blunder in this part of his campaign and that he would have scored to more purpose with the electors if he had disclosed his information at that time and claimed credit for accomplishing what he charged his opponent with neglecting.

A vast amount of water has passed under the Hunter street bridge since Mr. Hall, as Federal member from West Peterborough, had his conference with the engineer of the Department of Public Works, and with Hon. Sidney Fisher and Hon. Wm. Pugsley, the first acting and the latter the real minister of the department having such matters in charge. These ministers are both out of the Government, and there has been a general shift in the situation. The present Cabinet, it is just possible, may not regard itself bound by a promise made to a private member by an ex-minister, a promise that had never, it appears, been affirmed by Parliament.

However, the time has come to secure a Federal grant for the construction of the Hunter street bridge. If Mr. Hall is able to have that promise, made eleven years ago, implemented, well and good, then let his be the praise and glory. But the very fact that Hon. F. B. Carvell, the present Minister of Public Works, deemed it necessary to come to Peterborough to look over the situation is significant. His visit has been arranged by Capt. Burnham, Mayor Duncan and other prominent citizens. Notwithstanding Mr. Hall's ample statement in The Review yesterday—which no one will question in any detail—there is still work to be done to secure the Federal aid that is required.

THE NEW BROTHERHOOD.

THE HEAD of the greatest Empire on earth and the President of the leading republic under the sun met on the soil of the former a few days ago for the first time in history, and the civilized world hailed the event as one of the most portentous ever recorded in the annals of time. It was and is regarded as an epoch-making influence in the affairs of the world, something that denoted the birth of a new fraternity between two powerful nations.

After all, the wonder is not so much that the English and Americans should thus be brought together into a brotherhood after a separation of more than a century in duration. Rather is it a marvel that the necessity for such a renewal of friendly relations should ever have existed. The separation was due to stupid diplomacy on the one side and hot-headedness on the other. One can almost imagine the statesmen of the days so long past whose blundering led to the loss of the American colonies, turning in their tombs as the British King and the President of the United States walked arm in arm together among the relics of departed greatness.

It was the machinations of political intriguers that separated the two peoples. It was the same evil influence that has kept the flame of rivalry and hate alive between them ever since. The present good feeling will be perpetuated only by the politicians referred to consenting to efface themselves or at least change their tactics. For years, in the United States, the most has been made of the foreign elements in its population by the public men who were intent only in securing the votes of those of alien birth or descent. One of these elements was pitted against the other at every election and the friend of the British race was ground between the two as by millstones.

The evils of such an insane policy were manifest when the United States, in common with the entire civilized world found itself menaced by an unscrupulous foe. The American people lacked anything like cohesion in the face of a common danger. It required three years of effort to unite the various factions so that the nation was able to assert its standing and dignity as a world power.

The British and the Americans have much to mutually forgive and forget, but neither will be safe, neither secured of peaceful relations, until the foreign mischief-maker is prevented from sowing his pernicious tares in the national wheatfield.

AND LLOYD GEORGE KNOWS.

LLOYD GEORGE has issued a warning to the Allies to the effect that it will be necessary for a period still indefinite to maintain a large force of fighting men along the Rhine. The most of us will be willing to concede that Lloyd George knows rather more of the situation over there than do ill-advised newspapers in Canada who are stirring up popular prejudice by seeking to make it appear that the Union Government is falling down in the matter of getting this country's contingent back home. There can be only one reason for such an agitation, and as for justification there is none.

Affairs in Europe are just as serious today as they have been at any time during the past four years. Every nation, no matter what side was taken in the recent struggle, is in a state of internal turmoil. No institution is safe. Modern democracy is menaced, just as autocracy was all through the war. Lawlessness is rampant in Russia and in the Central Powers. Germans have stopped fighting the Allies only to make bloody and disastrous warfare among themselves. The masses of Russia have gone insane, and pillage and murder is the daily program in that unhappy nation.

It would, as Lloyd George intimates, be nothing short of madness on the part of the Entente nations to take it for granted that the trouble ceased with the signing of the armistice. The world cannot tell where it is at until the final peace terms are arranged. It required military force to make the peace conference possible. To enforce the terms agreed upon by the delegates to that conference at least a measure of the same force will be necessary.

No doubt the homesick members of the Canadian contingent are anxious to return to Canada, but few men will care to leave until their work is completed. They are being brought back by the thousands, as they can be spared. But if a British army is necessary to maintain peace and to enforce the terms of the armistice and the finding of the conference, then Canada should have a part in that task and Canadian soldiers will not murmur at the new duty.

Evidently there has been a hitch in the arrangements somewhere. The world is not yet safe for democracy. That idealistic national condition is threatened as it never was in history. Liberty in the emancipated nations of Europe has been translated license. The pernicious doctrine of the Bolshevik is likely to spread if not checked and confined to the countries where it was born. The place to stem the rising tide is at its source.

COL. ROOSEVELT'S FUNERAL.

IN KEEPING with his democratic life was the simple funeral of the late Col. Roosevelt, which was carried out in every detail in accordance with the wishes expressed to Mrs. Roosevelt some time before his death. The United States Government would have accorded him the honor of a state funeral, with armed troops, official delegations, and every form of imposing pomp, but these offers were all declined by the family. Only the immediate relatives of the deceased were in attendance besides the villagers who all these years had respected while they admired the kindly neighbor who had passed away. There was no ceremony, no vulgar display of wealth. Everything was simple and unaffected. Even the beautiful funeral service of the Anglican Church was curtailed, and the officiating minister, instead of heaping fulsome panegyrics upon the dead, spoke briefly upon the uprightness of his active life.

The cost of living is a serious problem these days, but not more so than is the prospect of funeral expenses to many a poor family. There has come to be an unseemly rivalry in the matter of disposing of the dead, just as there is too much social competition among the living. Many an ambitious family have all but bankrupted themselves by going to unwarranted expense in the obsequies of a relative. Genuine grief always shuns a parade. The mourner's tribulation should be sacred from intrusion. Private funerals are coming more and more into vogue and are likely to increase in popularity even though they deprive a certain class of what has become a morbid pleasure in attending the burial of a fellow mortal.

Let there be more considerate treatment of the living and fewer encomiums upon the dead, whose dull ears are closed forever to all such tributes and whose pulses for all time fail to quicken at a kindly word. The good works of the righteous live after them in the memory of those who mourn their taking. Heralding their virtues to a community will not enhance the value of the shining light they leave behind them as an example.

Congregational Singing.

(London Free Press.)

Too much of our church music is vicarious. If we are to bring the joy of religion back to the hearts of the people there must be a revival of old-time congregational singing. No choir should be allowed to do all the singing for the congregation. Let the people give voice to their feelings in song, for its value remains undisputed.

AFTER THE WAR PROGRAM OF THE SALVATION ARMY

Soldiers Returning From Overseas Will Need Helping Hand of This Organization—First General Appeal for Public Money.

Though the Salvation Army has been since the commencement of the war, one of the most active agencies dealing with the comforts and welfare of the men who have been fighting the nation's battles, it has not made a general appeal to the Canadian public. The war work of the Army has been supported largely by occasional tag days and from self-denial funds; but the problems of reconstruction are so great, and the Army's program to help the men get back to civil life is so extensive, that it is compelled to appeal to the generosity of the Canadian people for financial assistance.

The Salvation Army supplies for every kind of social need; it is doing a wonderful work in providng homes for fallen women, in rescuing the drunkard, and in caring for the fatherless and neglected children, and it now proposes to very extensively increase the scope of its operations in Canada to make it easy for the returned soldier to begin the new life.

Canadian soldiers are returning from overseas as fast as steamship accommodation can be found. Many of these soldiers will not have their old situations to go back to; many of them will not have friends to appeal to. While efforts are being made to provide work for these men, it is not unlikely that there will be some unemployment and some cases of hardship. It is here that the Salvation Army is able to do some extensive relief work. It meets the soldier on his return; it welcomes him to its comfortable hostels, situated in our large centres of population; it gives him good meals at a nominal figure; befriends him in a hundred and one different ways, and finally makes some effort at least to help him find satisfactory employment and proper home living condition.

The Salvation Army spent two million dollars on war activities and three hundred thousand soldiers were accommodated daily in the Salvation Army huts in the war area. One hundred thousand parcels of food and clothing were distributed among soldiers and sailors. War widows and orphans are being taken care of, and in many other ways, the Salvation Army has done a great deal of soften the lives of both the boys at the front and their dependents at home.

An elaborate program for the reconstruction campaign is contemplated by the Salvation Army. While there are hostels in large centres of population, these are not numerous enough to satisfy all the needs in that direction, so it is intended to take over large buildings convienent for the purpose and establish more hostels in large distributing centres from coast to coast. That is the first object of the campaign to raise one million dollars.

The second object is to provide emergency receiving aand maternity homes for soldiers' wives, widows, and dependent children in need. Still another object is to continue during demobilization, both in England and France, the accommodations and the equipment that have made the Salvation Army huts the popular institutions that they are among the soldier boys.

It is felt that the Salvation Army is in a position, with its war experience and its peace-time work, to render valuable aid to the official Government bodies that are tackling the new peace problems. For this reason the prominent political chiefs of the country have endorsed the campaign, and have consented to act on the general committee. Sir Edmund Walker is the Honorary Treasurer, and among the prominent members of the general committee are: Hon. I. B. Lucas, Hon. H. J. Cody, Hon. R. F. Preston, Hon. G. H. Ferguson, Hon. T. W. McGarry, Hon. W. D McPherson, Bishop O'Leary, and many others. Colonel W. S. Dinnick is Chairman of the campaign executive committee, Arthur Hewitt, first vice-president, and H. M. Cowan, chairman of the publicity committee.

My cussin Artie was erround for suppir last nite, being one piece of chocklit cake for everybody, and wen me and Artie got reddy for dissert our 2 pieces was the ony 2 peeces left, one of them being a grate big peece and the one jest being a regular size peece, the plate being ware me and Artie cood both reech it without enybody handing it to us, me thinking, Ill leeve Artie take his peece ferst and he will haff to leeve the big peece out of politeness.

And I looked at Artie and heer wat was Artie doing but looking at me, and ma sed, Well, aren't you boys reddy for your cake?

Yes mam, sed me and Artie.

Well help yourselves, wy this unuaual formality? sed ma—meening wat was we waiting for, and I sed Ill leeve Artie take his ferst, compinny awt to always be ferst.

I aint compinny, your own cussin aint compinny, you can take yours ferst if you wuant, sed Artie.

No, you take yours ferst, you're more compinny than wat I am enyhow, I sed, and pop sed, Pardon the interferents of a meer outsider, but has the relative size of the 2 peeces enything to do with this excreeciating politeness.

No sir, Ill shut my eyes and take a peece jest to prove it, I sed. And I quick shut my eyes and took a piece of cake, not feeling as big an wat I thawt it would, and wen I opened my eyes wat was it but the regular little peece and I sed, O. G. pop, no fare, you terned the plate erround.

How do you know, sed pop.

Because you did, I sed. Not telling him how I knew. And I ate the regular size peece and Artie ate the big peece, but I made mine last as long as his enyway, out of revenge.

Some men seem to think their ability to dodge the consequences is even better policy than honesty.

Occasionally we hear of a man who manages to make good by following his wife's advice.

TODAY'S STORY

George knew nothing about an echo. One day he called out in the meadow, 'Hullo!' and a voice replied, 'Hullo!' Surprised and annoyed, he shouted, 'Who are ou?' The voice replied, 'Who are you?' Then he cried, 'You are a silly boy,' and listening, he caught the words 'silly boy' coming from the wood.

He now became really angry, and called out a lot of naughty words to the boy in the wood, but each one came back again. Then he made up his mind to find him where he was hidden, but he searched in vain. When he got home he told his mother about the rude boy, and how he had called him such naughty names.

"Ah," said the mother, when he had finished, now I have caught you! All you heard was the echo of your own voice. Had you called out a pleasant word, the very same word would have come back to you. Thus it is in this every-day world of ours. The behaviour of others to us is often enough the echo of ours to them. If we receive people in a friendly way, we meet with a smile. If we are unfriendly, cross, and peevish, we can expect nothing better from them."

FEMININE LOGIC

We asked the young lady across the way if she had a thesaurus around the house and she said since the goldfish died she had no pets at all.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

Of bad things your own bad temper should head the list.

One burlesque show will keep some men awake longer than a dozen sermons.

It is said that liquor improves with age, but some men don't care to wait.

Many a man can trace his ruin to his enemies and many others could doubtless trace the origin of his downfall to a pretended friend.

ROYAL YEAST

Has been Canada's favorite yeast for over a quarter of a century. Bread baked with Royal Yeast will keep fresh and moist longer than that made with any other, so that a full week's supply can easily be made at one baking, and the last loaf will be just as good as the first.

CONDITIONS ON ONTARIO FARMS

The following is a summary of reports made by Agricultural Representatives to the Ontario Department of Agriculture:—

The weather was comparatively open during the last half of December, and in Kent some cattle were on pasture until a few days before Christmas. Winter conditions have since prevailed.

Fall wheat has a fair covering of snow, and so far is in good condition. There has been a few complaints in Kent of Hessian fly.

Live stock generally entered the stable in good condition, but Lanark reports some poor animals being marketed, chiefly young stock.

Three carloads of live stock were shipped from Emo, Rainy River, last week, the average price paid being 6c a lb for cattle and 18c for hogs live weight.

Veal calves have been going on the market in Brant at 14 and 15 cents a lb, and dairy cows have changed hands in that county at prices ranging from $140 to $170.

There has been a considerable falling off in the flow of milk, but fresh cows are now coming in, and the supply is beginning to show a decided increase.

Hogs are being marketed in more finished condition compared with last year's offerings. There are said to be a fair number on hand. Little pigs are selling at from $12 to $14 a pair.

All fodders are sufficient except hay, of which some farmers are rather short. This article has a remarkable range in price, from $18 to $33 a ton being quoted. There are some complaints of the general quality of corn ensilage.

The bean market is dull, buyers being unusually slow in bidding. Oats, however, are in considerable demand, with a large supply on hand.

The labor supply is regarded as sufficient generally, the recent scarcity being more or less relieved by men returning from military service.

THIS Announcement is made by the Dominion Government made now because it feels that every Canadian wants to know, and is entitled to know, just what plans it has made to meet the problems that face the country. Only now has it been possible to finish the many plans and policies necessitated.

From day to day the Government will use this space to explain what it is doing to bring back our soldiers, to ensure the comfort of their dependents, to keep the whole nation busy and prosperous.

The problem is to take back our soldiers and war-workers into our social and business life under proper working and living conditions. It has four phases:—

1. To bring the soldiers home.
2. To fit those who have suffered overseas for useful employment.
3. To have ready for every soldier and war worker an opportunity for employment.
4. To assure for them proper living and working conditions.

The plans of the Government are such as will help solve these problems. What those plans are will be reported to you in this series of announcements.

WHAT FASHIONABLE WOMEN ARE WEARING IN WASHINGTON

Admirable Taste as well as an Open Purse Is Shown in the Costumes Worn in the First Season After the War.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 5.—There is a delightful individuality in the dress of this after the war season which speaks well for the taste of the American woman who is buying new clothes with an open mind as well as an open purse.

The several small and smart balls of the holiday season, notably that at the British embassy, where dancng was resumed after a four years of work and service in the famous ballrooms, show that for evening wear the severe elegance of Worth is quite holding its own with the novel conceits of cut and color introduced by Callot, Premet, Cherult and, followed a long way in the rear, by their American imitators.

The few American designers recognized by well dressed women are forging ahead at the capital, where several of the season debutantes have been outfitted entirely by an American modiste who knows how to adopt imported or domestic fabrics to the American bud, be the latter of the rose or violet type.

As a matter of fact, there are no exclusive Paris designs unless made to order for each particular patron, as after the design of even the most famous artist is executed and the gown put on the market that particular design becomes the property of every ambitious imitator, good, bad or indifferent, in any part of the world.

The vogue for ostrich trimming, for instance, reached its zenith at Christmas time, when, despite its elegance and its great cost, one young belle confided to this writer it was "so common" she regretted ever having had it on any of her coming out gowns.

Velvet gowns for street or evening wear cannot become "common," at least for this season, as there is almost no cheap velvet on the market, and the early importations are said to be in the hands of such exclusive modistes that only the latter will be able to produce gowns of this coveted and always becoming material.

A wonderful creation of rose pink paune velvet worn by Mrs. Raymond Baker, the former Mrs. Alfred Vanderbilt, is an example of the Paris gown of the moment, as well as the most becoming frock this richest bride of the year has yet worn in Washington. This is presumably a Worth creation, with what old fashioned people call its trimming all on the top.

The skirt is fully seven inches from the ground, shorter in the back than the front, with a perceptible fullness at the waist line, only there is no waist line, as the curveless bodice of pearls and crystals comes below the normal waist. From under this exquisite bodice, the crystal of which takes on some of the pink tone of the gown, falls a long narrow train that is little more than a broad sash.

The sleeves are short little fluffs of pink tulle. Slippers and hosiery match the gown in color.

Mrs. Baker wore with this at a dinner in her honor by the former ambassador to Russia and Mrs. Marye a long string of perfectly matched pearls.

A black velvet evening gown of ultra smart lines is worn by Mrs. Sylvanus Stokes, jr., still to be reckoned among the brides of the last season, who as Miss Margaret Fahnestock was one of the best gowned girls of Newport, as well as of Washington. This is a closely draped model with curveless one piece effect with which young Mrs. Stokes wears vivid red satin slippers with hosiery to match. She also wears pendant pearl earrings, giving a quaint and becoming touch.

Mrs. Theodore Stark Williamson II. (Catherine Harlow), just back from a short honeymoon, attended her first large dances a matron in the most fascinating gown of blue and gold brocade, on the long lines she loves, with square cut neck and flowing sleeves, the latter of gold lace.

FASHION'S FADS

A fringed silk collar gives a plain black satin gown a smart touch.

A charming tea gown is composed of a skirt in ecru lace, a paneled blouse of black velvet and a general felling of brilliant green chiffon.

Japanese cotton crepe makes excellent winter frock for small children.

Black crepe de chine is sometimes worn with a vest of rose satin, embroidered in white angora and gold thread.

Miss Margaret Perin, Mrs. George Howard's handsome young daughter, is wearing one of the smartest of velvet dinner gowns in a rose color, with drapery of velvet brocaded chiffon.

Mrs. Joseph Leiter, who has a stock of superb oriental brocades to draw on when importers fail, is obviously using this reserve, as shown in a wonderful mid-night and gold brocade velvet. American modistes made up this gown with great skill, giving an exquisite touch of color in the courage flowers taking on a violet or orchid tone.

Mrs. Thomas Blagden, Jr. (Ethel Noyes) and Mrs. Howard Hume (Doris Haywood) are two of the most attractive young matrons of the genuine born in Washington set who are looking very smart in up to the minute colored evening gowns. Mrs. Blagden's in pale blue, and Mrs. Hume's in pink.

Any bit of fine linen, provided it is eight or nine inches square, can be utilized for charming hand-rolled handkerchiefs.

A yard of plain black moire ribbon can be made into a pretty little neck accessory by adding colored tassels and embroidery on the ends.

All the world's a stage and the majority of us sit in the gallery and thrown things at the performers.

BERLIN DANCING MAD.

Germans Who Survived War Trying to Forget.

The correspondent in Berlin of the Daily Express, dealing with the return of the German army says the scenes of enthusiasm marking the homecoming of the troops are ending.

"Men have been coming home at the rate of 10,000 a day," says the correspondent. "Every day Herr Ebert, the Chancellor, takes his place on a rostrum opposite the French Embassy. He addresses the homecoming men and the bands play martial music, while the crowds cheer and wave their handkerchiefs.

"Deutschland uber Alles" brought me into the street this morning. To my amazement — and the apparent amazement of the French officers grouped in the window of the Embassy—a regiment was passing the Brandenburg Gate to the old tune. Later, I heard it played continuously as cavalry, infantry and artillery swept by. Regimental flags were crowned with laurel wreaths. The men wore evergreens around their steel helmets and their tunics and guns were covered with flowers.

"What particularly struck me was the attitude of the homecoming officers. Those I have seen in the Berlin garrison were quiet men, many of whom had removed their marks of rank. They seldom were saluted by their men. On the other hand the troops just returned from the front are well disciplined and salute as of old. The officers themselves are unchanged. They exhibit themselves monocled and tight waisted, to the population, who cheer them loudly.

"Berlin is dancing mad. There are about 50 cabarets in the city and dancing goes on all the afternoon and until 9 o'clock at night. In a week's time the edict closing dancing halls at 9 o'clock will be removed and dancing then will continue all night. Berliners are looking forward to this.

"It is a remarkable sight to see cabarets packed to suffocation with women in expensive toilettes and both soldiers and civilians dancing and drinking wine costing $10 a bottle. Seats at the theatres can only be booked two days ahead. 'We are trying to forget,' said a Berliner to me to-day."

Higher Aim Set for Guelph in Red Shield Drive.

Guelph, Jan. 9. — Commissioner Richards of the Salvation Army addressed a committee of prominent business men here and outlined the purposes of the Red Shield Drive campaign. Mr. Sam Carter, M.P., also addressed the committee and promised that the whole-hearted support of the committee would be given during the campaign.

The team captains were appointed and preparations made for a sharp campaign. The objective of $10,000 for the city was regarded as too low, and the committee have set their faces toward a much higher mark.

APPROVES PROHIBITION.

Medicine Hat, Jan. 9.—The Alberta Federation of Labor has declared emphatically against any modification of the prohibition legislation in this province. COL. ROOSEVELT'S WILL

Ex-President Believed to Have Left Large Fortune

Oyster Bay, Jan. 9. The will of Colonel Roosevelt will be filed at Mineola in the near future, it was said by a friend of the family. The will is said to be very brief.

Colonel Roosevelt's fortune has been estimated at between $500,000 and $1,000,000, but little is definitely known on the subject. The Sagamore Hill estate is said to be worth about $150,000, according to present values of similar properties. Since he left the presidency Colonel Roosevelt's earnings with his pen have been very large.

LOOK AT CHILD'S TONGUE IF SICK CROSS, FEVERISH

WHEN CONSTIPATED OR BILIOUS GIVE "CALIFORNIA SYRUP OF FIGS."

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, it is a sure sign that your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once.

When peevish, cross, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, doesn't eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has stomach-ache, sore throat, diarrhoea, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated wasted, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

You needn't coax sick children to take this harmless "fruit laxative;" they love its delicious taste and it always makes them feel splendid.

Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. To be sure you get the genuine, ask to see that it is made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

MR. A. J. BOLWELL

ed from overseas, was recommended for the position of manager of the Government employment bureau to be established in this city. Private Robertson is a member of the G. W. V. A. He was wounded while in the service and is in receipt of a pension of $7.50 a month.

Protest the Censorship.

C. Stephens, secretary of the Trades Council in Vancouver, wrote asking that the Council join in a protest to the Postmaster General against the censorship on mail matter dealing with labor questions, and this request was concurred in. The Stationary Engineers were also backed up in their protest to the Minister of Public Works for Ontario, F. G. Macdiarmid, against the granting of licenses to women giving them authority to act as engineers in factories.

To Increase Membership.

The Trades Council is composed of five delegates from every union regardless of the numerical strength of the organization that elects them. About a year ago an attempt was made to revise the constitution so as to provide for representation according to the number of members in the different unions. The avowed object of the change is to increase the revenue. This agitation was revived last night, and a committee consisting of Delegates Flannery, Campbell, Stenton, Noonan and Crowe was appointed to devise ways and means.

T. Ogilvie of the Electrical Workers' Union was endorsed for appointment by the City Council as a member of the Public Library Commission, the object being to secure more labor literature on the shelves and tables of that institution.

An Ald.-Elect's Fence.

Ald.-Elect Murray stated that he had been assured that the City Council would give him until spring to remove his fence. If this permission is withheld he will tear down the fence and so be in a position to take the seat to which he was elected.

TAKING CARE OF THE SOLDIERS

GERMAN'S TREATMENT BY GOVERNMENT IN THE MATTER OF GRATUITIES.

Thousands of soldiers will soon be returning to Canada. Their demobilization has been so arranged that the labor market will not be glutted, resulting in returned soldiers being out of work. It is realized that the soldier, as soon as he is charged from the army, will look for employment. In order that he may have an opportunity of living decently until he find employment, the Dominion government has decided to give every man a "War Service Gratuity." The whole plan is described in an advertisement "War to Peace," which appears in this paper today. The gratuity is graded, according to length of service, from six months to one month's pay and allowance.

After Feb. 1st, men who already have been discharged will be given their gratuity to which they are entitled. Men who still are in the service will receive their first month's gratuity immediately upon their discharge. Men who are in the case of the Soldiers' Civil Re-Establishment Department will receive their gratuity as soon as they cease to receive pay and allowance. The gratuity also will be granted to a dead soldier's relatives.

The decision to grant this gratuity places Canada in a position of treating her returned soldiers more generously than any other nation.

WANTED—Route boy for south end of city. Apply at once, Review.

ONLY ONE DEFEAT.

For Jack Dempsey During the Year Just Closed.

New York, Jan. 9. — While Jack Dempsey did not do as much work as a few other boxers in the ring during 1918, his performances in the squared circle were more spectacular. The leading contender for Jess Willard's crown appeared in twenty-two battles during the year and won seventeen via the knockout route. He lost one referee's decision in a bout with Willie Meehan, and engaged in three no-decision affairs.

Benny Valger, the French flash, was the busiest boxer, taking part in thirty-nine battles. He won seven times and lost once. On four occasions he put his opponet to sleep. Frankie Britt was in twenty-eight contests and won eighteen and lost two. Five times he fought draws. Jack Sharkey fought twenty-five times, but was not awarded a single decision, while he lost but one battle. Twenty-two of his ring engagements were nodecision contests.

SOLDIERS HOME THE SALVATION ARMY COMING CAMPAIGN

Help Her to Help Them

Over There Over Here

THE BOYS WON'T ALL BE HOME FOR MONTHS YET!—The boys went away with your promise ringing in their ears: "We'll keep the Home fires burning till the boys come home." That meant until the last boy was home and settled in civilian life.

While fighting was going on you helped—and helped liberally—Red Cross, Comforts, Huts, Hostels, everything! But what of the months that must elapse before they are all back home and comfortably settled?

It is for YOU to say the word. Shall their comforts cease? Shall their splendid manhood suffer under relaxed discipline? Shall they have WHOLESOME recreation overseas, and over here? Shall they rest content in the knowledge that their families are being taken care of?

There is only one answer—A MILLION FOR THE BOYS WHO PUT IT OVER!

The Salvation Army Million Dollar Fund

January 19th to 25th

"FIRST TO SERVE—LAST TO APPEAL"

You will not deny the soldier his Salvation Army comforts—the Hostel is his HOME, his store, his entertainment, his church, his club! Shut him out and where will he go?

MOTHERS! You cannot go "over there" to mother your boys, to bake pies, mend their clothes and give them the hundred and one little comforts of home. But the Salvation Army Lassie is there. She is doing these things for you. Help Her to Help Them!

Ask the Boys Who Have Come Back

Ask any returned soldier about the Salvation Army. As one man said: "If you're hungry, they meet you with eggs and bacon; if you're mopish, they cheer you up with a song; if you're not doing the straight thing, they give you a rough time in their meetings; and if you are put out of action by a shell, they give you a ride in a motor 'bus."

We thank God the casualties have ceased. But there is much work to be done. The Salvation Army will see that even the boys that are sent to do garrison duty in occupied territory will not be out of touch with the comforts of life—if you say so.

Keep the boys smiling in France and Britain. Keep the chain of Hostels intact from Halifax to Vancouver until the last boy is home. Let the Salvation Army offer hospitality everywhere it is needed, during the repatriation of the soldiers. Do not let one man feel he is stranded without a friend after he has done his bit. Remember your pledge—"Till the boys come home" All the boys.

"Give and it shall be given unto you—good measure"

PTE. MONTGOMERY WELCOMED HOME

TENDERED A RECEPTION BY HIS FRIENDS IN NORTH SMITH.

A very pleasing event took place Friday evening, Jan. 3, when the friends and neighbors of Pte. John Montgomery gathered at the North Smith Wesley Methodist Church, of which Pte. Montgomery was a valued member. The gathering took the form of a reception to welcome Pte. Montgomery home from France, he having arrived home on New Year's Day.

The evening was spent in musical selections, patriotic songs and addresses, followed by a fowl supper, after which was rendered, "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow," for Pte. Montgomery. The gathering dispersed after singing God Save the King.

Pte. Montgomery enlisted and went overseas with the 93rd Battalion from Peterboro. While in England he was transferred and went to France with the Canadian Mounted Rifles. He has seen considerable active service, and was wounded at Vimy Ridge, and was returned to England to a hospital. On recovering he went to France a second time. About the middle of last September he was taken prisoner, and remained in the hands of the Germans until the signing of the armistice. Pte. Montgomery can relate many thrilling events of his experience in the firing line and his return from the prison camp.

BE PRETTY! TURN GRAY HAIR DARK

TRY GRANDMOTHER'S OLD FAVORITE RECIPE OF SAGE TEA AND SULPHUR

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe, improved by the additions of other ingredients, for about 50 cents.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can posibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy and attractive.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire dark hair and a youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

HAD SUFFERED FOR FOURTEEN YEARS

COULDN'T LIFT AN ARM OR LEG FROM BED—TANLAC RESTORES HEALTH

"I wish I could have found Tanlac fourteen years ago," said William D. Lawrence, who lives at 417 East 30th Street, Tacoma, Wash, a few days ago.

"I have suffered all the pangs of inflammatory rheumatism just that many years," he continued, "and many times I have been in such misery I would almost wish I could die and end it all. My whole body was racked with pain nearly all the time and I would get terribly swollen and sore, sometimes my feet would swell so bad I couldn't get my shoes on. The swelling and pain would come so suddenly in my feet at times that I would have to cut the strings of my shoes so I could get them off real quick. I was so bad off at one time that I was flat on my back for two or three months at a stretch, and couldn't raise an arm or leg during all that time, and every part of my body just ached with pain all the time. I went night after night without a minutes sleep, just had to lie there and suffer.

"I tried everything I could get my hands on, thinking I would get something after a while that would do me some good, but nothing seemed to help me very much. I thought a change might do some good, so I came to Tacoma a short time ago, and when I got here I heard a great many people talking about the good Tanlac had done them and I thought I would try it out myself. Well, sir, it began to overcome my trouble right away. I am practically free from those terrible rheumatic pains now, and all that swelling is a thing of the past, and in fact, all that fourteen years of misery seem to be over. I sleep like a log and am gaining both in weight and strength every day. I never lose a minute from my work now, put in full time every day and just feel good all the time. It sure is great to be in such fine shape after fourteen years agony. I don't believe there is another medicine in the world equal to Tanlac."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co. Ltd.; in Havelock, by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield, by Tanner Drug Co. Ltd.; in Fowlers' Corners, by W. A. Hunter; in Golert, by A. J. Scott; in Westwood, by G. Pringle & Son.

TRAINMED ASK FOR EIGHT HOURS

INSIST ON SAME CONDITIONS AS PREVAIL IN UNITED STATES.

Having attained the McAdoo wage schedule, the combined membership of the Brotherhood of Railway Employees, extending from coast to coast, have made a demand upon the Dominion Railway War Board for an eight-hour workday under the terms of the McAdoo award to railway employees in the United States. That their demand will be granted seems almost certain. The brotherhood is pressing for eight hours a day, stipulating the hours from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Complying with a request of the Dominion Railway War Board, the Ontario division of that body, of which Mr. G. C. Bowker, General Superintendent of the G.T.R., is Chairman, yesterday held a conference with representatives of the Transportation Committee of the Toronto Board of Trade. The demands of the brotherhood were explained by Chairman Bowker, and following a lengthy discussion, a resolution was passed suggesting that the request of the men be modified by making the hours 8 a.m. to 5.30 p.m.

The decision was not unanimous, as several of those present contended that the new schedule of hours would materially interfere with the business of many firms. In addition to the railway officials representing all the railways, including the Canadian National Railways, representatives of the different cartage transportation companies were present, but did not take any part in the discussion owing to the fact that the meeting called by the Railway Board at the Board of Trade was the first intimation they had received that any such move was under consideration.

WHEN THE WORLD IS MADE OVER

THERE WILL BE A NEW SYSTEM FOR HEATING HOUSES.

"At no distant day an entirely new system of fuel utilization will be adopted in this country," says Dr. Joseph E. Pogue of the Smithsonian Institution. "The entire coal supply of each city or town will be delivered to a central municipal plant, which will attend to the business of its distribution.

"But nobody will get any 'raw.' All of it will be put through a process by which the fuelstuff that it contains will be separated out, for subsequent delivery to householders and other consumers, while certain valuable by-products are saved.

"Anthracite will soon be regarded as a luxury up in price. Ordinary folks will have to content themselves with soft coal. The latter is an excellent fuel, but dirty. It gives off a dense black smoke that dirties the home, pollutes the atmosphere and menaces health.

"This is the one great disadvantage of bituminous coal. But it will be wholly done away with under the system that must before very long arrive. Either the fuelstuff that is in it will be converted into a smokeless artifical anthracite or an equivalent result will be attained by extracting all of th efuelstuff in the form of gas, for delivery to consumers through pipes.

"We object to the black smoke of bituminous coal, and no wonder. But what in reality is this smoke. Of what is it composed? The answer is that it contains most of the valuable ingredients of the coal. They pass off into the air and are lost forever."

THUG IS KILLED BY THE POLICE

NEW YORK OFFICER RESCUES YOUNG WOMEN FROM ASSAULT

New York, Jan. 9.—Attacked by four men from whom he had attempted to rescue Mrs. Anna Dowder, the 18-year-old wife of a sailor, Patrolman Michael Gleason shot and killed a man identified as Peter Prinzy, a longshoreman, and seriously wounded another man.

The fight took place in West Fifty-seventh street after Gleason had heard Mrs. Dowder scream for help. In an allway he saw the young mother struggling with four men.

Gleason is more than six feet tall and unusually strong so he "pitched in" but almost met his match.

Three men who were in the dark hallway jumped on him, while the fourth held on to the struggling Mrs. Dowder. One man got Gleason's night-stick away from him in the first rush and beat him with it, while the others kicked and pounded him to the floor.

Gleason, blinded and bleeding, managed to shake off his assailants and get out his revolver. His first bullet hit the man who was wielding the night-stick in the heart.

The other assailants ran, but a bullet caught one of them, who almost fell, but was dragged away by his companions.

Honored Edith Cavell.

The grave of Edith Cavell, the English nurse executed by the Germans, in the Tir National Cemetery at Brussels, is believed to have been definitely located from a German plan of the cemetery in the hands of the Belgian authorities, and the British community held a commemoration service at the grave. The service was attended by the British Minister, who laid on the mound of earth a wreath from King George and Queen Mary, inscribed, "In memory of a brave and splendid English woman."

Sir F. S. Villiers deposited a wreath bound with the British colors in the name of the British Legation and colony, and Brand Whitlock, the American Minister, added a tribute of his own. The Spanish Minister, the Belgian Foreign Minister and the members of the legations' staffs were present at the ceremony.

One of the first acts of King Albert after his re-entry into Brussels was to visit the cemetery in company with Queen Elizabeth, who laid a wreath on Miss Cavell's grave.

Newfoundland Regiment's Record.

Out of 6,372 men accepted for service in the Royal Newfoundland Regiment, there was a total of 3,757 casualties, including 1,180 killed, up to the signing of the armistice, according to figures compiled by the Militia Department and made public to-day. Two hundred and ten men were awarded military decorations for bravery. The regiment, the first units of which left here in October, 1914, saw fighting in the Gallipoli campaign and in Egypt, and was transferred to France in March, 1916. Since then the Newfoundlanders have participated in some of the bitterest campaigning of the war, Ypres, in the Arras sector, and in the last months of the struggle in Flanders.

Horses At Toronto

The horse business is still very quiet. Practically no horses are being shipped to Toronto at present. In fact the local dealers do not look for heavy shipments for some time.

Private sales are really more active than the public auctions. Last week there were really no transactions at the Union Yards.

At present there is no indication just when another military sale will take place. Toronto, however, will most likely be the point chosen to dispose of practically the army holdings.

President Of The International Is Well Versed In Baseball

David Fultz Has Long and Creditable Career on the Diamond—Johnny Evers Was a Rival for the Position.

New life was injected into the International league when David L. Fultz, now a lieutenant in the American aviation corps, was elected president, secretary and treasurer of the organization.

"I guess I've got to learn the ropes," Lieut. Fultz admitted when asked for his plans. "I realize, though, that taking hold of a minor league at this time is no easy proposition, but I think we may be able to do something with the International league."

"I think Lieut. Fultz' election to this job is a sure sign of the reconstruction that is sure to come to baseball," Major Branch Rickey, president of the St. Louis Nationals, declared shortly after the election. "We frequently fought on opposite sides in baseball," he added, "but I always have had an admiration for Fultz."

President Knows The Game.

Lieut. Fultz, who is still in military service and stationed at Hazelhurst field, Long Island, succeeds John H. Farrell, who resigned the leadership of the International league at the annual meeting of the organization month. The new executive expects to be discharged from the "bigger game" in about a week's time.

Fultz, who has had an active career in the sporting world, is a graduate of Brown university. While there he engaged in football and baseball and emerged a star. In 1899 he played with the Baltimore club of the National league and a year later was with the Milwaukee aggregation. In 1901 he went to the Athletics and two years later was sold to the Yankees. Fultz retired from professional baseball in 1905 after a disastrous collision on the diamond with Kid Elberfeld, shortstop of the New York team, but he remained active in sporting matters, practicalarly as a football expert.

Six years ago Fultz was elected president of the Ballplayers' Fraternity, an organization which he assisted in organizing, but which was terminated after a fruitless strike two years ago.

Lieut. Fultz will hold the position as president of the International league for the period of one year. The term was thus limited at his own request. He will have the executive offices of the league brought back to New York, using the same offices in which he practices law.

Evers Mentioned For Place.

For a time today it seemed like a toss-up between Lieut. Fultz and Johnny Evers, former star second baseman, for the International presidency. Johnny is now a Knights of Columbus secretary. He was asked prior to the meeting by F. S. Benedict, presenting the Binghamton club, if he would consider the post and Evers replied that he would have to think the matter over. He enquired as to the salary, and while not enamored with the amount indicated he would consider the matter if the presidency were offered him.

The Rochester club was not represented at the meeting, Charles Chapin, the up-state owner, who made known his intention of leaving the league at the last meeting if Fultz was elected, was absent, but as the Rochester club has a big deal with the Giants not very much significance was attached to absence.

Joseph Lannin, triumvirate manager last season, also was absent, but C. H. Knapp, of Baltimore, was his proxy. Thomas McCarthy and Patrick Donovan cared for the interests of the Newark and Hamilton clubs respectively.

Against The Draft.

The election of Fultz to the leadership was made unanimous as the result of the strength mustered by Lannin.

A resolution urging the abandonment of the draft from the International league was drawn up at the meeting of the International league today. It is to be carried before the joint meeting of the two big leagues here on January 16.

PETERBORO INTERMEDIATES WIN FIRST CONTEST OF THE SERIES

Beat Team of Veterans From Whitby Military Hospital by Score of 7-6—Made Surprising Rally in Second Period.

In the opening junior game of the season, played in Lindsay last night the Midgets defeated Port Hope by 7 to . Garnet and Kelly were best for the locals. Both teams played fast hockey. Lndsay scored five goals in the first period, but were outplayed thereafter. The teams:

Lindsay—Goal, Williamson; defence, Green and Garnett; centre, Kelly; wings, Stoddard and Killen. Substitutes, Bell and McElroy.

Port Hope—Goal, Copeland; defence, Irvine and Deylen; centre, Hill; wings, Southwell and Weir. Substitute, Crigin.

Referee, Brown.

Lindsay begins the series in a most auspicious manner. On Friday night they will play the Peterborough juniors who look forward to the rivals with lively anticipation of giving their rivals a set back. The game should be a good one.

PETERBORO—— J

Peterborough won the first game of the intermediate O. H. A. series that night when they defeated the Whitby Military Hospital team to the tune of 7-6.

In the first period the visitors had things pretty much their own way and kept the disk hovering about the nets of the home team most of the time, scoring thrice.

In the second spasm things did not improve any for Peterborough as the visitors added two scores to their count to the one gained by the locals.

The last twenty minutes, however, reversed the positions in a most surprising manner. Up to 9.45 Peterborough showed every evidence of being beaten and outplayed. They had had only two practices this season and it was felt that they would stand little chance of making good in the last period against a team composed largely of soldiers, who had plenty of time to devote to getting into shape.

Won In a Canter.

The large crowd of spectators did not need the excuses they were preparing, to explain away an apparent defeat, as the home boys seemed to have saved all their punch for the last and came at the visitors in a way that was irresistible. A few minutes after the period was called the locals scored, and after that everything kept moving so fast that the men from Whitby seemed to have their breath taken away, judging from the surprised expressions on many of their faces. Three scores were added to the tally of the home team and the count was tied in less than five minutes. Then they landed another in the nets of their rivals and were one to the good, but a few minutes later, the visitors gained the only success of the last period, and succeeded in tying the score once more, but it did not get them anywhere as the rubber was rushed up the ice immediately after the succeeding scratch off and placed in their nets by the home players, making the tally 6-7 where it was held until the bell rang a few minutes later.

With the first period a complete runaway for the visitors and the second very little better, the performance of the local sextet was most surprising and gratifying.

The play improved as the game progressed—that is from the standpoint of Peterborough—and the last twenty minutes kept the spectators on their feet continually as the excitement was intense. It was a succession of brilliant dashes and passes and was played almost entirely about the nets of the visitors, much to their dismay. Meyers, the Whitby goalminder, seemed to lose a great deal of the self confidence, for which he was chiefly remarkable, in the first two periods, towards the last when the little disc seemed to be coming at him from several different directions at once.

Both teams lacked condition and the ice was not in good shape which must be considered in connection with the first two periods which were anything but fast.

The line-ups:

Referee—Marsh.

It's what a woman doesn't know about a man that causes her to have a good opinion of him.

Is Life Insurance Safe?

How often we hear the question, "Would Life Insurance Companies stand the extra strain of a great epidamic?"

This question is now answered by experience. We have passed through the greatest war in history, and on its heels and overlapping it came the most malignant epidemic ever experienced on this Continent, one that claimed more victims in two months from the people of Canada and the United States than the war did in four and one-third years.

The fact that the surplus of every one of the old Established Companies of Canada has not only been maintained but increased, answers the above question most eloquently, and proves that Life Insurance is not only safe, but IMPREGNABLE.

Experience proves that it is as safe as a Victory Bond, and, in the event of death, infinitely better.

THE SUN LIFE OF CANADA has distributed more to compensate for the terrible wastage of the recent War and Epidemic than any other Company in Canada.

Is it not, then, a wise place in which to carry your Insurance?

Knight-McGregor At Conservatory

Last night before an audience which taxed the capacity of the Conservatory hall the second entertainment of the Redpath Lyceum series under the auspices of the Conservatory of Music was given by the Knight-McGregor Company, a noted Scottish baritone and assisting artists, Mr. Boris Hambourg, cellits, a member of the celebrated musical family of Toronto and Miss Edna Wallace, solo pianist and accompanist.

Mr. Knight-McGregor won a place for himself in the hearts of the large audience last night by his splendid singing and genial manner. He gave a program which was almost as remarkable for the taste displayed in the choice as for the excellent rendition of the numbers:

Mr. Boris Hambourg appeared twice upon the program and played with authority, refinement of tone and a brilliant technique. He was recalled several times after each appearance.

One hundred pupils of the Conservatory were present by invitation, last night to profit by listening to the performance of the great artists. Some of the younger of these were given places on the platform.

The next concert of the Redpath series will be given by Lou. J. Beauchamp, humorous philosopher and lecturer.

ONLY THREE LABORERS WERE AFFECTED BY CUT IN WAGES

G. Walter Green Gives His Version of Labor Dispute in His Factory—No Attempt to Restore Pre-War Scale.

Editor Review: In your edition of yesterday, there appeared an item under the following heading, "Laborers Out In Local Plant."

Now in fairness to the general public and more particularly ourselves, we would like to correct the statements contained in same, as they are entirely erroneous.

One paragraph of article reads as follows: "It is stated that the idea was to establish a pre-war scale of wages, but the men who are members of the International Laborers' Union declare they will not stand for this, and announce their intention of remaining out until some more favorable decision is arrived at."

Now to begin with on looking up our records, we find that before, and even for a considerable time after war was declared, we were paying, to be exact, 19 4-9c per hour for the very same jobs for which we are now paying, (even after the cut in question has taken effect), 35c per hour, and moreover, we have some men who are getting 36 2-3c per hour, which, we think, is a striking contrast to pre-war wages ,notwithstanding the fact that many men are looking for jobs who have expressed their willingness to work for 33 1-3c per hour, and moreover we hired all our laborers individually; never were approached by them as a Union; never had a hint that they belonged to a Union, nor did we know that they did, and as far as we have as yet been able to find out, they have no set scale of wages.

You will, therefore, see Mr. Editor, that if the facts as we have stated are true, that you have misrepresented same to the public and we feel that in fairness to either employees or employer that the least you could have done before publishing a statement such as you did was to ascertain whether or not there was any semblance of truth in it.

Trusting you will give this the prominence you did the item in question.

Yours respectfully,
THE G. WALTER GREEN CO. Ltd.
Per—G. Walter Green, Pres.

Mr. Green stated further to The Review that only three laborers out of the nine or ten employed were affected by the reduction.

SOCIALISTS MET WITH REVERSES

DID NOT ELECT A SINGLE REPRESENTATIVE IN BADEN ELECTIONS.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Copenhagen, Jan. 10.—The results of the election of the national assembly in Baden have been disappointing to the Socialists, according to an admission made by Freiheit of Berlin. Out of the total of nearly one million votes, the Independent Socialists polled less than fifteen thousand and failed to elect a single representative. The Bourgeoisie parties elected 72 representatives against 39 for the majority Socialists who polled less than one-third of the whole vote cast.

REV. DR. KNOWLES HAS BEEN CALLED TO SARNIA CHURCH.

London, Jan. 10.—Already churches outside Petrolia are bidding for the services of Rev. R. W. Knowles, recently found guilty of heresy.

Rev. G. N. Hasen, one of the leading clerics of the Metrodist Church in the London District, and who while pastor of one of London's leading churches sat on a committee that tried Rev. Knowles' case at one of its various stages, is leaving the Devine Street Methodist Church, Sarnia, for Listowel. The Sarnia congregation at a meeting unanimously decided to call Rev. Mr. Knowles to their church.

"If Devine Street Church is fortunate enough in securing him for their pastor they are to be highly congratulated," declared one of the congregation.

Rev. Mr. Knowles has been pastor of the Petrolia Church for four years. His name was the only one considered by the Sarnia congregation.

WANT HOME RULE FOR THE IRISH

ENTHUSIASTIC MEETING HELD LAST NIGHT AT MONTREAL.

Montreal, Jan. 10.—Demands for Irish national life found full and passionate expression last night at the Monument National in the enthusiastically unanimous adoption of a resolution insisting that it was expedient on the general readjustment of European affairs at the Peace Conference that the cause of Ireland and her future status be taken into account, with a view to the immediate securing for her of the same rights, guarantees and liberties as are proposed to be accorded to the smaller nations of Europe; that such rights, guarantees and liberties take the form of self-government; and that copies of the resolution be forwarded to Premier Borden, Hon. BRITAIN AND FRANCE WIN THEIR POINT WITH REGARD TO FREEDOM OF THE SEAS

Very Little Discussion Likely on This Problem When Peace Conference Meets—President Wilson Urges Prompt Action in Order to Restore Pre-War Activities.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Jan. 10. (via Reuter's)—Messages from Paris indicate that Premiers Clemenceau and Lloyd George have scored a great success on the question of the freedom of the seas and that very little is likely to be said thereon when the actual peace conference assembles. The Sanish Morocco question has also been settled to the satisfaction of England and France.

All is Ready for the Conference

After nearly a month of waiting and preparation consultations, which will lay the foundation of the actual Peace Congress is about to start. bmerican delegates feel that a great deal of progress might have been made before now if a full representation of nations allied against Germany had arrived promptly. Suggestions have been made that the French and American delegations go ahead while awaiting the arrival of the British plenipotentiaries who are now expected on Saturday. President Wilson, however, vetoed that plan, holding that inasmuch as there has already been so long a delay it would be best to wait a little longer to secure the participation of the British.

President Wilson Disappointed

Some trained diplomats among the Americans here are agreed that the most Mr. Wilson can hope to report on will probably be a general undertaking of the widest sort paon a set of principles which must be left to be applied by the Peace Congress. President Wilson's feeling on coming to Europe as early as he did, was that all the Entente Governments made the co-operations to get down to talking peace. It is not an overestimation of the case to say that Mr. Wilson and hiscommissiongates are said to feel very strongly that unless plans are made to permit activities of peace to be resumed in the warrink countries the demobolization of their armies may bring unwelcome problems. The opinion most generally described is that if the conferences during the next six weeks establish a unanimity of purpose as to freedom of the seas, reduction of armaments and the actual terms of peace to be imposed upon the Central Powers, a great deal will have been accomplished.

British Steamer Is Sunk By Mine

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Jan. 10.—The British steamer Northumbria, four thousand tons, struck a mine off Middlesbrough Thursday and it is beliefed that most of the crew was lost. A boat wtih two survivors and eight dead has been washed ashore at Newton, Abbot. Four boats, which left the ship with the survivors, are missing."

BRITISH MAY CANCEL ALL CONTRACTS FOR BACON

If This Is Done Prices Will Fall in Canada —Present Stock in England Sufficient For All Needs.

Toronto, Jan. 10.—One of the largest Ontario packing plants has received a cable that the British Government was likely to cancel all bacon and lard contracts for future delivery, giving as a reason that the stocks now available in the United Kingdom are large enough to ensure ample supplies for at least four months in advance. It is learned from an absolutely reliable source that negotiations are going on relative to the matter, but that no definite decision has been arrived at.

Just what effect this will have on the bacon and lard trade locally is hard to say, but that it will have a tendency to lower prices seems reasonably assured. An official announcement will possibly be made tonight by one of the big plants out at the Union Stock Yards relative to the effect on the next week's hog trade. If a threatened cut in live hogs is made, it will practically confirm the cable report. A temporary dislocation of trade and lower prices might follow, but Central Europe is in need of enormous supplies and other avenues of trade will open up.

One of the largest Canadian operators said last night that he thougnt it was just a little bearish news, and that it was just as well, anyway, to let supply and demand regulate themselves.

Representatives of two or three of the big city packing plants said that if the rumor were true it would undoubtedly be a serious matter. The plants are said to be well supplied with fresh meats of all kinds, bought at high prices.

Yesterday's live stock market gave no indication of weakness in any quarter, cattle selling at the best recent high levels, hogs at 18¾ cents fed and watered, and 19 cents weighed off, and calves at the highest level in years, 18 cents to 19 cents live weight.

ROOSEVELT LEFT HALF MILLION

Oyster Bay, Jan. 10.—Col. Theodore Roosevelt's will, made in 1912, was read to members of the family at Sagamore Hill yesterday, and probably will be filed with the Surrogate of Nassau County today.

Although the value of the former President's estate was not made known, it was understood to amount to not more than $500,000. According to Attorney George C. Cobb of New York, who read the will, the document provides that the entire estate, with the exception of the family silver and plate, shall be held in trust for the widow during her life, and gives her power to dispose of it by will as she sees fit. In the event she leaves no will, the estate is to be divided in equal parts among the children.

The silver and family plate, Mr. Cobb said, are to be divided among the children, as is a $60,000 trust fund left to Col. Roosevelt by his father.

LOYALISTS RALLY TO PREMIER'S AID

EBERT SAID TO HAVE SECURED UPPER HAND OF SPARTACANS.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Jan. 10.—The last news received from Germany, although fragmentary and sometimes contradictory, indicates that the Ebert Government has won a victory over the Spartacans, owing to the sudden impetus given the Government, caused by the support of the loyal elements, whose numbers increased with the prospects of the Government's success in sanguinary fighting of the last five days. The Spartacans are reported to have suffered very heavy losses.

President Asked To Settle Strike

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Washington, Jan. 10.—President Wilson was called on today by Government officials to aid in the settlement of the strife of New York harbor workers. Two reports on the situation were sent to the President in Paris by cable. One was from the White House and the other from Secretary of Labor Wilson, who explained the situation after a conference with W. J. Lauck, secretary of the War Labor Board. The opinion was expressed that the President would take some action during today.

GOVERNMENT FORCES NOW IN COMPLETE CONTROL IN BERLIN

All Processions on City Streets Have Been Forbidden—Spartacus Appear to Be Losing Hope—Have Held no Meetings Lately

(By Associated Press)

Berlin, Jan. 10.—The Government forces are in complete control of that section of the inner city between the Brandenburg Gate and Friederich-Strasse. It has issued an order prohibiting all processions. The Government has scored a decided victory in the capture of police headquarters which has been one of the Spartacan strongholds. The building was taken by the Fusilier Guards after a short fight. The Government forces took the building with few casualties. Eichhorn, the Spartacan police chief, escaped but many of his supporters were made prisoners.

In issuing its orders against processions, the Government gave a warning that its troops have orders to fire without waiting for the Spartacans to dig in and to shoot to kill. The Spartacans apparently are losing hope. They failed to summon a mass meeting of their supporters today and the streets are almost deserted.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Jan. 10.—At the Northland enquiry today, the purser, chief steward and other officers of the ship denied that conditions aboard the ship were below the standard, as [illegible] who have given evidence. If the stewards were selling food, they said they must have stolen it from the galleys and the officers knew nothing about it. The chief engineer explained that water was scarce on a few days of the trip because for fear of freezing he had to turn it off at the tanks. When the ship was loaded Fresh water was taken in for every man on board.

DONALD FRASER HAS STRUCK A RICH BONANZA IN WINDSOR

In Charge of Liquor Dispensary in that City —Receipts for Last Month Over $34,000

Donald Fraser, who formerly kept the old Showden House in this city, has struck a job that is infinitely more profitable in Windsor where he is in charge of the liquor dispensary, the only shop of the kind in the border city.

It recently came on tin the hearing of a case just recently what a rich [illegible] and how wealth rolls in upon him. A doctor was on trial charged with issuing liquor prescriptions. In the course of the examination of witnesses, it was brought out that the accused had issued 1,244 prescriptions for liquor in the month of December. The usual charge is $1 for each order issued. In one day the physician had handed out as many as 222 prescriptions for liquor.

As an indication of the business being done daily in Windsor's single liquor shop, which is operated by Mr. Fraser and where liquor is sold only on a doctor's order, it was shown that 1,095 liquor prescriptions were honored at this store in September, 3,259 in October, 6,287 in November and 8,512 in December, 1918.

Every prescription was for one quart and the price charged by Mr. Fraser for each was $4.00 so that in the month of December alone his total receipts were $34,000.

After a hearing lasting nearly all day Dr. G. N. Gardiner, the defendant, was found guilty and fined $200 [illegible] costs of $40.50. In passing sentence Magistrate Meirs sharply criticized the indiscriminate way in which Dr. Gardiner had "abused his privileges" and declared it his opinion that the doctor had opened an office here for the sole purpose practically of issuing prescriptions for liquor." No reputable physician would conduct business as you have done," said the court.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

FRIDAY, JANUARY 10, 1919

THE NEW MINISTER OF LABOR.

THE LABOR PROBLEM is one of the most acute that is before the public today. The question is, with employers and employes alike, how to maintain a parity between the rate of wages and the cost of living, both of which have been inflated by the war. If the first is reduced before the latter, there is certain to be serious trouble between the two classes.

Any man who has a solution to the unemployment problem is entitled to a hearing. Minister of Labor Robertson will be in the city next Thursday, the primary object of his visit being to address the Canadian Club at a luncheon in the Empress Hotel. The responsibility of the unemployment problem rests largely upon the Dominion Government, and Mr. Robertson is head of the department which is most directly concerned with it. Every manufacturer, every other employer of labor in the city, should hear what Mr. Robertson has to say.

The new Minister of Labor is anxious to meet the workingmen of the city, and it is likely that a public meeting will be arranged after the luncheon, a meeting at which all will have a chance to hear him free of charge. Organized Labor in Canada has finally achieved its ambition to have one of its own members at the head of the department which has to do with its interests. Mr. Robertson, who is a member of the Dominion Senate, has risen from the ranks of the toilers, and Labor men have confidence in their fellow unionist He understands their conditions and is likely to give their grievances a sympathetic hearing. He has himself asked for a meeting with Labor, and there is no reason on earth why this should not be brought about.

NO BOLSHEVISM FOR CANADA.

THERE SEEMS TO EXIST in some quarters a fear that the Bolshevism that is rampant in some of the countries of Europe will spread to Canada eventually. This anticipation of further trouble does not seem to be justified. The conditions that have tended to breed anarchy in Russia and Germany never existed here. The soldiers of the Allied countries, with the exception of Russia, and those who fought on the side of the Central Powers, lived in diametrically opposite situations. The one fought because they were led like sheep to the slaughter. Russian, German and Austrian soldiers were so many dumb driven cattle. They have been subject to restraint all their lives and were responsive to no influence save the force of the autocrats who held sway over them.

When that restraint was suddenly removed the reaction was inevitable. The masses of the new pest-ridden nations were like so many prisoners doomed to serve life sentences in a penitentiary the doors of which were suddenly thrown open, the shackles of the inmates removed, and those who had known nothing but bondage given their liberty without any agency to direct them in their new sphere. It was not to be wondered at that such people gave free rein to their passion and set out to secure all those real or imaginary advantages of which they had been deprived.

The soldiers of the Allies, on the other hand, fought for a principle, to guarantee to the menaced nations the blessings of civilization and democracy to which they were themselves accustomed. Their mission in life the past four years has been to restore peace in the world. They have achieved their object so far as actual hostilities are concerned. It is unthinkable that they would now be a party to anything that would tend to destroy the work that has cost them so dearly.

During the past four years a number of acts formerly regarded as harmless have been branded as criminal offences by the Government operating through the agency of order-in-Council. The people at large, recognising war-time exigencies, submitted to these measures without a murmur. But with the return of peace the time has come for revoking what is nothing more or less than arbitrary enactments, in giving effect to which the prerogatives of Parliament have been ignored. Persecution will never make either a continent or a people safe. The conditions in Central Europe stand out as a startling lesson to the entire civilized world.

TEMPER AND PERSECUTION.

SIR WILLIAM HEARST recently announced to a large and representative delegation that there would be no lessening of the restrictions in the Ontario Temperance Act. There are, however, features about it which he does not like, and he promised that these would be eliminated at the approaching session of the Legislature.

Having put his hand to the temperance plow, Premier Hearst does well to keep his eyes on the end of the furrow. The world loves a man who has the fortitude to stand to his guns notwithstanding the assaults of adverse critics. But Sir William's political fate is wound up in the measure which he passed three years ago. If the Act is defeated when submitted to a plebiscite vote next summer or at any other date in the future, that result would be interpreted as a rebuke to the Provincial Government, especially when it is recalled that prohibition was enforced in Ontario without taking a vote on the question, although that measure of self-protection was left open to the Administration by the petition, which was accepted as sufficient warrant by the Premier.

There is not the shadow of a doubt that the majority of the people of Ontario are in favor of prohibition. That fact has been amply demonstrated on former occasions when plebiscites were taken on the question. If prohibition was safe say five years ago, it is threefold so now that the women have got the franchise. If the Ontario Temperance Act is defeated when the voters get a chance to pass upon it, the decision cannot be truthfully interpreted as a blow at the principle of sumptuary legislation. Flaws in the measure now on the statute books and irregularities or indiscretions in its enforcement will be the real reasons for the unpopularity of the measure. No law was ever designed to be made a means for persecution.

It must be said that in the enforcement of the Ontario Act there has been displayed unusual official and judicial zeal. The license inspectors, the police of the various cities and the magistrates of the province have worked with marvellous unanimity in all cases involving violation. But the records of different magistrates' courts will show some amazing decisions that were reversed when carried to a higher tribunal. Unfortunately, however, many defendants who may be disposed to do so lack the means to appeal their cases.

The sale of liquor in Ontario has been a monopoly for years, involved as the question always was in politics. The least suspicion of anything of the kind should now be dispelled. There are three or four Government dispensaries in Ontario at present. If liquor is still required for medicinal purposes, there should be more facilities allowed for procuring it, facilities that have to do with location only and not with conditions of purchase. If the law allows a man in Peterborough to buy a quart of spirits or a certain quantity of ale on a doctor's prescription, why should it be necessary for that man to go to Toronto or Ottawa, or to pay express charges on a package before he can have that prescription filled? Some of the leading temperance workers in the city favored a dispensary here, but their request was turned down by the Government.

One year ago the Government reduced the number of members of the License Commission from five, as in the days of the open bar, to three. There seems no reason why the work at present could not be done by one executive head just as there is in any other department, instead of keeping three highly paid officials on the provincial pay roll. There are plenty of friends of the cause who hold, too, that the number of license inspectors should be still further reduced. The heavy end of the task of enforcing the law falls upon the police forces in the cities and towns, so that under prohibition the work of the inspectors has been considerably lessened.

The men who keep the dispensaries should be subject to further supervision, and not allowed to make a bonanza out of prohibition by charging exorbitant prices for their goods, for the sale of which they enjoy a practical monopoly.

OPINIONS OF OTHER EDITORS.

Inconsistent.

(Philadelphia Record.)

After all the talk about the conservation of raw and finished material the proposition to sink the German navy, simply to avoid squabbles over its distribution among the victors, does not seem consistent. Certainly in the equipment there must be much valuable stuff that can be salvaged, and the metal of the hulls alone deserves a better fate than to be sent to the bottom of the sea.

Their First Lesson.

(Buffalo News.)

The whole system of education in Germany must be revised. The Germans have lost the spiritual sense that was in them. That is the very basis of education. Nothing can be right with them until they find it only in humility. That is the first lesson they must be taught. It is the high duty of the leaders of the Allies sitting in Versailles to teach it to them.

GIVE PRESIDENT A CHANCE

(New York Commercial)

President Wilson may be attempting the impossible but the American people hope he will be able to induce all nations to adopt some plan to maintain peace throughout the world. He has courage to try, and nothing was ever accomplished without effort. Those members of both Houses of Congress who belittle his peace crusade do not represent the desires of the country. Some of them have displayed meanness of spirit that disgraces Congress.

If the President succeeds, he will remain one of the greatest figures in the history of the world. If he fails, he may be called quixotic, but none can impeach his motives. America will be none the worse for his attempt to establish a League of Nations to enforce peace. We shall have no part in an offensive and defensive alliance to protect part of Europe against the aggression of the rest.

Secret treaties stand in the President's way. Italy entered the war for a consideration and rejected a lower bid made by Austria-Hungary and Germany. France received the promise of a sphere of influence in Syria and other parts of Southwestern Asia. It is supposed that Constantinople was to have been Russia's chief spoil of war, but she forfeited that claim and the disposal of the city will be a difficult problem at the peace conference. America took no part in the war until forced to defend herself against Germany's ruthless submarine warfare, and has nothing to do with these and other secret bargains. England holds possession of so much Germand and Turkish territory outside of Europe that she will ask for nothing that her armies do not now occupy in distant fields, and will probably be content with much less than she might demand by right of present conquest.

In forming such a League of Nations as President Wilson advocates all nations will have to surrender something for the common good, just as a citizen of any civilised country consents to the curtailment of his liberty of action for the benefit of the community. America makes no territorial claims that call for abatement, but the other Great Powers must modify their claims or part with some of their possesions to secure the consent of other nations to the formation of a League of Nations that will guarantee in perpetuity the territorial integrity of the countries whose boundaries will be delimited when the map of the world is redrawn at the peace conference. The difficulties are enormous and the nature of some of them is only beginning to come to light.

If the horrors of this war have not roused all peoples to a determination to prevent their recurrence the future of mankind is dark indeed. At some time or other every continental European power has met crushing defeat. Russia's turn came in this war. The new German Empire has run its course in less than than half a century. England is the only European power that has never been defeated in a great war since the days of the Middle Ages. America's growth of the past century and her display of strength in this war put her in the forefront of the mighty. Japan is the latest addition to the list of Great Powers, and her future depends largely on the influence she exerts over China.

Wars have not ended war. Secret alliances have proved broken reeds. The balance of power, often tried, never kept its poise. The Roman peace that lasted for nearly three centuries depended on concentration of power in one hand. Everything else that can be suggested except a League of Nations has been tried and found wanting.

The idea is not new, for Popes of Rome tried to form such a League of Nations, with the Papal Court as the court of arbitration for all international disputes. They failed because the nations of Europe would not co-operate to enforce their decrees but that does not disprove the theory. It is feasible, but it calls for the co-operation of all nations. If all are willing, the system by which disputes between Canada and the United States for a hundred years have been arbitrated can be applied to the rest of the world. President Wilson's critics cannot escape that fact. The League of Nations may be impracticable today, but it is not an idle dream.

TODAY'S STORY

Sixty-five years ago, during a period of unemployment and distress in Leeds an eight-year-old body stood many hours twice weekly in a queue in York street, with tickets and a pail, waiting to be supplied with bread and soup to feed himself and three brothers. A few weeks ago in the Council Chamber of Leeds Town Hall, that boy, by the unanimous vote of the City Council, and with the cordial good will of a half-a-million fellow-citizens, became the Lord Mayor of his native city. This journey from the charity queue to the Lord Mayor's chair is the romance of a self-made man, of force of character, indomitable perserverance and native shrewdness triumphing over every difficulty and obstacle. The parents of Joseph Henry were Irish people of the working class belonging to County Dublin. They came to Leeds on tramp, and for a time lived on York street. There the future Lord Mayor was born.

EDITOR'S MAIL

REPLY TO MR. BURNHAM

Editor Review: Please permit me to correct the misstatements contained in the letter written by Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., which appeared in last evening's issue of your paper, respecting the dredging that was done by the Government above and below Hunter street bridge.

I would not take this trouble only for the fact that the interests of this city may seriously suffer, if I do not do so.

All the facts may be found in the files of the Department of Public Works at Ottawa.

There will be found Mr. J. G. Sing's report, showing why the river above and below the bridge should be dredged. It will show that the Quaker Oats Company propose to put on the Trent Canal a large fleet of boats and barges to carry grain from Midland to Peterborough. Those who know this company know that they carry out their arrangements to the letter and that they look with scorn on a breach of good faith. This dredging that was done was simply a part of Trent Canal work.

Mr. Sing's report will further show that he made an estimate of the cost of the work. His report was approved of by the Government. The work was done under Mr. Sing's own direction by day labor and completed within his estimate.

Mr. Burham will also find from the files in the department that the work Mr. Sing planned to do was fully completed and was never at any time stopped or interferred with by any one.

The Quaker Oats Company never at any time suggested that the Government dredge their tail race, nor did it do so. The Laurier Government never stopped the work but completed it. The work will be used when the canal is completed and a swing in the present bridge will be a necessity.

I shall not answer the insinuations contained in Mr. Burnham's letter, because they are as unfounded as his knowledge of the real facts connected with this dredging work is wanting.

I trust that this explanation will secure for the mayor and City Council Mr. Burnham's hearty co-operation and support to have the Government carry out the arrangement that it entered into in good faith to pay its fair share toward the cost of the construction of Hunter street bridge.

Yours, etc.,
R. R. HALL.

Woman's idea of worldly wisdom is to know the failings of her neighbors.

When all men are what they pretend to be the millennium problem will be easy.

Occasionally success is due to talent, but more often it is due to hang-dog persistency.

LITTLE BENNY'S NOTEBOOK

(By Lee Pape)

The other nite I had sutch a fearse tooth ake in one tooth it felt as it all the other teeth was catching it, waking up with it and not being able to go to sleep agen from it, and I went down stairs in my pidjammers and who was wawking up and down the 2nd story hall in his pidjammers but pop, holding his face with one hand and going, Owtch, O good nite, owtch.

LESSONS IN RIGHT LIVING

(By Dr. W. A. Brady.)

There is no use in decrying high French heels, because it is not to be denied that we wicked men do love to see them worn. I suppose if women adopted nose rings and wore bells on their hats we men would admire them just the same.

The stature of the perfect woman—that is, the average of American women (who are the most nearly perfect in the world)—is sixty-four inches. A woman less than five feet and four inches tall may have a legitimate excuse for wearing unusually high heels, therefore, for it is certainly every woman's duty to look as nearly perfect as she can. But when a woman over sixty-four inches tall puts on high heels she looks like the deuce, no matter how much taste she may have in other respects.

A woman with an ideal form has a foot nine and one-quarter inches long. If the foot is longer than that she may camouflage the fact by wearing French heels, but the very fact that she wears French heels calls attention to her consciousness of her big feet.

Excessively high heels, especially if they are also too narrow, throw the whole body out of poise and make anything like real gracefulness quite impossible. The foot itself suffers from the eversion or toeing out which very high heels make necessary, and from a tendency toward pronation (the early stage of flatfoot or falling arch); the heel cord (tendo Archillis) becomes permanently shortened, so that natural flexion of the foot in time becomes impossible and the woman gradually develops a kind of springhalt.

The posture of the body as a whole is materially unbalanced by high heels, and, since normal posture is the most restful for the muscles of the hips, spine and back, these muscles suffer more or less from fatigue in the faulty posture entailed by high heels and backache is a common result.

The perfect woman has a heel two inches broad. Aboot heel appreciably narrower than that, of course, does not offer reasonably stable support to the foot and the body. A boot heel over one and one-half inches high is sure to strain the supporting muscles of the body. A man's boot heel should not be more than three-quarters of an inch high; a woman's should not be over one and one-half inches high; either would be more comfortable and healthier in the long run without any heels at all.

How Lead Poisons.

"I make toy soldiers, melting five pounds of lead at a time in a melting pot on a gas stove and pouring into small molds. Is there likelihood of any injury to my health in such work? The stove has a hood connected by a pipe with the chimney flue, but there is a down draft about as often as an up draft. P. S. S."

When lead poisoning occurs, in any occupation, it is through inhalation of fumes or dust, and not by absorption through the skin. It may occur by being carried on the skin of the unwashed hands to the mouth in eating, smoking, etc. If the ventilation were corrected there would be practically no risk connected with the work. When lead is heated above a certain point, in the melted state, it gives off poisonous fumes. Open the windows while the lead is melting.

Limit Bathing to the Outside.

"Will you please give a recipe for an eye wash to be used night and morning with an eyecup? H. K. D."

I do not advise such practice. It is sufficient, I think, to bathe the outside of the body occasionally, and leave the internal housecleaning to nature.

Coal Gas.

"Just enough coal gas escapes into the living rooms of a flat two or three times a day to cause an irritation of the throat and heaviness of the chest. Would it have any injurious effects on the health

MRS. R. O. J."

Yes. Anaemia and general debility are likely to result if the gasing continues.

Electric Heating.

One of the most significant industrial growths of recent years has been the progress in the development and use of electricity for producing high-grade steels, and for special operations, such as heat treating, annealing, japanning, baking and enameling. This growth has been due primarily to the development of the means of generating heat by electricity and to the ability to control and apply this heat properly and satisfactorily. In the early days of the electric heating industry in this country applications were practically confined to the production of high-grade steel castings. But as more experience was gained and further experiments were conducted by interested manufacturers, new fields opened for development, until now, in many localities, electric heat is largely used for important manufacturing purposes. — From Industrial Management.

TEN PER CENT INCREASE IS VOTED ALL TEACHERS

Board of Education Rescinds Its Former Action and Raises the Salaries—Increase to Be Paid in Two Installments.

At the meeting of the Board of Education last night Mr. G. N. Gordon introduced the question of a raise of salaries for the teachers. He suggested the advisability of having the increase assume the form of a ten per cent bonus so as not to interfere with the salary schedule as at present constituted.

Mr. E. G. Patterson questioned the fairness of this method upon the grounds that it alolwed the high salaried man the advantage over the girl who was receiving $750 or $800 a year. He suggested a graduated scale of increases which would deal more beneficially with the teachers who were not highly paid and consequently felt the effects of the inflated war prices more keenly.

Mr. McKone stated that the proposed increase was not proportionate with the higher cost of living which has existed for the past two or three years. This could be estimated at 50 per cent and all the proposed plan covered was ten per cent.

Dr. Neal reminded Mr. McKone that few professional or salaried men had their incomes augmented to an extent proportionate with the increased cost of living. It was not to be expected.

Mr. G. O. Cameron felt that the ten per cent bonus would operate fairly. The girl who was getting $750 or $800 a year was as fortunate as the man who was paid $2000 per annum and had a family to support.

Mr. Fowler favored the proposed increase as did Mr. Greene who felt that the teachers were not being paid in acordance with the responsibility and importance of their positions.

Mr. Worth with Mr. Greene introduced a motion which was carried providing that all employes of the School Board with the exception of the janitors who received a separate raise in pay some time ago be granted a ten per cent bonus on their present salaries the same to be paid in two instalments. This was carried.

TRUSTEE ROLAND DENNE IS CHAIRMAN OF SCHOOL BOARD

Unanimously Elected at Last Night's Meeting --Committees Appointed for 1919--Trustee Cameron Chairman of Appointments.

At the inaugural meeting of the Board of Education for the year 1919, held last night, Mr. J. A. McKone, the only new member took his seat and Mr. Roland Denne was elected chairman for the term just commencing.

In a short address he thanked his fellow trustees for the honor which they had conferred upon him and referred to the fact that his late father had been a member of the Board of Education for 22 years.

Committees for 1919

Messrs. Gordon, Fowler, Greene, Patterson and Cameron were appointed a committee to strike the standing committees. Their report when submitted was adopted as prepared and recommended that the committees be composed of the following gentlemen, the first named in each to be chairman except in the case of the two advisory committees which elect their presiding officers when they meet.

Finance—Patterson, McGrath, Gordon, Worth.

Property—Fowler, McKone, Greene, Cameron.

Supervision—Dr. Neal, Fowler, Patterson, Greene.

Advisory Industrial Committee.—(composed of six members of the Board and six outsiders)—(members of the Board)—Denne, McGrath, Fowler, Dr. Neal, Patterson, Worth. (Outsiders)—V. Eastwood, G. R. Munro, William Sangster, T. H. G. Denne, John Corkery, W. R. Breyfogle.

Advisory Commercial Committee—McKone, Cameron, Greene, McGrath, with the following citizens: W. R. Morris, W. H. Pretty, A. W. Cressman and E. F. Mason.

Hugo's Prophecy.

When in 1871 France lay bleeding on the ground, and her provinces Alsace and Lorraine, were torn from her side, the great poet, Victor Hugo, arose in the National Assembly on March 1, 1871, and said:

"Oh, the hour will strike—we feel it come—this marvelous act of restitution. You will see France arise again, you will see her take back Lorraine, take back Alsace. And then, will that be all? No, she will take back Treves, Mayence, Cologne, Coblentz and the whole left bank of the Rhine. And you will hear France shout, 'Now is my turn.' Here I am, Germany! Am I your enemy? No, I am your sister. I have taken back from you all, and I am giving back to you all, under one condition: that is, that we henceforth form but one people, but one family, but one republic. I am going to demolish my fortresses, you are going to demolish your fortresses. The Rhine for all! Let us be the same republic, let us be the United States of Europe, let us be the Constitutional Federation, let us be European liberty, let us be universal peace! And now let us shake hands, for we have rendered a service to each other—you have delivered me from my Emperor and I have delivered you from yours!'"

Discovered.

He is the interpreter attached to a roaming brigade of Field Artillery, a little French soldier named Boucheye.

Their regard for him, however, grew mightily the night of the brigade's entry into the fight up Montfoucon way. They had noticed that he had a genius for knowing which kitchen in the outfit would serve the best dinner on any given night and for dropping in there casually at mess time.

They suspected him of an instinct for nourishment; but how great his talents were in that respect they never discovered until this particular night, when eight of the officers appealed to him to use his French to get them a decent meal. At the word, he collected seven francs from each man, vanished into the countryside, came back with a basket full of supplies, and with his own hands prepared such a luscious and wonderful six-course dinner as they had never encountered in all their days.

Fish, with a celestial sauce, eggs transformed past recognition, a salad for the gods—it was a feast unbelievable. There were inquiries, and, when cornered, M. Bouchette admitted that, prior to the war, he had been head chef for the late Alfred Vanderbilt. Now he is trying desperately hard to retain his rank and status as an interpreter.

Turkey Not Reformable.

"In Constantinople," says Henry Morgenthau in the World's Work, "I became acquainted with an American doctor who had traveled extensively in the East and who had the most intimate knowledge of conditions in the Ottoman Empire. He told me that Herr von Gwinner, the manager of the Deutsche Bank, whom he had visited in Berlin, had asked him to spend an entire evening discussing Turkish affairs. When my friend went to keep his appointment, he began this way:

"'You have set aside this whole evening to discuss the Ottoman Empire. We do not need all that time. I can tell you the whole story in just four words: Turkey is not reformable!'

"'You have summed up the whole situation perfectly,' replied Von Gwinner.

"That is the fundamental fact which we must constantly keep in mind while discussing this problem."

GIRLS! ACT NOW! HAIR COMING OUT MEANS DANDRUFF

"DANDERINE" WILL SAVE YOUR HAIR AND DOUBLE ITS BEAUTY AT ONCE.

TRY THIS! YOUR HAIR GETS SOFT, WAVY, ABUNDANT AND GLOSSY AT ONCE.

Save your hair! Beautify it! It is only a matter of using a little Danderine occasionally to have a head of heavy, beautiful hair; soft, lustrous, wavy and free from dandruff. It is easy and inexpensive to have pretty, charming hair and lots of it. Just spend a few cents for a small bottle of Knowlton's Danderine now—all drug stores recommend it—apply a little as directed and within ten minutes there will be an appearance of abundance; freshness, fluffiness and an incomparable gloss and lustre, and try as you will, you can not find a trace of dandruff or falling hair; but your real surprise will be after about two weeks' use, when you will see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—sprouting out all over your scalp—Danderine is, we believe, the only sure hair grower, destroyer of dandruff and cure for itchy scalp, and it never fails to stop falling hair at once.

If you want to prove how pretty and soft your hair really is, moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair—taking one small strand at a time. Your hair will be soft, glossy and beautiful in just a few moments—a delightful surprise awaits everyone who tries this.

SIR HUGH JOHN PRAISES ARMY

WINNIPEG MAGISTRATE SAYS SALVATIONISTS ARE A HELPFUL AGENCY.

Sir Hugh John Macdonald, Police Magistrate of Winnipeg, who is a warm friend of the Salvation Army relates how a young woman was reinstated in decent society by that helpful agency.

"The face of a young woman rises before me," he said to an interviewer. "I can see her standing before me, charged with immorality and frequenting houses of ill-fame. To see her on the street or making purchases at a store it would be impossible to believe that one so innocent and fresh and young looking lived the life she did. Upon enquiry, I learned that her parents were one, in fact, depraved. Brought up in such company and in such an environment there seemed no alternative but for the child to go down, down to the lowest depth. I decided to give the young woman a good fatherly talk and to release her on suspended sentence, and when doing so, suggested that she see the Matron of the Salvation Army Industrial Home for Women, who would be pleased to counsel and help her in every way possible.

"Eventually, without any pressure from the Matron or myself, the young woman decided to spend a term in the Home. In one of the religious meetings which are regularly held with the inmates by the staff, she was converted, and I will never forget her calling to see me at my office and telling me of her new experience. This young woman is now happily married. Both the Matron and myself have kept in touch with her.

"I was struck on another occasion by the absolute hopeless look of a man in the dock charged with vagrancy. I found he was not what one would call a bad man, but one who had lost his self-respect, thrown up the sponge, so to speak, and let go his grip on life. I became convinced if this man could only be persuaded to take a different view of life and its problems, he could be saved; yes, saved from himself. I asked the Salvation Army Officer whether he would see if anything could be done with the man.

"The Officer gladly consented to see what could be done, took him home, arranged for him to have a good bath, fitted him out with clothes, secured him work, watched over him, sympathized with, sometimes wisely rebuked him, and ultimately was rewarded in seeing his charge take fresh courage and today he is making good.

"These are just two instances I have known of, so greater agency than the Salvation Army. This is my candid opinion, and I speak as one who comes in personal touch with its work every day."

Bachelors Unite To Resist The Tax

MONTREAL UNMARRIED VERY INDIGNANT OVER CIVIC IMPOSITION.

Montreal, Jan. 10.—More than three hundred bachelors, who are determined to resist payment of the ten dollars tax levied by Montreal, and are pledged to support one of their number against whom action has been entered by the city in the courts as a test case, assembled at the Edinburgh Cafe to effect an organization to be known as the Bachelors Defence Committee.

Many elderly men were among the bachelors present. In nearly all cases, it was apparent, they were householders and tax-payers, with the obligation of supporting their relatives, and this, one man stated, was the principal reason why most normally constituted men remained bachelors after twenty-five years of age.

Some criticism was heard of the fact that bachelor clergy were exempted from paying the tax, but the Chairman ruled that the meeting was called to protest against the tax in its entirety as a matter of principle and that objections to it in part only, for its administration, were out of order.

Further meetings will be held shortly.

SALUTE FOR EX-PRESIDENT

Americans in Germany Pay Tribute to His Memory.

American Headquarters in Germany, Jan. 10.—A salute of twenty-one guns was fired by the artillery units of eighteen American divisions, comprising the army of occupations, as a tribute to Colonel Roosevelt. All flags were lowered at 3 p.m. A special military ceremony was held at corps headquarters.

TINY SHOPS IN PARIS.

Quaint Stores Do Business on the Quays.

The Paris quays extend for miles and for many of those miles on both sides of the river the ingenious coater has set up his shop. A desk-like box, higher behind than in front and with a lid which can at night be shut down and locked, is fastened by iron clamps to the top of the stone parapet and filled with second-hand books, prints, music, medals, even with "objects d'art" such as small dainetips or glass vases, sometimes even with bits of old brasswork, bells and other miscellaneous produce. But books predominate, second-hand books, sometimes quite swagger, well-bound editions running into the francs, but more usually paper-covered mixed heaps of books thrown together in their boxes, according to price. All here twopence, or threepence, or sixpence, as the case may be, are torn, dirty, covetous popular novels will lie side by side with well-bound, perfectly clean, even uncut scientific or literary works that, because they are foreign, or for some other reason, have had no sale.

To wander along the quays was an absorbing occupation, not only for the sake of the joy of the find when it came, but to me for the queer little bits of reading that I got by the way. Scenes from forgotten novels, three verses of a poem, quaint little bits from books that only figure in histories of literature, odd facts from all the sciences, excerpts from school-class books, and amid the debris of text-books, the sudden color of a page from the "Feliebres," the modern writers of the modern "Rague d'or," redolent with the sunshine and the scents of the "midi," which I would have to spell out slowly as a strange new tongue.

And all the while the curve of the river, between the long gray quays, the dark dome of the Institute, the towers of Notre Dame in their human strength, the sharpened point of the Cite beyond its green trees where the breakwater runs like a boom out into the river, the round extinguisher tower of the Conciergerie, or perhaps the wonderful curving end of the island, with, as the French say, the "ship" of the church thrust out a very prow upon the water, the needle steeple of the Sainte Chapelle, the great decorated mass of the Louvre, the "grand oeuvre" in stone, the trees of the Tuileries; all the sights of Paris making pictures as I read.

Always there were people round the boxes, for they seemed to draw like a magnet certain elements from the passing crowd. No matter whether the crowd was the comparatively well-dressed one of the Quai Malaquais, or the commercial joutle of the Megisserie, or the shabby half-furtive passerby of the quays above the island, the open boxes on the parapets with their tumbled heaps of discolored books drew them always to itself. And it drew us.

How many hours we have spent wandering happily down the quays intent on two or over and over the discarded books of others' libraries, in search of that we wanted and could at all afford for our own, and all the time unconsciously the silhouettes of riverside Paris were sinking deep, the qualities of its wide boulevard quays, the sound of its traffic on the bridges. The quays drew us from the most unlikely quarters, so drew us that we learned to avoid them of set purpose going out for fear we should never get away from them. So drew us that coming back, however tired or hungry or late, we would agree to stop "just a minute" and awake presently to find it was an hour.—From "Paris Through an Attic," by A. Herbage Edwards.

Germany has surrendered unconditionally to the allied armies—but the Kaiser has six uninjured sons.

German military experts are at an embarrassing stage, floundering to explain why certain things on the western front happened—but the Kaiser has six uninjured sons.

A member of the German Reichstag said a few months ago that Germany had lost 3,000,000 men in killed, wounded and prisoners up to that time—but the Kaiser has six uninjured sons.

The German Government has drained the German people of their gold, even their jewels and heirlooms—but the Kaiser has six uninjured sons.

Every German city will be marked for decades with pitiable cripples, sacrificed to maintain imperial dynasty—but the Kaiser may still have six uninjured sons.

Color Blind.

Bees have no sight for red; in other words, to bees red is as black. A noted botanist determined exactly all the various shades of color bees can see by making experiments. In a few hours he would learn that the most desired sweets in blue or yellow dishes, but in gray dishes; and by varying the details it was easily possible to discover the color senses of the bees. They were found to confuse red and black so uniformly that it was evident that red seemed black to the bees.

THE NEW PALESTINE.

The above map shows the boundaries of Palestine that will be urged at the Peace Congress. The Zionists will ask not for the greater Palestine of Solomon, but simply for the tract of country between the ancient boundaries, and to Beersheba, or, in modern times, from the river Litteni to El-Arish. Westward they say the boundary should be the sea. Eastward, it may be that the new Arabian kingdom will preclude extension beyond the river Jordon, which may thus be the eastern boundary. Otherwise they feel that the region around Hauran and the desert tract southeastward in the direction of the Gulf of Akaba should be included. At present it is barren and practically uninhabited, but it could be

A NERVOUS BREAKDOWN

Miss Kelly Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Her Health.

Newark, N. J.—"For about three years I suffered from nervous breakdown and got so weak I could hardly stand, and had headaches every day. I tried everything I could think of and was under a physician's care for two years. A girl friend had used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and told me about it. From the first day I took it I began to feel better and now I am well and able to do most any kind of work. I have been recommending the Compound ever since and give you my permission to publish this letter."—Miss FLO KELLY, 476 So. 14th St., Newark, N. J.

The reason this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, was so successful in Miss Kelly's case was because it went to the root of her trouble, restored her to a normal healthy condition and as a result her nervousness disappeared.

To Save Horse Feed.

A shield has been designed for horses' feed bags which prevents all spilling of grain while an animal is eating a loss which sometimes amounts to 25 per cent. The device consists of a funnel-shaped apron of cloth, with a sufficiently large opening at the bottom, which fits inside the bag, being attached to the upper edge and extending about half way down into the container. The lower end is gathered by means of a coiled spring and fits snugly about the horse's nose so that no matter how much the animal tosses its head, no grain is lost.—Popular Mechanics.

FEEDING LONDON.

How World's Greatest City Was Rationed In Wartime.

Lord Rhondda's system of rationing was a triumph of organizing ability. The city of London was divided into districts, each with a food office. At the Westminster Branch, for example, 550,000 forms were on 200,000 people. In one of the poorer districts 300,000 people were cared for at another food office. Each individual was registered and received a "meat card" and a "butter and margarine card." The meat card contained 40 small squares, 4 a week for 10 weeks, and each square or coupon entitled the person to purchase at the butcher's shop where he went to register an amount of meat not exceeding five ounces. Meat was defined as "butchers' meat (including pork), offal and suet, bacon and ham, sausages, poultry and game, hares, rabbits, venison and horseflesh, and cooked, canned, preserved and miscellaneous meats of all kinds, meat in all cases to include bones."

The butcher could obtain meat from the Smithfield market in such quantities as to supply the clientele from which he collected meat coupons. The butcher was directed to divide what supplies he had as fairly as possible among his registered customers, and he was not bound to furnish the full ration to first comers unless he knew that he had enough to give full rations to all.

The enforcement of this scheme produced contentment throughout Great Britain, where it came generally into force on March 25, four weeks later than its introduction into London and the Home Counties. There was little or no fraudulent evasion of the law. In the first place, the Englishman is a law-abiding person, and, having once decided upon a law, it immediately becomes a British institution, to be defended at all costs. In the second place, each meat card bore the statement: "Penalties for misuse, 100 pounds or six months' imprisonment, or both." This was the customary penalty for any violation of the Defence of the Realm Act.—Scribner.

A Practical Forestry Policy.

Mr. Thomas Tod, of Russell, Man., in an article in the Canadian Forestry Journal, suggests a novel forestry scheme for the prairies. Mr. Tod's suggestion is that the requirements to obtain the patent for a homestead be changed from the 15 acres cultivation or other present improvements required, to the thorough cultivation and sowing with tree seeds a strip 100 feet wide on two sides of the settler's holding. The amount of land required for this strip would, Mr. Tod says, be a fraction over 12 acres on two sides of a section. Any quick-growing variety of the seed would do. Poplar, maples, willows, some of the conifers and hardwoods might be tried, according to locality.

"What are likely to be the effects of such a scheme if carried out on a large scale?" the writer goes on. "It would certainly, in the long run, improve the climate and increase the rainfall and have a tendency to conserve the moisture. It would afford shelter to the individual settler and his stock. It would in time modify, if not abolish blizzards. It would ultimately help the settler as to timber, fencing material and firewood. It would make traveling along the sheltered roads a pleasure, instead of the terrible ordeal it at present must be on these bleak, treeless plains, and I believe might ultimately eradicate summer frosts. My nearly thirty years' experience in this country forces the conclusion upon me that the places where grain is least affected by frost are either on a southern slope or have timber on the north or east of them."

The Question.

At a dinner in Edinburgh, Baron Kickuchi, principal in Tokio University, was a guest. An Englishman present told the story of a Scotsman who went to his dentist with an aching tooth and was asked if he would have gas. He replied that he would, but he should like to count his money first. Everybody laughed but the baron. A Scotsman attempted to explain the joke as the alleged foible of his race; the baron remained impassive. Others tried, but the baron said: "I do not understand." Finally he stopped the explanations. "Gentlemen," he said, "you do not understand what I do not understand." His listeners gave rapt attention. "What I do not understand," he went on, "is not why the Scotsman said what he did, but how any Scotsman should not know, at any time, without having to count it, how much money he had in his pockets."

The Coldstream Guards.

The Coldstream Guards is a regiment of footguards in the British army, forming part of the royal household brigade. It is one of the oldest regiments of the British service, dating from 1659. In that year Gen. Monk, who, after the death of Cromwell, took sides with the Parliament and the army, organised the regiment at Coldstream, a border town of Berwickshire, Scotland, whence the name of the regiment, and marched with it into England. It has seen service in every British campaign of any magnitude, and has emblazoned on its regimental colors the names of many of the most brilliant victories of British arms.

JAPAN'S PROBLEM.

Domestic Difficulties Face Our Oriental Ally.

Prices of the various grades of rice continue extortionately high, according to the latest advices from Japan. The best grade has risen to 58.80 yen ($29.40) per koku of 4.96 English bushels. The price of third-class rice has been as high as $20.25, other grades in proportion. An estimate of the rice crop of this year is officially announced by the Japanese Government at 288,610,000 English bushels. This is an increase of 21,609,000 bushels over the previous year—an indication that the farmers have made an effort to increase the yield. "This is only an estimate," says the Osaka Mainichi, and the public should be warned against over-hasty optimism, as many things may happen to diminish the actual harvest before all the crop is gathered." The editor also urges the Government not to relax its efforts to find a correct and permanent solution of the rice problem, as the farmers, who have tasted the flavor of inordinate prices, may hold back their stock to embarrass and fleece the consuming public.

The vernacular press of Japan is filled with suggestions to the Government on rice regulation. The Osaka Mainichi favors government control of the staple and insists that such a course is entirely possible under the present Ministry, but would not be under a bureaucratic administration. The editor sees in this fact opportunity to prove the superiority of a party cabinet. The Osaka Asahi criticises the ministry's negative policy regarding the rice problem and blames the Minister of Agriculture and Commerce, Mr. Yamamoto. It feels sure his estimates of the new crop are exaggerated, and sees no prospect of a decline in prices.

Nearly all the Japanese journals of Tokio, Yokohama and Osaka call for abolition of the import duty on foreign rice and for repeal of an ordinance naming certain individuals and companies as exclusive importers of the foreign product. The Tokio Nichinichi insists that all measures yet tried by the Government to regulate and reduce the price of the national staple have failed, but is more hopeful than other journals regarding the adequacy of the new crop. The Tokio Jiji claims that public opinion is unanimously in favor of the removal of the duty on problem is imperative. Its editor lays much of the blame upon an inflated currency. He believes in a more elastic interpretation of the Shipping Control Ordnance. He likewise advocates welcoming immigrants.

While on this subject it may be mentioned that the Tokio Nichi-nichi, one of the most influential daily newspapers in Japan, despairs of a return to anti-bellum usages or prices. While present cost of living may be modified, the people of the country have become inclined to live better than ever before, and they will find a return to former modes of life difficult, if not impossible. In short, the editor of the Nichi-nichi believes that more than half of what is described as "distress among the middle class" is due to living beyond means and spending money for maintaining appearances. The editor earnestly appeals to members of this class, constituting the bulk of the Japanese nation, to cultivate the virtues of thrift and modest living.

To Pool War Debts.

The French Government is considering a bill proposed by Deputy Jacques Steen, establishing among the Allies an international financial union. The purpose of this union would be to distribute the expense of the war between the nations on the basis of population and power to be.

The proposition is supported by 100 delegates. It is understood that a similar plan is under consideration by the British Government, but no definite steps have as yet been taken in London.

It is estimated that the expenses of the Allies totaled 424,000,000,000 francs, which the Central Powers' expenses aggregated 370,000,000,000 francs.

Annual budgets at 5 per cent., with one-half of 1 per cent. premium for amortization, would total more than 42,000,000,000 francs. To avoid international bankruptcy it is declared that such an association is necessary to float an international loan estimated at 518,000,000,000 francs, to be distributed on a basis of population and production. Each state would guarantee its proportion from customs and other revenues.

All exchange questions, freight rates and prices of raw material would be handled through the centralized agency of the association. Provision is made for the admission of neutral states.

Even the Central Powers, upon terms prescribed by the Allies, may join, thus re-establishing international credit, which is held to be an essential condition to the economic development of the world.

M. Steen, the author of the bill, hopes that the peace conference will adopt the plan, at least in principle, leaving a special commission to arrange the details.

Food In Switzerland.

The food rations in Zurich per person per month for the month of August have just been published as follows: Sugar, 1.10 lbs.; alimentary pastes, 0.40 lb.; rice, 0.88 lb.; fats and oils, 0.77 lb.; butter, 0.33 lb.; cheese, 0.55 lb.; flour, 0.77 lb. The bread ration is fixed at half a pound per day, with 0.22 pound additional for laborers.

As to milk, children under 15 and adults over sixty are allowed 1.05 quarts per day; all others, one-half that. While the milk ration remains the same condensed and evaporated milk is also now rationed.

Close "Straight" Arm.

A Canadian officer, wounded early in the war, came to St. Katharine's Lodge, one of the American Red Cross orthopedic hospitals in London, to have his left arm made over. The elbow had been shattered. The officer was given a choice of having a weak, movable elbow, or a strong stiff one. Without hesitation, the Canadian chose the stiff elbow, and astonished the surgeons by asking that the arm be made perfectly straight so he could use a hunting rifle and a billiard cue.

Another Canadian officer insisted on having his smashed leg so rebuilt that he could continue to ride a horse. It required months of orthopedic treatment, but when the patient finally left the hospital to return to his ranch in Western Canada he was ready for the saddle.

These cases illustrate not only the special work of an orthopedic hospital, but how closely the surgeons consult the wishes of their patients.

Canadian Horses At Mt. Clemens

Mount Clemens, Jan. 9. With the daily arrival of horses at Clinton Vitw park here for the winter race meeting, opening on January 13, many fast miles and quarters are being reeled off by entrants in preparation for the coming contests.

Nat Ray has worked his new green pacer, Freddie Grattan a mile in 2.15 1-4, with the last half in 1.06 and the last quarter in .32 1 4, and it ill take some pacer to beat the speedy Canadian. But there are many in his class to dispute his right to first money and a great race is looked forward to when he strikes Vic Fleming, with Lule Grattan, who paced a fourth heat here at the fall meeting in 2.10 1-2.

In the same event B. Shiveley has Linde C., who has been a mile in 2.15 1-2, and there has been considerable discussion as to the relative merit of these pacers.

Vic Fleming arrived yesterday with Lule Grattan and the veteran ice pacer, Mussell Shell, 2.06 1-4, who meets the fast Roy Grattan, 2.07 to renew their battle of last winter. Billy Sunday, the property of Ben. Porter, of Burlington, Ont., is also a member of the Fleming stable, and is expected to do his share towards the spring training bills.

Robert Trench's stable from Tecswater, Ont., arrived on Saturday, in charge on Johnny Mullen, headed by Roy Grattan, 2.07, a consistent winner on eastern tracks this season. Chipstew Belle, 2.15, Phyllis Admiral, a pacer now converted to the trot, and the Canadian ice champion Paddy, R., 2.11 1-4 make up the balance of a strong stable.

Many reservations have been made from Montreal, Ottawa and Kingston, as well as Syracuse and Buffalo, for stabling accommodation.

THERE'S A FRIEND OF MINE DOWN STAIRS TELL'EM TO COME UP.
A FRIEND OF YOURS!
JAMES - WHAT DOES THIS MEAN.
YOUR HUSBAND SAID HE WAS HIS FRIEND.

LATE COL. ROOSEVELT WAS A FIRM FRIEND OF ATHLETICS

Himself an Accomplished Athlete He Had Friends in all Lines of Sport—His Relaxation From Cares of Office.

Much can and undoubtedly will be written of Theodore Roosevelt as a lover of clean sport, a participant in most of the more strenuous forms of competition and exercise, and as a patron of all vigorous, exacting, fruitful sports. His name has always been associated with athletics, and he often fell into the vernacular of strenuous sports when applying his forceful speech to great public questions of the moment. His "hit the line hard" as a motto in life, is as good advice as could be given a young man starting out on a career.

One of those who knew him best was George B Underwood, for years a writer on amateur and college sports on the New York Sun. Underwood has frequently been in Roosevelt's party at big athletic events, knew Teddy's predilection and fondness for all kinds of endeavor and strenuous competition that brought out the gameness and stamina of men, and is best able to write of him. Therefore the following from the pen of a man who knew him, is of interest to all who admired Roosevelt.

Knew the Champions

No president, no man high in public life, ever had as great love for manly sports as Theodore Roosevelt Few man ever had so many acquaintances in sport, amateur and professional, as the late former president. He knew intimately and openly expressed his friendship for John L. McGovern and Prof. Mike Donovan, among the boxers; Billy Mlideon, Ernest Roeber and Bill Brown among the wrestlers.

The American Athletes who, upon Roosevelt's invitation, visited him at Oyster Bay in 1908 were surprised at his knowledge of athletics and his familiarity with their doings.

The veteran trainer, Mike Murphy, was the first in line when the introductions were being made. "No need of introducing Murphy," broke in Mr. Roosevelt on the late James E. Sullivan, who was introducing the athletes. "Mike and I are old friends."

"Ah, Mr. Shepherd, glad to meet you," ex-President Roosevelt exclaimed to the Olympic champion "That was a bully race you ran in the 800-meter event.

"Well, if here isn't Martin Sheridan, the greatest athlete of them all. Martin, you and I must have a little talk as soon as I meet the rest of the boys and we get a chance to get together.

Proud of Johnny Hayes

"And Little Johnny Hayes—the little man with the big, stout heart! Johnny, you showed the British something about Yankee grit and gameness, I reckon. Now tell me, marathon harder on you than the last mile? Yes, I thought so. Once we get past the middle part of any difficult undertaking the worst is over. And how much weight did you lose? Sixteen pounds! My word, I guess I'll have to go out and do a marthon if it will take weight off that way."

Through athletics Theodore Roosevelt developed from a puny, sickly child into a strong, robust man. Realising the benefits accruing from indulgence in athletics he continued to exercise regularly as long as he was able to. Just before his last sickness Col. Roosevelt spent a fortnight at a physical culture farm at Stamford.

When he became president Col. Roosevelt gave a mild shock to the advocates of Jeffersonian simplicity and the worshippers of historic association by converting the cabinet room of the White House into what he playfully declared the "Administration's Department of Physical Culture."

The well known cabinet table, bookcases, maps, globes, clocks, chairs, rugs, bronze and marble busts gave way to wrestling mats, shields, boxing gloves, foils, single sticks wire masks and punching bags.

There Col. Roosevelt used to box with the late Prof. Mike Donovan wrestle with Prof. J. J. O'Brien of Boston and joust with single sticks with Col. Leonard Wood. It was there, too, that President Roosevelt took jui-jitsu lessons from Hitachyyamit, the famous master of the ancient art of the Samurai. On the tennis court outside the president daily would engage in matches with Ambassador Jusserand of France generally as his partner. Across the Potomac was an open hilly section in which Col. Roosevelt and Senator Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts occasionally took cross-country runs.

President Roosevelt always was a familiar figure at Harvard-Yale football games and at the boat races in New London. He especially was fond of football and watched the sport closely. Just how closely can be seen by the following incident:

On December 4, 1905, the committee to notify President Roosevelt that the house was organized and ready for business, Representative McCleary of Minnesota, Littauer of New York and Williams of Mississippi, called Secretary Loeb to ask him when the president could see them. It was then approaching 3 o'clock.

Follower of Football

"The president cannot see you between 3 and 6 o'clock," Loeb telephoned after a consultation with Col. Roosevelt.

"Why not?" asked the committee.

"He is busy," said Loeb, and hung up the telephone.

The president was busy talking football with Walter Camp and Jass Owsley of Yale, Bill Reid and Dr. T. Hillebrand and John B. Fine of Princeton. The previous season had resulted in many more accidents than usual and the president was of the opinion that for the good of the game that rules should be revised. It was for that purpose he had called Mr. Camp and associates to Washington.

SPORT NOTES

Vernon Forbes has signed to play for the Goodyear team in the Beaches League senior series. Stinson of St. Patricks is also with the Goodyear sextette, and they should make a good showing in the race for the title.

Edmonton Bulletin:—Manitoba and Saskatchewan Amateur Hockey Associations are out to promote junior hockey. But Alberta has apparently forgotten that a player must first be in the junior class before he can be a senior.

Springfield Republican:—Jacques, former Springfield high school boy, is rover on the hockey team representing the United States ship Nantucket The players are all former school boy athletes and all of them are under twenty years of age.

According to Harry Mummery, the big defence man of the Arenas, the Western teams are not as strong as in former years. Mummery was a spectator at the game in which Brandon defeated Winnipeg Argonauts 5 to 4, and he expressed the opinion that neither sextettt possessed the strength of the majority of the O.H.A. senior teams.

Tom Powell, well known as a pitcher with the Brantford O.B.A.A. team, is dead as a result of an attack of influenza.

The touring Waterloo county curlers were defeated at St. Thomas and London. They will play in Detroit tonight and in Windsor tomorrow.

Manager Gleason of the Chicago Americans will recall players who jumped to the shipyards and steel leagues. President Comiskey of the club stated that these men would never play for the White Sox again

Arenas of Toronto were defeated by 2 at Ottawa last night in the N.H.L., the Ottawa team thereby getting on even terms with the Canadiens. Mummery reported to the Toronto team and played brilliantly.

In announcing that the Royal Bank will open branches in France South America Mr. Edson L. Pease pointed out that foreign branches of Canadian banks are essential for commercial self-preservation.

SENATORS WIN FROM ARENAS

OTTAWA TEAM TAKES LAST NIGHTS GAME BY 4-2 SCORE.

Ottawa, Jan. 10.—Securing a lead of one goal in the first period in which Toronto Arenas, if anything, had a shade over the home team, and playing them to a finish in the second and third period, Ottawa defeated the Stanley Cup holders by 4 to 2 last night, thus closing up on Canadiens in the championship race. Though the weather had turned bitterly cold and a tie-up in the street-car service prevented many from attending, a big crowd turned out.

The hockey was fast and very interesting at all stages, particularly in the third session, in which Ottawa put up their prettiest play. Arenas furnished some brilliant hockey nevertheless, and, though they met defeat, they again demonstrated that they will take a lot of beating before the championship has been decided.

Coach Smith usd only two substitutes, George Bpuches and Eddie Lowrey, keeping his Big Six in the play for the greater part of the time. The line up:

Referee—Harvey Pulford.

Judge of play—Charlie McKinley.

Umpires—Joe Wallace and Alf. Living.

WAR'S LESSON

The lessons of economy and thrift have been hard to master, but in the mastering has come a knowledge of needs but dimly realized before. The needs of a cheaper distribution of groceries caused the suggestion to be made by some Peterboro woman which resulted in the opening of The Grocateria in the Old Market Arcade.

ORCHESTRA OF RARE TALENT WITH 'HEARTS OF THE WORLD'

Magnificent Music Accompanies Every Picture Shown on the Screen--Mr. Jules Brazil Is Director.

Hearts of the World is rightly called a supreme triumph from beginning to end there is not a moment when the spectators whole attention is not riveted upon the screen.

A short prologue introducing the British House of Parliament and the French Chamber of Deputies in August, 1914 is followed by one of the most charming love scenes.

Like a thunderbolt the order to mobilize is posted in the French village and soon after, the French, after repeatedly repulsing the enemy are finally driven from their last defense of the village by the German hordes.

The German occupation of a once happy village the terrible experiences through which the unfortunate civilians pass, seem almost beyond belief, and yet there is every reason to know that D. W. Griffith's portrayal is true.

Finally the German terror is driven from the village, now in ruins.

Superb Orchestra.

The "Hearts of the World" is alone worth price of admisson and the splendid symphoney orchestra accompanyng the picture is also worth the money. The score is the most fascinating one yet heard to any film and is set by the same musican as compiled the "Birth of a Nation." And strange to say we find the conductor of the "Hearts of the World" Mr. Jules Brazil was here before as orchestral director of the "Birth of a Nation" and "Intolerance" and he has with him some of the same soloists, including Mr. Anthony Braglio the harpist, Joseph Williams, violinist, Frank Lapetina, the young 'cellist and Carl Wagner, contra bass. In the Brass and wood wind section there is Chas. De Rose, the flantist, Albert Denning and Raphaele Patrizi, the famous trumpet player. The percussion instruments are handled by Albert Strube and his excellent tympany playing must be commented upon. "The Birth of a Nation" was indeed a great score but the "Hearts of the World" is just as clever and perhaps more perfect in the detail of setting. One hears excerpts from Sir Arthur Sullivan, Chopin, Beethoven, Wagner, Edward Elgar, and sprinklings of the famous symphonies and yet the ordinary mind is satisfied and charmed with some of the lighter themes such as "Peek aboo" for the little boy and "Honey Go Play in Your Own Backyard" for the gosling, all beautifully rendered and skillfully conducted by Mr. Brazil, who is a past master in directing symphony orchestras with large productions. To listen to the "Hearts of the World" orchestra revives one of the pleasant recollections of the "Birth of a Nation" orchestra, for there is no comparison whatever in their wonderful work.

Translated Into English.

All books of the Old Testamen apocrypha, 14 in number, have been translated into English, and are included as apochryphal books in some editions of the Bible. They were formerly printed under a distinctive heading between the Old and the New Testaments, and in that form can still be found in many old family Bibles. They are always included in the so called Septuagint, a version of the Bible used by the Greek church.

Tests Straw.

Experiments have recently been carried out in two Scottish mills for the purpose of determining the yield and of testing the utility of straw pulp. Both wheat and oat straw were tested, and fairly satisfactory results were obtained. A yield of pulp was obtained from oat straw equal to 35 per cent of the weight of bone-dry straw. There is said to be a surplus production of 620,000 tons of straw in Scotland alone.

The art of bronze casting was introduced into Siam by the Chinese about the eleventh century and many statues of the Indian divinities were cast from it for religious purposes.

To all the kind members of the Soldiers' Wives and Mothers' Club of Peterborough.

Dear King Members:

It is with great pleasure I write these few lines to acknowledge the gift of one pair of socks and package of gum given me today by Mr. Lancaster, the recipient of the parcel of socks and gum from your club. Introduced Himself.

Grandma was out walking with her small grandson when a large dog came running along the walk. The little boy started to pet the dog when grandma warned him not to, saying that he was strange to the dog and might get hurt. At that the little fellow walked over to the dog, made a bow, and said: "I'm Ford Bradley. Now you know me, don't you?"

Intelligent Maine Dog.

A Gardiner (Me.) dog was caught on the trestle over the new Maine Central viaduct and could not reach the end ahead of the fast-coming train. Being afraid to jump off because of the distance to the ground, the dog dropped his body over one of the sleepers, letting his head and legs hang between the sleepers. The engine and six cars passed along and then doggie perked up one ear, found the coast was clear and calmly finished his journey home.

EBERT'S FORCES ARE NOW IN FULL CONTROL IN BERLIN

Government Army Capture the Police Headquarters--People Are Urged to Support the Dynasty.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Berlin, Jan. 13.—Government forces have captured police headquarters after a short bombardment. The Ebert Government is now in complete control.

British Oust Spartacans.

Copenhagen, Jan. 13.—British troops have occupied Duesseldorf, which has been in the hands of Spartacans. Duesseldorf is a town in Rhinish Prussia. It is situated on the right bank of the Rhine, 21 miles northwest of Cologne.

Royal House Askes Aid.

London, Jan. 13.—Luxembourg Government has issued a proclamation appealing to the people against the movement for the establishment of a republic and urging support of the Dynasty. The proclamation announces that Grand Duchess Marie has declared her readiness to abdicate if her retention of the throne would ve an obstacle to the decision taken by the Government to seek an economic alliance with the Entente powers, especially France and Belgium.

Rosa Luxemburg in the Toils.

Rosa Luxemburg, associated with Dr. Karl Liebknecht in the leadership of the rebellous Spartacn forces in Berlin; has been arrested by the Government soldiers, according to a report of the Taeglische Rundschau. The arrest is said to have been made when the troops were clearing out the Central office of the Spartacans last night. Dr. Liebknecht's son also is reported to have been taken. The capture of the Spartacan office was effected by the free use of hand grenades. Soldiers burned in the streets an immense quantity of Bolshevik literature found there.

EMMET FAUX CHARGED WITH ILLEGAL SALE OF LIQUOR

Interesting Case in Police Court Arises Out of Recent Deaths Caused by Drinking Stuff That Contained Wood Alcohol.

Emmet Faux appeared this morning in Police Court charged with selling liquor, contrary to the provisions of the Ontario Temperance Act. He is quite a familiar figure in Police Court, now having figured there several times lately in connection with the inquests into the deaths of Omer Bourgon and Jesse Irwin and was implicated in the wood alcohol drinking bout, which was responsible for the former's death.

Detective Meagher was the first witness for the Crown. His evidence went to show that he had been sent to the office of Dr. Wood and had procured from him the bottle in which was the fluid which had resulted in the death of Omer Bourgon. He brought it to the chief of police.

Dr. Wood repeated his tory as told at the inquest into the death of Bourgon. He repeated his opinion that wood alcohol was very poisonous and stated that he did not know just what columnian spirits was but opined that methylated spirits and wood alcohol were one and the same thing.

Stuff Was Analysed.

Chief Thompson was the next witness for the Crown. He told of having received the bottle from Detective Meagher and of sealing it and sending it to the analyst of the License Board in order to find the percentage of alcohol contained in it, if any. He explained, in answer to a question from J. E. Corkery, lawyer for the defence, that the analyst of the License Board does not examine fluids except with a view to ascertaining the percentage of alcohol contained in them. He is having a sample of the liquor further analysed by another firm in order to determine the other ingredients.

Ernest Payne, a druggist of the city, was next called into the box. He stated that he had filled an order on Christmas day for one Emmet Faux and that the requisition had been signed by a doctor and called for 16 ozs. of grain alcohol. Later in the day Faux had returned with another order, signed by another doctor and witness stated he refused to fill this one on account of having done so in the other case such a short time before. Mr. Payne gave some testimony of a technical nature in regard to the difference between wood alcohol, columnian spirits and methylated spirits, but he did not seem clear enough upon them to be willing to have it appear as testimony. It remained for Mr. Moscur, the witness for the defence, to give evidence which clearly defined the difference between the three compositions.

The Difference.

C. M. Moncur, the first witness for the defence, was asked to define the different alcoholic compositions. He did so in a manner which seemed quite satisfactory. He stated that columnian spirits is a refined form of methylated or wood alcohol. Methylated spirits is a composition in which wood alcohol is mixed with grain or ethyl alcohol in equal quantities to form a concoction, which cannot be drank, but which is used extensively in manufacturing and in the arts. Grain or methyl alcohol is drinkable wood alcohol, columnian spirits or methylated spirits are all poisonous. They are not beverages and there is no restrictions placed upon the sale of any of them except the grain or ethyl alcohol. Ethyl alcohol is the only one of these mentioned under the Tmperance Act. Witness sold a

LABOR ALDERMAN IS HEAD OF FIRE, WATER AND LIGHT

Ald.-Elect Morrison Who Topped the Poll at Civic Election Captures Second Best Place in the Gift of Council—Ald. Phelan Chairman of Board of Works.

The City Council met in inaugural session this morning at eleven o'clock.

Aldermen Gainey, Morrison, Murray, Garside, J. J. Turner, Hamilton, Edgar, A. A. McIntyre, Taylor and Phelan.

Ald. Murray's Position.

On motion of Ald. A. A. McIntyre and Taylor, the agreement between the city and Alex. Murray, by which the latter paid a nominal rental of 25c a year for the privilege of his fence encroaching on city property, was cancelled, after which Mr. Murray was entitled under the statute to make his declaration of office as alderman.

Mayor's Address.

On motion of Ald. Taylor and Phelan, the subjects referred to by his worship in his insugural address, were referred to their respective committees.

Standing Committees.

On motion of Ald. McIntye and Edgar, the whole Council were appointed a committee to name the Standing Committees for the year 1919.

The following are chairmen of the several committees:

Board of Works—Ald. Phelan.
Fire, Water and Light—Ald. Morrison.
Manufacturers—Ald. A. A. McIntyre.
Finance—Ald. Taylor.
Property—Ald. Hamilton.
Legal, Reception and Legislation—Ald. Turner.
Railways—Ald. Edgar.

Matters pertaining to the new high level bridge are left temporarily in the hands of the Board of Works until a special committee is named later on.

Favors Labor Men.

Ald. Turner at first refused the chairmanship of the Legal and Reception Committee on the ground that the Trades and Labor representatives, who also represent the popular vote at the elections, should assume this position, the reception duties of which are essentially of a public nature. Again, he thought at least two committees should be under the chairmanship of the Labor men.

Mayor Duncan asked that in the city's business the Trades and Labor or any other public body's interests be not referred to in precedence of other calls. Aldermen are elected to represent the city generally, and not any one particular organization.

Further discussion resulted in Ald. Turner accepting chairmanship of the Legal and Reception Committee.

Russian Bolshevik Jailed In Berlin

CAPT. WIDDIFIELD EXPLAINS "WAR SERVICE GRATUITY"

Act Which so Many Find It Difficult to Understand Is Clearly Interpreted.

Capt. C. R. Widdifield, has by request sent to Secretary Whatley of the G.W.V. A. the following local interpretation of the "War Service Gratuity Order-in-Council which so many of the men interested found difficulty in understanding.

The reason for the Order-in-Council was to award to Officers, warrant officers and men of the Canadian forces a "War Service Gratuity," in place of Post Discharge Pay, and as the gratuity amounts to a larger sum than the discharge pay, those who have already received the discharged pay (if they are entitled as hereinafter appears) may make the necessary declaration and receive a subsequent payment.. "On active Service" means on the strength of a unit in the C. E. F., in Canada, England, France, etc. Any officer, warrant officer or man who was on active service with a C. E. F. unit on or after the 11th day of November, 1918, is entitled to receive a war service gratuity equal in amount to the pay and allowance (and if he has a dependent, such as a wife or dependent mother who received an allowance then separation allowance also) he was drawing at the time of his discharge, under the following scale:

1.—If on the strength of a unit that was in England, France or Belgium.

Length of service	Pay and allowances
2 years or over	6 months
2 years or over	5 months
1 year or over	4 months
Under one year	3 months

2.—If he never left Canada:

Length of service	Pay and allowances
2 years or over	3 months
2 years or over	2 months
1 year or over	1 month

If any officer or man has been receiving separation allowance for his depedent mother, etc., up to the time of discharge then his rate of pay for a month period will not be less than $100.00. In the case of an officer or man who has no dependent such as above then he will not receive less than $70.00 for a one month period. For example a married man who is entitled to a six month's gratuity will receive $100 each month for six month or $600 in all.

In the case of an officer or man who has a wife or dependent mother, etc., and thus would have been entitled to separation allowance but for the fact that he was receiving lodg-

WILL SPEAK AT LABOR MEETING

MINISTER OF LABOR WILL DELIVER TWO ADDRESSES HERE THURSDAY.

Secretary William Stevens of the Trades and Labor Council has received a letter from Minister of Labor Robertson, who states that he will be pleased to address a meeting of the workingmen of Peterborough next Thursday evening after he speaks at the Canadian Club luncheon to be held at the Empress at 6 o'clock. Mr. Robertson will arrive in the city at 3.30 p.m. and will be obliged to leave for Ottawa again on the midnight train the same evening so that with two engagements he is likely to have a busy time estimate in the city.

A mass meeting of workingmen will be held at labor headquarters after the luncheon and every wage-earner in the city should post himself to hear the message of the Labor Minister who has attained a place in the Dominion Cabniet.

Tickets for the luncheon may be obtained now from Mr. V. J. McElderry, secretary of the Canadian Club, or may be secured at the Empress on the night of the function. A good crowd is expected. Minister Robertson has a message of interest for all classes in the community and the topic with which he will deal, "The Labor Problem," is the most vital issue before the world today.

POLISH AFFAIRS STILL MUDDLED

BOLSHEVIKI IS STILL A MENACE IN WARSAW, CABLE SAYS.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Warsaw, Jan. 13.—With the Bolshevikist forces only one hundred miles away, the political muddle continues here. Gen. Pilsudski, Polish military dictator, is apparently hesitating to accept the proposals of Ignace Paderewski. Gen. Pilsudski is said to fear that the pro-Bolshevists will resume street fighting if they are not overawed. He is also reported to be adhering to his original contention that the present goverament of Poland must remain in power until after the elections. The outlook seems to be serious in view of the arrival of British and American missions which have announced that they are unofficial in character.

It has been made plain that these missions will do nothing to aid Poland unless a stable government is formed. This fact, however, has failed to influence the Socialists, whose attitude is deprecated by their opponents, who point out that the Bolsheviki are advancing and that the Poles must soon be called upon to protect their frontier from the Baltic to Roumania.

Bolshevist troops are moving toward Warsaw from Vilna along the railway. They have already occupied Lida and have Bialystok as their objective.

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Shields, Benson avenue, have received word from their son, Flight-Lieut. T. H. Shields, to the effect that he had the honor to be one of the convoy party that brought the surrendered German submarines to the British port.

The surrender was made on November 24th and there were 87 undersea craft, among which was the celebrated Deutchland.

Flight-Lieut. Shields is a Peterborough boy and he flew over this city last spring while training in Toronto. He went overseas in May and has been flying large bombing machines ever since. He has been engaged over the North Sea most of the time. He was prominent in the athletic games at the camps in England.

Hearing of Grand Trunk Matter Before Railway Board in Toronto

The Grand Trunk Railway Company applied before the Dominion Railway Board today at the Assize Chamber, at the City Hall, Toronto, for an order permitting the mto rebuild their bridge on Bethune street, near Murray. This bridge was built about sixty years ago and is used for railway and vehicular traffic. The Company now intend to cut off the vehicular traffic and to build the bridge only the width of the railway track.

The city opposed this and Sir Henry Drayton declined to make an order and instructed the Peterborough city engineer, Mr. Parsons, who was present, to make an appointment with the engineer of the Railway Board to ascertain the class of piers and abuttments which would be needed to avoid flooding if a reconstruction of the bridge is permitted.

Sir Henry Drayton stated upon the application of City Solicitor G. N. Gordon that if the order was made the Railway Company would be required to leave the bridge in as substantial condition as it now is for vehicular traffic, and the city would not be called upon to reconstruct this part of the bridge. In addition to that the city solicitor asked that if there were any costs of rebuilding crossings, or sidewalks, caused by reason of raising the level of the bridge, the oBrad would order the Railway Company to pay all the cost of such alterations. Sir Henry Drayton said this would be a term of the order if it were made. In the meantime Sir Henry Drayton, the Chairman of the Board, announced no order would be made until he obtained the report from the Board's engineer, and when that came in the matter would be taken up again.

TRYING TO FIX BLAME FOR WRECK IN NEW YORK ROAD

Officials Investigating Accident by Which Twenty-One Persons Lost Their Lives on Sunday.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Batavia, N. Y., Jan. 13.—Officials of the New York Central road today were continuing their investigations to place the blame for the wreck at South Byron yesterday, in which 21 persons were killed in a rear-end collision. Attempts were renewed to identify 13 nameless bodies still in Batavia undertaking establishments.

John Friedly of Buffalo, engineer of the Southwestern train, maintains that no block signal was set against his train and that he saw no warning light until he was within a few car lengths of the Wolverine Pullman train which had stopped to take on extra engines for a steep grade.

In this statement he is supported by the fireman, J. R. Dinan, superintendent of the western division, said he could not explain the accident.

It was recalled today that Engineer Friedly was in a similar wreck twenty years ago. His train on that occasion plowed into another at Bergen, the next station on the Central east of Byron, and several people were killed.

One of the remarkable features of the wreck was the fact that none of the passengers in the second coach from the end of the Wolverine was injured. The rear end of the car was lifted high in the air by the force of the collision, and then it dropped through the roof of the ill-fated last car, but all of the passengers escaped except for bruises and shock.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

MONDAY, JANUARY 13, 1919

MAYOR DUNCAN'S ADDRESS.

MAYOR DUNCAN'S address to the new Council is characterized by the spirit of economy that has marked all his public career either as an alderman or in his present position. One thing is evident, the Mayor is disposed to fulfil all the promises that have been made to the electors, not by himself, for his return by acclamation relieved him of any such responsibility, but by his colleagues in the Council.

Mayor Duncan recommends no new expenditures of any account except in the matter of providing the returned soldiers with suitable accommodation and erecting a memorial to those who lost their lives in the war. This is a pledge that has been given by every present member of the Council, and for that if for no other reason, it must be redeemed. Another matter which must be regarded as involving new outlay is the granting of the request of the firemen for the double platoon system. A poll of the Board of Aldermen would show beyond a doubt that a majority are in favor of the innovation, so that this matter, too, is likely to meet with no opposition.

Mayor Duncan, however, realises that there are two heavy expenditures that cannot longer be delayed—the building of the Hunter street bridge and the sewage disposal plant. If he has any theories of his own with regard to either project he has the wisdom to refrain from attempting to bring his colleagues to his way of thinking. One certain way to arouse opposition to any measure is to dictate as to how it is to be accomplished. The Mayor finds himself facing a practically new Council and he approaches his colleagues, with whose views he is not familiar, in the proper spirit, by counselling harmony and making allowance for the fact that all men cannot be expected to see any public question in the same light.

There is likely in the new Council to be a difference of opinion as to the purchase by the city of the street railway system and the gas plant, a matter which the Mayor suggests may be well put off for the present. Sooner or later that purchase must be made, and the cost become another charge on the city. Does it really matter whether that change is effective this year or three years hence?

The Labor members of the Council—and there are really five of these—are committed to the ownership by the city of all public utilities. There has during the two years in which the street railway system has been in the hands of the Hydro Commission, not been a single improvement in the service, although the necessity of this has always been apparent. There has been no extension of the line, either, except in one inconsiderable instance. The De Laval plant, one of Peterborough's most thriving industries, is still half a mile in any given direction from the car line. Labor aldermen are not likely to forget that since the Hydro Commission has taken over the road the union of conductors and motormen has been broken up. Altogether, it is difficult to see how any benefit has accrued to the city through the purchase by the Hydro Commission of the utilities in question. In both cases, there has been an increase in rates. If the necessity for municipal ownership existed two years ago, it exists still.

Mayor Duncan suggests that one of the local roads, preferably the one to Port Hope, be made a county provincial highway in order to link up the city and county with the provincial road which the Government purposes to build from Toronto to Montreal. For such a road the Government would pay forty per cent. of the cost of construction and the same percentage of maintenance charges.

This would certainly be an advantage to Peterborough if in no other regard than bringing to the district auto tourists who would flock to the lake resorts in the summer. Peterborough is now practically off the auto map. It is to be regretted, however, if the city is not to be placed on record as favoring the good roads policy that has been adopted by every other county in the province. Why should any county official be permitted to use the Court House as a pedestal and, standing thereon, pose as another statue of liberty enlightening the province? Bright as the local illumination may be, its rays fail to extend beyond the boundaries of the county.

"IN FACT IT IS RUMORED."

"IN FACT, it is rumored," says our local contemporary, in an alleged news article in which it attempts to explain the defeat of two candidates for the County Council. The rumor as relayed by the Examiner is to the effect that the candidates in question were left at home because they are suspected of favoring the good roads policy that has been adopted by every county in the province with the single exception of Peterborough.

"In fact, it is rumored," but investigation would no doubt reveal the additional fact that the rumor was confined chiefly to those who are opposed to the good roads movement not so much from conviction as from political expediency, everything else in the shape of a platform plank being lacking.

This citing of mere rumors as a justification for giving circulation to a story is responsible for half the social mischief in the world. "I hear that Mr. So-and-so," and so the story starts and gathers force from every person who takes a hand in passing it on. The gossiper who makes mischief without real malicious intent or the character-slayer who carries on his nefarious work deliberately, is not absolved from legal responsibility for his slanders or libels simply because he seeks to shift the onus of the charge upon the shoulders of another. In fact, the man who invents a slander is really to be preferred to the one who merely passed it around in the community. He at least has the merit of originality and the courage to stand for what he says.

There is no end to the charges and petty slanders that a newspaper can make or circulate if it has recourse to the measure of safety of which the Examiner availed itself. It might, for instance, go on to say that, "In fact, it is rumored" that several of the aldermen defeated in the last election came to grief because they are addicted to smoking plug tobacco, something that would worry the aesthetic soul of our contemporary, and a habit for which the silk-hosed and plug-hatted voters of the city would not stand for.

Of course, there are well-founded rumors. "In fact, it is rumored" that a letter appearing in the columns of the Examiner the other day, abusing the Federal member for West Peterborough and signed "Conservative" was really written by a member of what is still by courtesy called the Liberal party.

But a newspaper that opens its columns to scurrilous anonymous letters is not above originating rumors, concerned for its own safety rather than for truth or the reputation of others.

STRIKES AND WAGES.

THE WAR has raised wages to an abnormal figure, but aside from the steady work which has been the rule for the past three years, wage-earners outside of munition workers and a few such isolated cases, were no better off than they were when the cost of living was less than half what it is today. Those who work on salary, the members of the different learned professions, have been really worse off than they were prior to 1914.

The war has been ended for two months, and yet there has been no lowering in the cost of any of the necessaries of life. There has, however, been a tendency in some manufactories to cut wages in the present prospect of a large number of men being reduced to the necessity of looking for employment. Naturally enough the claim is made by those interested directly that such a course is not justified now is it good business policy. If such a course is persevered in by the employers, serious labor difficulties are certain to arise.

The man who sets out to purchase a stock of winter clothing finds prices as high as ever, even if the country is at peace, and he is assured by the dealer that there is no immediate prospect of cheaper boots and garments of any description. The butcher, the baker, the druggist, the grocer, in fact everyone with whom he does business, tell him the same story. If, under the war scale of wages, the workingman had trouble in making ends meet, then how in the name of humanity is he to fare if his earning power is crippled?

All the signs in the industrial world are against the theory of a panic or even a serious depression in business. The condition which brings about either is due to over-production. There is certainly nothing of the kind in evidence today, but rather is the reverse the case. The greater part of the industrial energy for the past four years has been occupied in war work and other lines have been neglected. There is a scarcity of clothing, even of foodstuffs. The surplus of production in all lines will be required in the war-wasted countries of Europe for years to come. If these countries have been impoverished by the war, arrangements are already under way by the Canadian Government to extend them the credit which they so urgently need. This policy will insure industrial activity in Canada for many years.

Eventually, of course, the inflation due to the war, in wages and prices, will be corrected. It would, however, be the illogical policy to reduce wages until the cost of living shows some tendency to decline. To adopt such a policy can have only one result—serious industrial troubles. The temper of the enlightened people is not to be played with now that they have just come through the Gethsemane of war.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

THE RADICAL ELEMENT in Europe appear to be intent on self-extermination rather than the other variety.

• • • • •

THE WAR IN RUSSIA is not yet over. Hence the presence in that country of Allied troops and Canada is still an ally.

• • • • •

BARBERS are naturally opposed to bolshevism, the trade mark of the order being a menace to the tonsorial industry.

• • • • •

IF THE PRINCE OF WALES comes to Canada the people of this country will do their utmost to treat him like one of their own number, democratic and untitled.

• • • • •

LIFE SEEMS TO BE just one innovation after another. A church in Hamilton, in order to encourage attendance, has decided to serve a free lunch after the evening service.

• • • • •

THE CITY COUNCIL, of course, knows just what ought to be done with the street railway. The only trouble is that about every alderman is likely to have a different viewpoint.

• • • • •

THOSE FERTILE correspondents who are keeping tab on the ex-kaiser have represented him as doing about everything under the sun except trying to take out a policy of life insurance.

• • • • •

NOW THAT THE WAR is over the world can again take up the task of sending expeditions to the Arctic to ascertain whether Cook or Peary came the nearest to locating the mystic Pole.

• • • • •

IT IS JUST AS WELL that casting eggs at a comedian or other public offender is becoming unpopular. In the excitement some good eggs might be thrown, a sheer waste of foodstuffs at present prices.

• • • • •

THE EASIEST industrial task is to raise wages; the most difficult to lower the scale. But what is wanted first of all to prevent trouble is to restore the purchasing power of the dollar.

GERMAN PEOPLE WERE DUPED BY LEADERS TO THE VERY END

Believed Everything They Read in Newspapers and Were Certain of Victory---Mr. Emile Baumer Has Letter from Brother in Alsace-Lorraine.

Emile Baumer, 567 George street, has redeived the following interesting letter from his brother in Alsace-Lorraine, describing the conditions that have existed there since the beginning of the war and the change for the better that has taken place since the expulsion of the German soldiers and the occupation of the uniting by the French. Mr. Baumer (of this city) is a native of Alsace-Lorraine, but six years ago he could tolerate German oppression no longer and came to America, selecting Peterborough as his future home. His father was an officer in the French army in the Franco-Prussian war. The letter, which was written in French, has been translated by Mr. Baumer for the benefit of Review readers. It is as follows:

Biselmiller, Nov. 30, 1918.

Dear Brother,—"

By this time you will have received the card which I hope sent you from Strasbourg, on the day our liberators, the French troops, entered the city. There is so much news now and so many surprises, so that I don't know what to write first. At the present time French soldiers are billeted in our town. The first ones in 48 years. They have a better appearance than the Huns, whom we had here stationary for four and a half years. They also have plenty to eat and good red wine, which makes our mouth's water. A half year more under Hunish rule, and we all would be no more amongst the living. Very many people died of starvation, and we all are like skeletons. Across the Rhine in Germany it was far worse, that is, why they had to give in. The foolish German people believed everything they saw in the papers. We would read all the time that the British and her allies have nothing more to eat, on account of the German U-boats, which sunk everything in sight, but we Alsatians knew different, we didn't believe it, for we knew it was only German bluff. We used to get meat, butter and bread by the ounce.

If you only could have seen the Huns, which were garrisoned here, amongst them were humpbacks, cripples, some with one eye, lunatics and syphilitics. You can imagine what kind of ruses Eugene and myself had to invent for to make them believe that we were sick and not fit for the front or else we also would have been sent to the slaughtering bench of the master butchers—Hindenburg and his gang. Every year we were examined three and four times and very strictly, and yet we fooled their experts through help of a French druggist, who gave us some drugs for to make us feverish sick, and at the same time we didn't shave for three or four weeks, so we had the appearance of syphilitics, but it helped alright, but it was no cinch.

In the first time of the war there were days of joy and jubiles amongst the German population, all the houses and public buildings gayly decorated with flags for victories after victories. You can imagine how we Alsatians felt. We couldn't say anything, but it is different now. The brutes are over there in their own country and French soldiers are billeted in their houses. If you could have seen the retreat of the Huns through our town, some on foot, some on horse, and some on wagons, with their heads hanging down. They sold everything of their equipment, new blankets, rifles, and machinery. We could get horses by the dozens for nothing, but they were of no use to us, as there is no fodder in the country for them. All the soldiers wore red cockades on their helmets and uniforms. Their officers were not saluted any longer.

Two weeks before the French soldiers entered the town, all of us were wearing the tricolor cockade of France. On Nov. 23rd, the first French soldiers arrived in Autos, but what a reception. I can't describe it; it is like a dream, like a fairytale, but yet it is true. Nobody works, everyone celebrates and so on for the last two weeks. You can see thousands of French flags and flags of the Allies in our town.

I also met some English and American soldiers in Autos. I cried out to them: "Hullo, Englishmen, Vive les Anglais. They stopped and gave us a good handshake. The older inhabitants of the town wept like children for joy. The troops were in command of General Rampon, who was given a great ovation, and who gave some rejoicing speeches.

Amongst the old French veterans was one who fought in the Crimea and who wears the medal with the bars Sebastopol, Inkerman, Alma, given to him by Queen Victoria, to him General Rampon gave special attention and kissed him on both cheeks.

I will also tell you what we had to eat during the last four and a half years. We received every day a half pound of bread per person, but it was a different kind of bread than you have. It was a mixture from acorns, horse-chestnuts, bark of pine trees, dried mushrooms, fishbones, rye, oats and barley, all ground together. Of butter, we received three ounces in three weeks per person. After a while, we received a substitute called war fat. It was made out of tallow from horses and dogs, but from sick horses. The tea was made out of strawberry leaves. The vegetables were red beets, plantain, sorrel, okra and all kinds of weeds. The tobacco was a mixture of leaves from hops, cherries, beeches and rhubarb. We had to wash ourselves with potter's clay instead of soap. Hemp was made of hoptendrils and nettles, and out of this the cloth was made. Some clothes were also made out of black dyed linen sheets. The towels, handkerchiefs, shirts and even clothes were made out of paper, which was made from pulpwood stolen in Russia by the Huns. The potatoes were $7 a bag, butter, $8 a pound; eggs, $3 a dozen; beans, $1 a pound; apple cider, $1 a quart; honey, $2 a pound; one pair of boots, from $16 to $25. The soles on the boots and shoes were made out of wood. The Russian prisoners, who were working around town for the people, used to search the garbage pails for potatoe peelings and they boiled a soup out of them. The Huns tyrannized over us for forty-eight years, but never mind, they are gone forever. They are the most wretched, debauched, murderers, incendiaries, poisoners, rogues, thieves, thugs and bandits on the face of the earth.

All the business houses have the following signs on their shop windows: "To the public of Alsace-Lorraine, to the French Soldiers: Don't buy anything in a store run by a Hun. Remember the forty-seven years of oppression and tyranny. Remember the period from 1914-18."

Well, I must come to a close now. Next time you will hear some more news.

THE RATE OF DEMOBILIZATION

(Chicago News)

Americans in considerable number have been clamoring for the immediate return of American troops from abroad. That is natural. They assume that, because an armistice has been signed and the international peace conference is about to begin the army's job has been completed.

It has not, as a matter of fact. Britain's prime minister has very clearly and forcefully shown why. In response to a similar clamor for the return of British troops to England he declared that there was an imperative need for maintaining a strong army on the Rhine and supplementary forces in France as well as at home. He pointed out that the German armies had not yet been demobilized and that they were still very powerful; also that there were many elements of uncertainty concerning Germany's immediate future.

"Impatience now," Lloyd George truly declared, "might lose in a few weeks all it has taken of heroism and sacrifice to gain. During the next few months we must be strong and united in order that a firm settlement may be made with the enemy and that out country may exert its proper influence among other nations at the peace conference."

This statement applies equally to Americans. The war department has planned for the return of a large proportion of the troops and demobilization is in process with all the speed the department deems consistent with safety and reason. The plans may be open to criticism and maye have to be changed, but a due regard to the present unsettled conditions in Europe and the future peace of the world seems to demand less impatience with the plan to maintain abroad a strong American force along with that of the allies.

How the Herring Built the Navy.

We derive the idea of our defensive British navy from King Alfred, the real founder of our fleet, who believed in having bigger, faster, better and more ships than your enemy, which is always a sane policy to follow. But Oliver Cromwell really gave us our herring navy when he saw the necessity of taking their sea-trade dominancy from the Dutch, which trade was mostly concerned with the herring fishery.—Tit-Bits.

Four British Generals Whose Names Will Live In Story of the Nation

GEN. PLUMER is recognized as the greatest of the British generals under Haig. Only less conspicuous is the record of Rawlinson. It begins with the command of the immortal Seventh Division, which arrived in Flanders in October and in less than a month was reduced from 12,000 to 2,000. Its share of Ypres is forever memorable. At Loos Rawlinson was less happy, but he reappears in command of the Fourth Army at the First Somme and holds this post of great importance throughout the battle. After that he disappears for a time, to reappear, after Gough's defeat in March, commanding the Fourth Army again. He deals the great stroke on Aug. 8 which was the beginning of the long series of blows leading to the final scene at Mons, and the coming of victory.

He was Haig's personal friend and choice; he shares with Haig criticism in certain phases, but he shares equally with his chief the credit for the ultimate success in which his victory of August 8 and his share in the breaking of the Hindenburg line on Oct. 8 are brilliant details.

Another general whose fortunes have been steadier is Horne, who commanded the First Army from 1916 onward. An artillery officer, his contribution to the First Somme was very great. He was a rising soldier from that moment and his army was always held highly. Against him fell the second German blow in April of this year and his front was temporarily pierced, owing to the unexpected and complete collapse of the Portuguese. But he held on, managed to hold Givenchy and the high ground west of La Bassee until the great danger was past.

Even more conspicuous was his success in late August, when he attacked north of the Scarpe and broke the Drocourt-Queant line, insuring the ultimate fall both of Douai and of Cambrai. The extent of this success was totally unexpected. It was the first sure promise that the Hindenburg line would not stand and it was a success which held out the first hopes of a decision in 1918.

Rather more brilliant is the record of Byng. He was a distinguished officer before he won Cambrai in 1917, but this victory gave him a place which he has held ever since. In a sense, this victory marks a turning point in the war. It was not properly followed up, which means that Byng did not receive the support which he needed to make his first success permanent. This was because the success outran all expectations and the British army had not the necessary reserves. But Cambrai proved that by restoring the element of surprise it was possible to break through and that by use of tanks surprise could be had, since they would take the place of long sustained bombardment in clearing the way for the infantry.

It was by the use of the lessons of First Cambrai that the Allies won the campaign of 1918 and the war. Mangin's great counter-offensive at the Second Marne was founded upon the use of tanks. Each successive British and French thrust thereafter employed the same method. The German used a variation of the surprise tactics in his earlier successes, but without the tank, relying upon secret concentration and great numbers. But it was Byng who abolished the long-standing belief that trench lines could not be broken, and his discovery was one of the very greatest of the conflict.

In the spring, at a critical moment, when Gough's army had fallen, Byng broke the German effort to extend the dislocation of the British front. He held Arras and Vimy Ridge in the face of a tremendous attack, which the Germans abandoned after forty-eight hours. Still later, in August, he made a successful drive from the old Somme line eastward to Bapaume, which terminated German hopes of holding the Allies west of the Hindenburg line for the balance of the year.

Plumer, Horne, Rawlinson and Byng, these are the outstanding figures under Haig. They bear the same relation to their commander that Gourand, Mangin, Debeney and Berthelot bear to Petain; for Castelnau and Fayolles, who commanded groups of armies brilliantly, the French army supplies no counterpart, since authority was not thus delegated.

GOOD LABOR LAWS.

How Australia Handles Very Difficult Problem.

That the various experiments of Australian States and the Australian Commonwealth in labor legislation looking to a reduction of industrial disputes have on the whole been productive of benefit is the conclusion reached in a report on arbitration and wage-fixing in Australia, issued by the National Industrial Conference Board of the United States.

Labor controversies have by no means been eliminated. Instead there has been an increase so far as mere numbers are concerned. The Australian policies have, however, clearly tended to reduce the seriousness of such disputes, and their preventive influence, the report holds, has been important. Major disputes have been comparatively few.

Such legislation in Australia has taken two principal forms; one a policy of conciliation for the purpose of bringing the interested parties or their representatives face to face in open discussion, in the hope of securing a mutual agreement without the dictum of an outside arbitrator; the other a system of compulsory arbitration by which the disputants are forced to submit their differences to a board or court and to accept the award of that board under heavy penalty for refusal.

Neither system has been enforced in clear-cut, consistent fashion. In Victoria conciliation, which has been the primary of the state, has inevitably merged in a measure into a policy of arbitration. On the other hand, in New South Wales the rigid conception of compulsory arbitration which originally characterized the policy of that state has assumed more and more features of conciliation.

The findings of the report are epitomized as follows:—

State regulation of wages and of industrial disputes is firmly established as a public policy in Australia. The methods and machinery differ, but the fundamental purpose is the same: viz., to reduce industrial friction.

The "living wage" as a minimum is definitely endorsed by the state as the principle behind all forms of conciliation and arbitration.

Beyond that minimum a wage for skill is fixed in each occupation in accordance with the custom of the industry, but not so rigidly as to prohibit bargaining between employer and employe for a higher wage, or, under definite conditions, for one somewhat lower.

The minimum wage has become the maximum. The average wage for males is above the basic wage and a considerable percentage of workers receive an added wage for skill. The system tends, however, to limit the reward for extra skill.

Nominal wages have risen, but to what extent arbitration has been responsible cannot be determined; the general prosperity of the country has contributed to the increase.

Trade unionism and collective bargaining are not only recognized but fostered as a national policy. This is reflected in previsions whereby associations either of employers or of employes may initiate proceedings before arbitration courts and in the rapid growth in numbers of trade unions.

The system has not prevented industrial disputes, which have, in fact, increased. But the number of major disputes is small and has not increased. Decisions are accepted by both sides without serious objection. Strikes result mainly from conditions not provided for in awards.

The mining industry contributes altogether disproportionately to industrial disputes. This is largely due to the irresponsible character and temperament of the miners, who often disregard the advice of their leaders.

In the practical administration of arbitration systems there has been a tendency to place increasing stress on conciliation without abandoning compulsory features.

The right to strike is recognized, but is sharply limited and illegal strikes are penalized.

Public opinion in Australia considers the system effective. It is credited with having given the workers a higher standard of living by guaranteeing them at least a living wage. In general, there is no tendency in Australia to give up any of these methods of arbitration. Even in a period when effective wages are falling, the Labor Party has shown no general desire to substitute the all Australian systems is that they strike for arbitration.

Underlying conditions in the Australian Commonwealth are, therefore, the report points out, sharply differentiated from those in the United States, where organized labor constitutes a small minority of workers, and where state regulation of wages and other industrial conditions is in no way comparable in extent to that reached in Australia. The Australian states, indeed, have been essentially laboratories of political experiment in industrial matters, a problem for which their comparative isolation from world affairs has made them peculiarly adapted.

These considerations are fundamental, the report holds, in judging the real significance of the Australian experience and doubly so in any attempt to apply that experience to conditions in the United States.

Pearls.

A striking illustration of the advance in the value of pearls was afforded at a recent auction sale in London. A necklace of fifty-two pearls which was bought in 1861 at a London jeweler's for $550, was sold for $7,500.

Sponge Growth in Mediterranean.

The best sponges come from the Levant, in the eastern Mediterranean, and are obtained by diving. The Levantine sponge divers often cut pieces from large sponges, replant the pieces, and tie them to stakes to keep them from being swept away by the current. They soon grow at an enormous rate.

MINISTER OF LABOR TAKES INTEREST IN WATSON CASE

Orders-in-Council Issued During War Likely to Be Repealed—Ban May Be Lifted on Socialistic Literature.

Toronto, Jan. 13.—News from Ottawa indicates that the Dominion Government is likely to at least make drastic changes in the orders-in-Council, if it does not repeal them.

This comes as a result of the three-years penitentary term given Charles Watson by Magistrate Kingsford on a charge of having in his possession certain banned literature. Incidentally, the Minister of Justice has wired Magistrate Kingsford for facts in the Watson and Cheesman cases.

Senator Gideon Robertson, Minister of Labor, is taking a keen interest in the case. Frank Watkinson, business agent of the Carpenters' Union, which is taking up the cause of Watson and Cheesman, has had a long-distance telephone conversation with Senator Robertson. He said:

Charges Likely.

"The Minister of Labor agreed with me that something must be done in regard to the orders-in-Council, and he stated that members of the Cabinet had in contemplation certain changes in those orders to make them more suitable to the present conditions.

"I told him of the circumstances of the case, and that there was a tendency in Toronto to hold mass meetings in protest against the severe sentence on Watson, and to ask for the repeal of the orders-in-Council. We do not condone in any way the circulation of the revolutionary literature, but we feel that there should be a more reasonable view taken by the authorities of the cases of men who have in their possession standard works on Socialism.

'Senator Robertson told me that he was very glad I had given him the information, and he asked that I get in touch with him if there are any new developments."

Paid For Call.

As an indication of the attitude of the Minister of Labor it might be mentioned that he had the long-distance message have been sent to Cabinet Ministers urging that something be done to adjust the blanket ban on all such literature, and that some discretion be used in dealing wtih such cases. Even if the orders-in-Council are not repealed, it is thought probable that they will be so amended as to relieve citizens from the danger of a three-year term for having on their persons or premises standard works on Socialistic subjects. Such a punishment might be meeted out, for instance, on the head of the Public Library and of the University Library if those gentlemen were to be hauled into court and convicted, as Watson was, on the direct charge of having banned literature in their possession.

Montreal, Jan. 13.—On the invitation of Sir Edmund Walker, Harry Lauder has consented to go to Toronto for the inaugural meeting of the Salvation Army drive, which is to be held in Massey Hall Sunday, Jan. 19. Rev. George Adam will accompany Mr. Lauder. Speaking on "Reconstructive Philosophy of a Plain Men," Lauder will tell something of what he has seen of the Salvation Army work in the war zone.

BILLIONS OF "FAGS."

United States Made Thirty-nine Billion Last Year.

Washington, Jan. 13. — Thirty-nine billion cigarettes were produced in the United States last year, and, so far as the Department of Agriculture has been able to ascertain, will be used in this country.

This represents, the department reported, four times as many cigarettes as were produced seven years ago.

The Wholesale Lumber Dealers' Association held its annual banquet, and the forty members heard encouraging reports re trade conditions.

BULGARIA'S LOSSES.

One Hundred Thousand Killed and Missing in War.

Sofia, Jan. 13.—Bulgaria's losses in the war were: Killed and missing, 101,224; wounded, 1,152,399, and prisoners, 10,825.

These figures do not include the losses during the retreat from Macedonia, when many died of influenza, pneumonia and famine, and 90,000 were taken prisoners. There is a serious development of spotted typhus fever in Bulgaria, more than 400 cases having been found in Sofia. The outbreak, the authorities say, is due largely to the country's almost complete lack of soap, disinfecting materials and under-clothing.

Driver Brotherston enlisted in May, 1917, and went overseas with the 69th Battery. He was a brother overseas now who enlisted with the 2nd Canadian Cowourg Heavy Battery in Oct., 1914.

He leaves his parents, one sister, Dolly Brotherston, and three brothers, Robert, overseas; Andrew and William, at home.

MAYOR DUNCAN'S INAUGURAL ADDRESS TO COUNCIL

At the first meeting of the new City Council held at noon today Mayor Duncan delivered the following inaugural address:

Gentlemen:—

I am pleased to welcome you to the Council of the City of Peterborough at our first meeting for this year. It is gratifying to me to welcome back three of the members of last year's council, and I wish also to give a hearty greeting to the Aldermen who occupy seats here for the first time or who have returned to the Council after several years' absence. It is not often that we have so many changes in the personnel of the Council, and I miss members who gave a great deal of time and did valuable work last year for the city, but I feel certain that we are all animated by the one desire, to give the best service possible to the municipality, and we can look forward to a year of earnest effort and I hope, and have no doubt, a year of successful effort in administering the affairs of the City and in advancing its interests.

THE COUNTRY IS AT PEACE

We meet today under circumstances much more gratifying than those of a year ago. Then our Dominion was engaged, together with the other parts of the British Empire and the Allies of the Empire, in a bitter struggle with Germany and the other nations which had plunged the world into war and were striving to impose their yoke upon all other peoples. Thank God, that war is over. Our enemies have been defeated, and have had to accept the conditions laid down for them in the terms of the armistice drawn up by the Allies and will have to accept in the same way the final terms for peace which will be prepared. We can now hopefully expect that a League of Nations will be established which will make war highly improbable if not impossible and that will to a very large extent relieve the people of the world of the great burden of maintaining military establishments.

CANADA'S VALIANT PART

We know the most valiant part which the Canadian soldiers, including thousands from Peterborough, took in defeating the savage enemy. Many of our men have laid down their lives and rest in the fields of France and Flanders, and many have returned or will return to us maimed and crippled, while others who have bravely fought will happily return in good health. For those who have died in the war a suitable monument should be erected in the City. Those who have returned and who will return should be provided with accommodation where they may gather and where their Association may conduct its business. The Association now has rooms, but they are not suitable for the numbers who will use them. I know that the people of Peterborough will want to erect a suitable monument for the fallen heroes, and I am certain that they will provide accommodation for the returned heroes. It is our duty, as I see it that we as members of the Council should not only co-operate with the citizens generally in these two important matters, but should take a leading part in them. This I know you will be pleased to do.

We have had difficulty, especially lately, in meeting the soldiers as they return, as we always like to do, because we are often not given notice of the time at which they will arrive. I will be pleased to take this matter up with the Chairman of the Reception Committee and see whether something cannot be done by which we will be informed of the time at which the soldiers will reach the city.

With respect to the civil re-establishment of the soldiers, there is in Peterborough a branch of the Soldiers' Aid Commission, which assists the soldiers in procuring employment, and the Council I know will be pleased to assist in this matter in any way that they can.

SEWAGE DISPOSAL PLANT

One of the several very important matters to be dealt with this year and that will require immediate attention is the construction of sewage disposal works. This work should have been carried out several years ago, but difficulties in securing a location and the great war have delayed it. It will not have to be taken up promptly and completed.

THE HUNTER STREET BRIDGE

The construction of the Hunter Street Bridge is another important and pressing matter. As you know, a sum of money was voted by the ratepayers to construct this bridge and one at London street. Tenders were received for the building of the Hunter Street Bridge, but they were so high that none were accepted. It is necessary for us to consider and decide the best way to proceed with this work.

THE HOUSING PROBLEM ACUTE

The subject of housing has been brought to the attention of the council. At the time provision had not been made in the law to enable the Council to deal with it, and in fact such provision has not yet been made. But towards the end of last year a circular was received setting out the plan by which the Government of Ontario will lend money to the cities for this purpose, and it will be the duty of this Council to consider what action should be taken in the matter.

THE QUESTION OF GOOD ROADS

In various part of the Province the Ontario Government has adopted roads as Provincial Highways and as Provincial County Roads and is considering the adoption of others. So far no road which is in or approaches this County or City has been so adopted nor, so far as I am aware, has been under consideration by the Government with such action in view. The road from Toronto east, passing through Port Hope, has been adopted as a Provincial Highway, and it would be well for the Board of Works to consider the advisability of taking action with other municipalities to have leading roads in this neighborhood, for example the road from here to Port Hope taken over as Provincial Highways.

MORE INDUSTRIES FOR PETERBOROUGH

It has for many years been the policy of this Council to facilitate the establishment of manufacturing industries in the city and this subject would appear to assume especial importance at this time. The period of reconstruction may result in the establishment of new factories, and in the location of branches of United States and British concerns in Canada, and we should be on the alert to secure new industries for the city. This is a matter in which many citizens can assist and we will be pleased to receive their co-operation. I would suggest that the Manufacturers' Committee hold a meeting at an early date and consider their policy and plans for the year.

PURCHASE OF THE STREET RAILWAY

Extensions of the street railway and improvements in the service of the railway are, of course, under the control of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario, but the Commission operates the service for the people and, without any purpose of making a profit. The Commission I feel sure will give sympathetic consideration to any suggestions made by the City and it might be a good plan to have the subject of extensions considered by a committee of the Council with representatives of the Board of Trade or other persons especially interested. This subject will no doubt be taken up promptly by the Railway Committee.

The question of the purchase by the City of the street railway and gas plant was broached last year by the Hydro-Electric Power Commission, but a request made by the Council for information has not yet been complied with. It is perhaps just as well that this matter should stand over for a time.

PLATOON SYSTEM FOR FIREMEN

Last year the members of the Fire Department were given to understand that their request for the adoption of the two platoon system would be considered early this year. There is no doubt that the firemen have a strong argument behind their request, and the promise for prompt consideration should be carried out. At the same time the Fire, Water and Light Committee will be called upon to act carefully, with three objects in view, to comply as far as possible with the reasonable request of the firemen, to at least maintain the present interchange this boon and to cause switches as little as possible with justice to the men and the service.

BETTER TRANSPORTATION REQUIRED

I would like to see early attention paid to the railway passenger service given to this city by the Canadian Pacific Railway and strong representations made to the authorities of that railway on the subject. The service to and from Montreal is entirely inadequate and very unjust to the city, and other improvements in the service can be made without giving the city more than it is entitled to. The Railway Committee might obtain the co-operation in this matter of the Board of Trade, the manufacturers, and others who are especially interested in a proper railway service.

ECONOMY URGED IN ALL DEPARTMENTS

It is necessary for the careful management of the finances of the city that the appropriations be made as soon as possible. If expenses are incurred before the budget is prepared the Council may be hampered when the work of preparing the estimates and striking the rate is taken up. I hope that the Committees will give attention at once to their financial requirements for the year and prepare their estimates, and that in the meantime only necessary expenditures be made or incurred.

Taxation was increased last year owing to the grants made for patriotic purposes. I understand that we will not be called upon this year for a grant to the Patriotic Fund and I hope that the Provincial Government will relieve the municipalities of the Provincial War Tax. Even without these demands it will be necessary for us to use caution and good judgment, in the expenditures in order to conserve the financial resources of the city. There are large demands ahead, such as the building of the Hunter Street bridge and the construction of the Sewage Disposal Works, with perhaps more school accommodation, and we must be very careful in taking any action that will increase the permanent charges upon the City Treasury. I hope that the other bodies which are entrusted with the expending of public funds, and for whom we have to raise the money they require, will also recognize the circumstances that call for economy and will make their demands as light as possible.

HARMONY IS RECOMMENDED

In appointing the Chairmen of Committees and the members of Committees we should have in view only one object, and that is the civic service, and personal preferences and other considerations should entirely give way to that. I would ask the Chairmen when appointed and the members of committees to take their work seriously and not to consider that their appointments to these positions are to any degree nominal. We have important work to do, and it will be only through each member of the Council doing his part thoroughly and earnestly that the work will be properly and efficiently done.

In order to do good work we must, like a team, pull together. Differences of opinion as to the best course to pursue will no doubt arise at times, but when we are all aiming at the same object we can respect opinions that do not agree with ours and by friendly discussion endeavor to arrive at a decision that will be the best in the interest of the city. In this way, and bearing in mind that we have been chosen by the people to transact their business for this year, let us keep our duty in view and while we will have responsible duties to perform and hard work to do, we will at the end of the year be able to look back upon our association together and our work accomplished with pleasure and with gratification.

ing allowance, then in this case the lodging allowance will be cancelled and the gratuity will include separation allowance as well as pay, etc.,

Having been cashiered, dismissed by sentence of court-martial, sentenced to penal servitude for two years or more, or discharged for misconduct disentitled any person to the gratuity. Any person who at his own request or at the request of his parents has been discharged because he was under age is also not entitled, however, in this case the Paymaster General or the Minister of Militia and defence may determine otherwise. Any over payment in pay, etc., may be deducted from the gratuity.

If any officer or man rejoins again (such as the Siberian Force) then his gratuity will be increased and he can also add together the time of service in both cases.

No officer or man who is receiving or entitled to receive a gratuity from the Imperial Forces shall obtain the Canadian gratuity but if the Imperial gratuity is less than the Canadian gratuity, and he is entitled to the latter gratuity also then he can claim the difference. Any officer or man receiving pay and allowances from the Department of Soldiers Re-Establishment, is bound to submit to the treatment that the Department directs and will not receive the gratuity till such pay has ceased.

If any officer or man dies before he and his wife or dependent mother, etc., have received any or the whole of the gratuity, and such wife, dependent mother, etc., survive him, then the whole of the gratuity or such part thereof that remains unpaid will be paid to the person in receipt of such separation allowance. If the man has no dependents who were receiving or entitled to receive separation allowance, or if they die before him, then if he dies before the whole gratuity is paid the same lapses and does not become payable.

The gratuity is payable as follows:—

One month's pay and allowance on the day of the man's discharge, and the remainder (if any) in subsequent monthly payments.

Where any officer or man omitted to make proper provision for his wife and children, or where the circumstances require it, the Paymaster General, or the Minister of Militia and Defence may direct the gratuity to be applied for the provision of such wife and children.

This Order-in-Council applies to Nursing Sisters as well as officers and men.

The Order-in-Council appears inconsistent in two respects.

First, the order recites that "a gratuity similar to that which is paid to the officers, warrant officers and men of the naval and land forces of Canada in place of post discharge pay."

However the regulations clearly show that war service, gratuity only applies to those who were on the strength of the naval or land forces of Canada on active service on or after the 11th of November, 1918, and to make the regulations consistent with the recital they should apply to every officer and man who has received, or is entitled to receive, post discharge pay.

Secondly, the recital divides the whole Canadian Forces into two Divisions only namely: Naval Forces and Land Forces, while the schedule to the Order-in-council not only refers to the naval forces, but divides the land forces into the Canadian Expeditionary Force, and land forces proper, and distinguishes between them. From the above it is clearly shown that the gratuity is only payable to those officers and men who were discharged on and after the 11th day of November, 1918, with one and only one exception, viz.

Any officer or man who was discharged before this date who has served "at the Front in any actual theatre of war" (which does not include service in Canada, United States, British Isles, Saint Lucia, Hermuda, or on the high seas) then this officer or man will be paid gratuity, less the amount he already has received for post discharge pay, [illegible] tion.

Maojr-Gen. G. M. Cory, distinguished Toronto soldier, at a civic luncheon given in his honor, stated that an army of occupation in the East would be necessary for some time.

FINDING FARMS FOR SOLDIERS

ONTARIO TO GIVE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT POWER TO EXPROPRIATE.

Ontario is not giving up uncultivated land to the Federal Government absolutely, but the Ontario Government is co-operating with the Federal Government in the placing of the soldiers on the land.

The Federal Government has more money at its disposal to help out soldiers who wish to settle on the land when they return, and the Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines, who has been studying the matter for some time, thinks this will prevent overlapping and competition.

Legislation will be passed at the coming session of the House which will give the Federal Government power to expropriate the land, but it is not the intention of the Government to give the soldiers' Settlement Board title to the Crown lands. They will be permitted to take a lien given to the soldiers as security for the loan advanced.

For some time now the Government has been carrying on a soldiers' settlement scheme at Kapuskasing, which has worked out satisfactorily, but the amount of money that Ontario would loan is much smaller than the Federal Government is willing to loan to the men. Hence this new arrangement, but should the soldier give up the land, it comes back again to the Ontario Government.

ALIENS LEAVING FOR HOMELANDS

EMIGRATION OF OVER FIVE THOUSAND RELIEVES LABOR SITUATION.

Ottawa, Jan. 13.—The labor situation is being much relieved by the emigration of foreigners from Canada. According to reports made to Ottawa, in the Toronto and Hamilton district alone, since Nov. 11, over 5,000 laborers have left for continental Europe, mostly via New York. The majority of these were Italians, Serbians, Bulgarians, Rumanians and Austrians. Most of these men have been working in munition factories during the past three years and have saved sums which will make them independent in their native lands.

This emigration has helped greatly to relieve the unskilled labor market. Reports received by the Department of Labor show that outside of several of the larger cities the situation is not serious and munition workers as well as soldiers are being absorbed faster than was anticipated.

It was expected there would be a certain amount of unemployment but Canada is passing from a war to a peace basis with less disturbance than was anticipated. The labor situation is probably the worst in Montreal. In Toronto there are reported to be in the neighborhood of eight thousand unemployed, most of them machinists and men formerly engaged in muntion factories. The Labor Department is rapidly organizing its Dominion-wide system of employment agencies and there will soon be a chain of bureaus from Halifax to Victoria. Mr. Bryce Stewart, of the Labor Department has been appointed director of the work. He is leaving in a few days for Winnipeg to open a clearing house in that city, and to consult with the Western Provinces in regard to the organization. Mr. Thomas Molloy, of the Labor Department of the Saskatchewan Government, has been loaned to the Dominion and is organizing the four Western Provinces.

Is Still Holding Meetings At Tweed

Evangelist H. D. Kennedy of this city opened a month's campaign at Tweed, Ont., two weeks ago. From the first much interest was shown and the attendance increased nightly. Last Friday night the crowd was unusually large and over twenty five persons profession conversion in that meeting.

On Tuesday night of the second week the break came and on Wednesday an all day prayer meeting was held and the result of the meetings till the end of the second week was that over seventy persons sought the Lord and confessed Christ publicly.

Mr. Kennedy will continue in Tweed two weeks yet.

Dominion and Ontario plans for soldiers' land settlement are to be merged, and the Dominion Government will have power to take uncultivated lands for soldiers.

Hon. "Bob" Rogers stated in an interview that Canadian manufacturers should be able, if they get raw materia on the same terms, to compete with Americans in making agricultural implements.

Is Life Insurance Safe?

How often we hear the question, "Would Life Insurance Companies stand the extra strain of a great epidemic?"

This question is now answered by experience. We have passed through the greatest war in history, and on its heels and overlapping it came the most malignant epidemic ever experienced on this Continent, one that claimed more victims in two months from the people of Canada and the United States than the war did in four and one-third years.

The fact that the surplus of every one of the old Established Companies of Canada has not only been maintained but increased, answers the above question most eloquently, and proves that Life Insurance is not only safe, but IMPREGNABLE.

Experience proves that it is as safe as a Victory Bond, and, in the event of death, infinitely better.

THE SUN LIFE OF CANADA has distributed more to compensate for the terrible wastage of the recent War and Epidemic than any other Company in Canada.

Is it not, then, a wise place in which to carry your Insufance?

ALL CANADIAN TROOPS TO BE HOME BY AUGUST 1ST

When Navigation Opens Men Will Be Returned at Rate of 45,000 a Month.

Ottawa, Jan. 13.—It is stated in militia circles here that the end of August next will see the return to Canada of the last units of the military forces of Canada now serving overseas in Europe.

For the present there will be no speeding up in the return of troops beyond the numbers already arranged for, 20,000 in January, increasing to 30,000 in February, but in the spring and summer months the number returning to Canada will rise to 45,000 monthly.

Several factors enter into the considerations governing the return of these troops to Canada, such as transportation afloat and ashore, the undesirability of returning too many men during the winter months, and the difficulties of securing the smoth and expeditious return to civil occupations of these men without over-taxing the limits of the organizations arranged for that latter purpose.

Problems of Transport

During the winter it is possible to land troops only at two Canadian ports, Halifax and St. John, and at the latter port it is impossible to berth ships of the largest tonnage. From each port the railroad lines have a limited capacity and must provide for the regular services, passenger and freight, in addition to the additional tax on the services by the extra troop trains.

Safety a Big Factor

Furthermore, there is the question of facilities and motive power facilities which will be increased at the end of the current month, and the most important one of the factor of safety. These lines cannot be crowded beyond a certain point and it is not intended to take unnecessary risks. In the matter of equipment, it must be remembered that the great majority of the returning soldiers must be provided with pro-

HOSPITAL SHIP WAS ALL RIGHT

NOTHING BUT PRAISE IS HEARD OF TRANSPORT ARAGUAYA.

Halifax, Jan. 10. That the hospital ship Araguaya was a good ship, was endorsed by all who your correspondent enquired from regarding the conditions while the steamer was coming across the Atlantic. They all praised the food and the sleeping quarters and spoke highly of the conduct of the ship officers toward them as there was not one complaint. There appeared to be plenty of good food, which greatly pleased the men.

On account of encountering heavy weather during the first days at sea the ship took eleven days to reach port, but even this did not cause the men to complain, as they knew the delay could not be helped. It required four trains to convey the men to their homes. The first one left at noon for 102 mental cases for Cobourg, Ont.; the second at 4.30 o'clock for Toronto; the third shortly after seven, with all the western men, and the fourth shortly before midnight with the men for Ottawa, Kingston, London, Montreal and Quebec.

The work of disembarkation was carried out without a hitch. As all documents are made out here when a hospital ship arrives, the work cannot be done as quickly as when a transport docks. There are scores of men on crutches or only an arm, and they have to be handled slowly and easily. Colonel Crain, of the clearing depot, and the embarkation staff did good work in getting the men away so soon.

ROBBED BABY'S BANK.

Burglars Overlook Nothing in Home at Beaverton.

During the absence of Mr. Joseph McPhee, of Beaverton, in Victoria Road, thieves entered his house and stole a suit of clothes, a pair of lined gauntlets and his overcoat and $2 from the baby's bank, as well as ransacking the house and turning things upside down and eating all the eatables they could find, such as butter, fruit and fruit cake. Entrance was gained from the woodshed, where two panes were broken and the back door forced.

Crippled Soldier Praises S. A. Huts

RECEIVED NOTHING BUT KINDNESS FROM OFFICERS IN FRANCE.

A strong letter of endorsation of the Salvation Army's work at the front was written by a patient in the Davisville (Toronto) Military Hospital to the Red Shield Drive Committee. The man lost one of his limbs but was fortunate enough to get back to his own country. His letter is in part as follows:

"I would like to express my thanks for the good I have received at the hands of the Salvation Army Captain and Staff attached to some of the huts overseas. I have always found them generous and more than willing to help the soldiers, and in this way make the boys feel at home and comfortable.

"When on duty and serving my time with the 3rd Canadian Training Depot in England, I had the pleasure of visiting the Salvation Army Huts at West Sandling, and would spend many hours there. I have had many meals there and found them as good as any that I could get at home in Canada. The price charged was only 25c, or one shilling. The meal usually consisted of good ham and eggs, potatoes, bread and butter, and an excellent cup of coffee. Right here I will state that it was impossible to get the same kind of meal anywhere else for less than 40c. This was in 1916. I was also given a hearty send-off by the members of the staff attached to this hut, when leaving for France. Also received a few little things, such as a memo book and pencils, from them, which came in very useful later on when I was in France.

"Another thing I will mention is that I was never turned away from the huts hungry if I did not have the money to pay for the food, but they always allowed me to pay up later on when I did have the money. This fact made the boys feel at home, even though they were thousands of miles away from their Canadian homes. I feel that I owe this to the Salvation Army in letting them know the good they are doing for the boys overseas, but will ask you not to publish my name and number."

Embargo Placed On All Exports

TRADE TIED UP ON ACCOUNT OF BLOCKADE IN EUROPE

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Montreal, Jan. 13.—Arresting of almost the entire overseas export shipments of Canada has been practically effected by an order from the Canadian Railway War Board recently issued. At least eighty per cent. of this huge trade, amounting to something like a half millions tons per month, will thus be backed up in Canadian warehouses, elevators and mills.

"The embargo has been placed because the British and French ports have at present more traffic than they can handle. The British Ministry of Shipping has advised us that the shipments cannot be accepted," says the Board.

The length of time the embargo will remain in force depends on how soon the European ports are cleared up.

REPUBLICANS FOR EQUAL SUFFRAGE

FAVOR CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT GIVING ALL AMERICAN WOMEN VOTE.

Chicago, Jan. 11.—Declaring for universal female suffrage by constitutional amendment and applauding speeches condemning Socialism, Bolshevism and government ownership the Republican national congress today conferred on Chairman Will H. Hays, who opened the meeting, what was to be taken to be full power to conduct affairs of the party in its efforts to defeat the Democrats at the next national election.

Resolutions laudatory of Theodore Roosevelt were adopted, as introduced by John D. King, of Connecticut, and plans were made at the suggestion of Chairman Hays to erect a permanent monument to the lecedent by popular subscription.

The Democratic national administration was denounced by committeemen for what was termed its tendency to Socialism and for placing control of the government departments in the hands of the minority of the south, while the majority of the north paid ninety per cent of the taxes, as worded by Governor Beeckman of Rhode Island.

It was declared by Chairman Hays and others that it was too early to consider a candidate for president, but many names were mentioned in the informal talk of committeemen, while a separate meeting of Illinois Republicans made arrangements to persuade Governor Frank O. Lowden to announce himself as a candidate.

Two women took part in the deliberations as holders of proxies and their assistance was sought in all the doings of the meetings.

Soldiers' Dread Life Without Work

DID NOT FEAR GERMANS BUT TREMBLE AT THAT PROSPECT.

In order that future generations of Canadians may dwell with unrestricted pride on the part taken by the Dominion in the war, the people who have stayed at home in comfort and security must deal squarely and generously with the fighting men who have endured hardships and faced death at the front. If impressionable Canadian youth of the future have not before them the record of this fair dealing, as well as the inspiration of the soldiers' heroism and their victories, the great moral and patriotic force of Canada's achievements in the war will be weakened.

With this simple truth looking us in the face, it is reassuring to find that many employers are publicly stating their willingness to take back returned men who left their employ to fight for the cause of human freedom. A Toronto paper some days ago proposed to publish the names of employers of labor in Ontario who would make such a declaration. The honor roll of names of commercial and industrial firms who have thus declared themselves already takes up nearly two columns of space in that newspaper, and many concerns are daily adding their names to the shining roll. In the field covered by that paper the public eye is focussed on the list, and the business house that fails to enroll itself seems likely to become less popular if it has not taken other means of making the same honorable announcment.

Other newspapers in other cities and provinces might well follow that example. When the public nerves are strung up as they are now, the tranquillizing effect of such a movement is just what is needed. Such a spirit is infectious. In the present state of public emotion it seems more than likely that the movement may spread throughout the Dominion until every Canadian business institution and employer is committed to this fair and just course. The names of leading firms on such a roll of business honor have a compelling appeal to others and a magical influence on the whole community. The initiative of the Toronto paper may be the means of rousing the conscience of the whole nation.

The returning soldier feels more dread of a jobless civil life than he ever knew fear of the enemy. To many thousands of soldiers such a list as printed will bring relief of mind and release from worry. If every employer of labor in the Dominion would sign such an obligation most of the soldiers would find jobs waiting for them when they return. Then the memories of the magnificent achievements of the Canadians in France could be cherished without the impairing thought that while our gallant fighting men were gaining victories in Europe they were losing their jobs in Canada.

At the annual meeting of the flour and grain section of the Toronto Board of Trade the following officers were elected: Chairman, J. T. Melady; vice-chairman, A. E. McQuaig; secretary-treasurer, F. D. Tolchard; acting secretary-treasurer, L. R. Crawshaw.

SAGE TEA DANDY TO DARKEN HAIR

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Brink Back Color and Lustre To Hair

You can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost overnight if you'll get a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" at any drug store. Millions of bottles of this famous old Sage Tea Recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, are sold annually, says a well known druggist here, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied.

Those whose hair is turning gray or becoming faded have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful.

This is the age of youth. Gray-haired, unattractive folks aren't wanted around, so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound to-night and you'll be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days.

LINDSAY EXHIBITION SATISFIED WITH AWARDS AT POULTRY SHOW.

(Lindsay Warder.)

Lindsay exhibitors at Peterborough Poultry Show returned home this morning bringing with them several cups. The five local exhibitors carried off most of the prizes in the respective classes in which they showed. Mr. Leo. Morrow showed fifteen birds and won fourteen prizes in the Buff and Black Wyandotte classes; Harry Norton, with three White Wyandottes, won two firsts and a second and annexed two silver cups. Jim Mackey's three Leghorns won two firsts and a second. Bert Letts made a clean sweep with seventeen White Rocks. Harry Daniels, with Wyandottes and Rhode Island Reds, won about everything in sight, including the cup. He made several sales. Mr. Capstick, of Bobcaygeon, was also a big winner.

The boys are all justly proud of their success, particularly in view of the fact that they were shown in a very strong field. They speak highly of the treatment they received from the management of the Peterborough Show, and certainly they have no complaints to make about the judging.

Order-In-Council Has Been Amended

Ottawa, Jan. 13.—The order passed on September 25th, 1918, respecting unlawful associations and publications, has been amended by requiring the assent to or the approval of any prosecution under the regulations by the Attorney-General of the Province in which the offense is alleged to have been committed, and by giving the accused the right to elect whether he shall be tried by a Magistrate or a jury. The consent of the Attorney-General and the right of trial by jury should provide against any unwarranted prosecutions for technical violation of the order, where there does not appear to be substantial grounds for prosecution. The Criminal Code contains provisions against sedition, under which prosecutions may also be instituted. The question is now before the Department of Justice as to what amendments, if any, should be made to the code to render unnecessary the continuance of the existing order in council. In the meantime it is considered to be in the public interests that the order as amended, should be continued.

Whetstone in Tree Trunk.

While sawing down a large poplar tree on the Weimar farm two sons of Joseph Weimar found their saw would not penetrate. They began a little higher, and after the tree was down they discovered a whetstone in the heart of the trunk. It is supposed that many years ago, when the tree was a sapling, lumbermen working in the fields laid the stone there and forgot to take it away, and the tree grew around it.—Marietta (Pa.) Correspondence, Philadelphia Record.

Cursed Your Conduct.

The worst kind of unhappiness, as well as the greatest amount of it, comes from our conduct to each other. If our conduct, therefore, were under the control of kindness, it would be nearly the opposite of what it is, and so the state of the world would be almost reversed. We are for the most part unhappy because the world is an unkind world. But the world is only unkind for the lack of kindness in the individuals who compose it.—Frederick William Faber.

New Vegetable Butter.

Shea butter, the reddish oil of the West African shea tree (Butyrospermum Parkii), is one of several vegetable butters that are now of unusual interest to makers of margarine, chocolate, candles and soap. The sweet and wholesome pulp of the nut is much prized by the natives, and is said to be nearly two-thirds butter. Great Britain controls the source of supply.

Have Varying Terms.

Judges of the state supreme courts are chosen for a fixed term of years, varying from two in Vermont to 21 in Pennsylvania. Eighteen states have a term of six years, seven states of eight years, five states of 12 years, one of fourteen years and one of fifteen. Indiana has six years. In all the states they are eligible for re-election.

Decimating.

Originally, decimation was a military punishment of the Romans, who dealt with large bodies of rebels, prisoners or mutinous soldiers by executing one man in ten. In popular use today, decimation means the destruction of a large proportion of anything; as, "the epidemic has decimated the population," or "the Prussian guards were decimated at Verdun."

A Bit Twisted.

Peru and Chile Have Quarrel

PATRONS of a boxing meet expect the last bout on the card to be the most important of the evening; they would not sit to see a curtain-raiser at the time set for the fall of the curtain. This Anglo-Saxon custom must have been overlooked by Peru and Chile when, a few weeks ago, they decided to go to war. They have since resolved to arbitrate their differences, when they found that the world at large was prepared to take just as much interest in their arbitration as in their war. A few years ago the prospect of a war between these powers would have sent newspaper correspondents scurrying from all quarters of the earth. To-day the war correspondents who have not gone to Paris to attend the Peace Conference are looking up railroad timetables in preparation for lecturing tours. Newspapers would have let the office boys report the conflict in South America. It would have been an ironical comment upon civilization if, just at the end of the "war to end war," when the powers were about to gather together to form a League of Nations to keep the peace two lesser countries should have appealed to the sword.

There have been various explanations of the issue between the two countries, and it is generally supposed to be a boundary dispute, but in reality it is a quarrel over an immensely rich tract of country, which for many years has been one of the chief sources of revenue to Chile. They fought over it once before and Chile won. That Chile would not have won again had the matter been left to arms it is difficult to believe. Between the two countries there stretches the immense waterless waste of Atacama and Tarapaca, which was for a long time supposed to be absolutely worthless since no rain falls there and nothing grows. But in the latter half of the nineteenth century it was discovered that in this waste were practically unlimited supplies of nitrate of soda, and since this fertilizer was in great demand in Europe, this desert suddenly became immensely valuable.

The Province of Tarapaca belonged to Peru at this time, Atacama to Chile, while adjoining were Arica and Tacna owned by Bolivia. All were in the heart of the nitrate deposits, the importance of which Chile was the first to discover. Chile then made a bargain with Bolivia whereby for a consideration of $10,000 she secured the right to the nitrate in the Bolivian territory, thus establishing a practical monopoly of an industry that was to attain gigantic proportions, with the exception of the nitrate that Peru could glean from her own province of Tarapaca. Peru industriously set to work, but Chile had the lead, and was never overtaken. It appears that one of the strange peculiarities of Peruvian nature is a jealousy of more thriving and prosperous neighbors, and she began to hope that Chile would choke. Bolivia also witnessed Chile's prosperity with ill-concealed feelings of envy, and finally the two entered into a defensive alliance. It is supposed that it was at the suggestion of Peru that Bolivia imposed a tax on all the nitrate that was exported from Tacna and Arica. This brought a fierce protest from Chile.

Bolivia disregarded the protest and attempted to collect the tax, whereupon Chile seized the port of Antofogasta—so now you see what the word means. This inevitably led to a declaration of war by Bolivia in 1879. Peru offered to act as mediator, but Chile suspecting that she would favor her partner in true Peruvian fashion refused her offices. It was then Peru's turn to grow suspicious, for she feared that victorious Chile might attempt to seize her own nitrate province of Tarapaca. So Peru declared war, and arrived just in time to take Bolivia's place, for the latter, with no navy and a small army, was speedily put out of action by her more powerful antagonist. Chile was, indeed, well prepared to fight. Her navy was made up of ironclads, then modern, and her troops were Krupp-armed and well trained.

Peru had three ships of war, which fought gallantly against great odds. Her army was more numerous and succeeded in continuing the war for five years, at the end of which time Peru had to acknowledge herself beaten. Chile dictated the terms of peace, and annexed forever the Province of Tarapaca. The Bolivian provinces of Arica and Tacna were to be held by her for ten years, at the end of which time there was to be a plebiscite, the inhabitants of the provinces to determine what nation they wished to belong to. The lucky nation was to recompense the loser to the extent of $10,000,000. At the end of the ten years Chile offered to hold the plebiscite, but Peru refused, and has continued to refuse with each repetition of the offer, alleging that the conditions of the proposed referendum were unfair. The point is that Chile wants to confine the voters to the upper, educated or white classes, whatever they may be called, who are almost all Chileans. They are a minority, however, the masses of the population being made up of illiterate Indians, who are Peruvians. If everybody votes the province will probably go to Peru, for Bolivia has been lost in the shuffle. If it is a hand-picked electorate the province will remain with Chile. This is the problem that remains to be solved, but fortunately not by war.

Hon. Walter H. Long Is a Typical English Squire In the Coalition Cabinet

IT has been said that Walter Long is sure of a seat in any Coalition Cabinet or any Unionist Cabinet for ten years to come. It is not that Walter Long is brilliant. It is rather because he is not. Exactly because he is so much the average educated Englishman with no pretension to intellectual distinction that he is an embodiment of all that is traditionally English that he is so popular in the House. Even those who bitterly oppose the political faith he subscribes to like him personally.

Walter Hume Long is the English Tory squire par example. He owns some 15,000 acres of land, is a famous rider to the hunt and a noted cricketer, possesses the robust health and bluff honesty of one who lives much in the open air, and is idolized by his tenants and listened to with respect in the Commons be his speeches ever so dull.

He comes of an ancient and aristocratic family, and he married a wife who comes of an ancient and aristocratic family. He was educated at Harrow and Oxford, and his family being wealthy as well as ancient and aristocratic, he did not have to bother about earning his living. He simply went in for the glorious open air life of the country gentleman, stuck religiously to the morning tub habit of his ancestors, developed a ruddy countenance and an honest, straightforward mind, and believed in the King and the Constitution, the ability of the ruling classes to govern, and the authenticity of the thirty-nine articles with all his might.

HON. WALTER LONG.

He is now 63, and he has been 38 years in Parliament. He took to politics as one of the duties of a leisured Englishman, and he has taken his own native common sense into affairs of state without making any pretensions of being a statesman. Nevertheless, for the past fourteen years, roughly speaking, he has held Cabinet office of one kind or another. In 1886 he was Parliamentary Secretary to Local Government Board. From 1895 to 1900 he was President of the Board of Agriculture. From 1900 to 1905 he was President of the Local Government Board. Then came a period as Chief Secretary for Ireland.

When the Coalition Cabinet was formed in 1915 we find him back in his old office of President of the Local Government Board. As such he was given credit for acting as right hand man to Mr. Bonar Law in piloting the conscription bill through Parliament.

In 1916 he became Secretary of State for the Colonies, which position he still holds.

Despite the personal popularity, Walter Long has not always had an easy time getting elected. He has been member for no less than six different constituencies from Wiltshire divisions to the Strand division of London. But he has always got elected. He knows how to make himself solid with the ordinary man, and to do it without affectation. The secret is simply to be himself. For his mind does not dwell on the heights, like Mr. Balfour's, nor does it declare itself in the legal lucidity of Mr. Asquith's, nor has he anything of the natural aloofness of Mr. McKenna. He appeals to the common man because his interests are much the same as the common man's, and his mind moves with the same directness and lack of subtlety.

There is a story told which reveals very well the affection with which his tenants regard him. It concerns the expression of regret by an old man on his estate of Rood Ashton that "Master Walter 'ad given up huntin' and gone in for politics." He still does a deal of hunting, but he has given the serious attention to politics that befits a descendant of the great English families.

Some years ago Walter Long visited Canada and delivered a number of addresses before Canadian clubs. On his return to England he roused some hostility in certain quarters in Canada by giving out an interview in which he declared that Canada looked up to Chamberlain as the man who had made the British Empire a reality for Canadians, and vouched for certain other views of Canadians on Home Rule, Imperial defence and votes for women that were not altogether an accurate reflection of Canadian sentiment as a whole. But other travellers have since [illegible] Canada has forgiven any slight misrepresentation, which, if it existed, time has long since set right.

Work Savers.

Use plenty of newspapers about the kitchen, spreading them on the floor when anything is likely to spatter. It is easier to gather them up than to clean up. If there is a kitchen range not in use in the summer time it is well to burn these papers every few days to prevent dampness and rust. If the kitchen has but a gas range, then a good-sized waste basket should be kept and the papers disposed of in whatever way is best.

Women Dive for Shells in Japan.

The Japanese industry of making buttons, scarfpins, shirt studs and links and the like from sea shells brought from the Indian ocean, the Philippines and the South Sea islands has made mighty strides these last few years. Millions of the shells are gathered from the ocean bottom by women divers, who work without the aid of any diving apparatus whatever.—From Gas Logic.

Ancestral Brains.

Some folks live on the glory of their ancestors. They tell of the great things they did and the greater things they think they did. Then when they get the ear of some one especially sympathetic and credulous, there is an eruption of boast of greatness that might have been. These poor creatures live in the past. It's no wonder they do so little in the present.

Secrets of the Salmon.

A single scale from a salmon will tell you its owner's age, and whether his pickings have been slim or the opposite. When viewed through a microscope, the scale will reveal tiny lines, which have developed at the rate of 16 a year. Lines crowded close prove that the salmon has been living high. Lines widely spread indicate a scant diet.

Facts About the Bloodhound.

Bloodhounds were first known as sleuthhounds owing to their ability to track the deer, wild boar or the wolf. When the wounded game broke away and was lost, these good-nosed dogs were used in trailing the quarry by the blood trail, and hence they were finally called bloodhounds.

Foresight.

An irascible and not very judicial person had been listening to a lengthy argument on whether Ireland should or should not have home rule. Finally he could contain himself no longer and burst out: "I wish they'd give 'em home rule and then give me the motion picture rights."—Outlook.

Prevents Windows Sticking.

To make a sliding screen or a window sash move easily, rub a paraffin candle along the edge which is likely to bind. This is an effective lubricant that lasts a long time and is easily replenished. Dry soap may be used in this way.

More Worthy of Respect.

No Experience.

A kindergarten teacher was telling the children in her department about sparrows; concerning their ways and habits. Among other things she said: "The sparrows eat up the worms. Now children, which would you rather have, worms or sparrows?" "Kye never had sparrows," piped up a tiny boy near the front.

Quarter of Billion for Hats.

It has been estimated by the millinery chamber of commerce that the expenditure for women's headgear in the United States is more than $250,000,000 a year. This would average something over $5 per capita for women and girls of all ages.

Complete Supply.

BRINGING UP FATHER — BY GEORGE McMANUS

RARE TO SEE MORE THAN ONE HOME RUN IN INNING

But There Have Been as many as Three Made in One Canto in Big League Games

Something that hasn't been done on the major league circuits for quite a while is for three batsmen to propel home runs in one and the same innnig. The last time an incident like this cropped up in fast company was on August 3, 1911, in a game between the Superbas and the Cubs and then one of the homers was of the accidental kind, made so by a lumber pile.

Nowadays it is quite a trick for two batsmen to make successive homers in the same canto. Last season the feat was turned three times—twice in the American (by the same players) and once in the National.

Clarence Walker and George Burns of the Machmen, batting in order in the first inning on May 10 against Urhan Charles Faber of the White Sox, smote four-baggers and these same eminent wielders of the big stick repeated the performances 19 days later in the fourth frame against Joseph Ignatius Finnerans of the Yankees in the first game the former Philadelpha and Tiger started for his third major league boss, and the White Elephants would have been blanked each time if it had not been for the home run output of Tillie and George.

Martin Kavanagh and Miguel Gonzales of the Cardinals were able because of the ruffled feelings of the Superbas, to stage a Walker-Burns stunt in the thirteenth inning of the game of July 4, when Jack Coombs was pitching. When this chapter started each club possessed one run. The Cards filled the bases on Coombs and Kavanagh emptied them with a blow that Umpire Rigler said was fair and that the Brooklyn players declared was foul. Rigler, for his verdict, got a punch in the back of the head from an excited bug and the bug was pinched by a special officer. It was after this that Gonzales contributed his hoder, the Superbas still being peved and making slight effort to prevent the hit from being good for all four hassocks.

Home Run Biffers Number 107.

One hundred and seven big leagues manufactured homers in 1918, the Cardinals having 11 uen in this class; Cubs and Yankees, nine; Reds and Braves, eight; Giants, Pirates and Athletics, six; Indians, Tigers and Red Sox, five; Browns and Nationals, four.

As related, one has to hark back to August 3, 1911, to find an instance of rhere one inning contained three home runs. Eddie Zimmerman and Ross Erwin then touched Lurid Lew Richie of the Cubs for four-baggers and Zach Wheat pried one out of Fred Toney: Zim's blow was a freak, being an ordinary double back of first base. The ball hit a lumber pile, composed of temporary seats stacked up against the grandstand and hid itself, neither Victor Saler nor Frank Schulte being able to find it. "Lost ball" is of frequent occurrence ni the tall grass circuits, but it s more or less a novelty in a major league orchard.

Zimmerman, Erwin and Wheat were not batting in sequence when they obtained their three home runs and neither were Howard Camnitz, Vin Campbell and Hans Wagner of the Pirates when they executed a feat of this kind in a game with the Phillies on August 22, 1910.

Neither were Ed. Delahantry, Bill Coughlin and George Carey of the Senators on June 2, 1902, when they made Clarke Griffith, then with the White Sox, hit the high spots in the third inning. After Wyatt Arnold Lee, instead of homering doubled, the Old Fox took himself out of the box.

However, 28 days later, three members of the Cleveland team—Napoleon Lajoie, Charley Hickman and Bill Bradley—came up, one after the other, in a game in St. Louis, and pushed the product of the Reach factories out of the playing field and into the bleachers for hits good for four bases.

Jack Harper the Victim.

The inning was the sixth, the Naps won the game by a score of 17 to 8, and the pitcher who was beaten up was Jack Harper. All the home runs wound up their careers in the left field bleachers, the hits of Hickman and Bradley being made on the first ball pitched.

The first National league contest historians know of in which three players blew themselves to home hons in one inning took place at Recreation par, Detroit, on June 12, 1886, the home team winning over Henry V. Lucas' costly and ill-fated St. Louis Maroons, 14 to 7. Charles Sweeney, strikeout king, started to pitch this game for the Missourians and desiste dafter Rowe had made his second home run, Al Bauer succeeding him.

Sam Crane, prominent baseball writer now, got a circuit clout off Sweeney in the second inning and in the third Dan Brouthers, Sam Thompson and Jack Rowe followed sut. Nod Hanlon battling after the long time Detroit and Philadelphia favorite and expiring weakly to the infield. Rowe homered again in the fifth and in the seventh Thompson got his second four-bagger. Al Buer beng in charge of the St. Louis pitching department at the time.

On May 10, 1894, three St. Louis National league players are said to have made successive home runs in the sixth inning against Cincinnati and the next year, on June 14, three more St. Louis players, not batting in order, are reputed to have hit for the circuit in the seventh inning against Brooklyn.

It is a postive certainty, though, that the last time on inning of a major game contained three home runs was on August 3, 1911.

John A. Gentry, 2.00 1-2, sole survivor of the greatest galaxy of pacers the turf has ever seen, celebrated his thirtieth birthday recently by going a mile in harness over the old battle ground at Cumberland Park, Nashville, Tenn., driven by his veteran admirer, Reginald Weston, of New York. Gentry is owned by the estate of E. H. Harriman, and he is still II stock among the assets. Few horses ever attained his age with so little appearance of having passed the prime of life. More than twenty two years have passed since the memorable race at old Fleetwood Park, in which the handsome gelding defeated Robert J., 2.01 3-4; Frank Agan, 2.03 3-4 and Star Jolinted, 1.59 1-4, in the fastest three heats then on record, yet his back is as straight, his eye as brilliant and his muscles as unshrunken as in '96.

Legislature May Open Feb. 18th

Toronto, Jan. 13. There is much speculation at Queen's Park these days as to when the Legislature will open. Thus far it is understood that the Government has not formally discussed the matter. It seem altogether probable, however, that the opening will be fixed for Tuesday, February 18.

The opening was earlier than that last year, the Legislature opening on February 5. Easter is later this year, however, and as the Government tries to gauge the legislative program so as to wind up the ousiness before the holiday, it is only natural that the opening date should be late. It is customary to open on a Tuesday, and this practice will not be departed from this year.

Penniless Old Man Dumped Into Canada

Windsor, Jan. 13.—Penniless and friendless Wellington Weller, eighty years of age, resident in the United States for more than fifty years, was "dumped" into Windsor by American immigration officials because, as alleged, it recently was discovered that Weller is not a citizen of the United States.

According to the man's story, as he told to the Windsor police, he was born at Belleville, Ont., going to Duluth, where he was employed in the lumber woods. He voted in seven Presedential elections, he said, so enjoying other citizenship privileges.

There were large congregations out, both morning and evening, the seating capacity of the church being taxed to capacity last night, many members of other congregations in the city being present.

The musical program, under the direction of Mr. George H. King, was as usual of a high order. Mr. King gave an organ recital from 6.30 until the opening of the evening service. The large choir were assisted by Capt. and Mrs. Maurice Park, always favorites in local musical circles who will be welcomed back to the city by a host of friends.

For the past forty-seven years Trinity congregation, by whatever name known, has had a successful career, but the outlook never appeared quite so hopeful as at present.

PLENTY OF STAGE ROOM AT GRAND

TO PRODUCE "THE WANDERER", WHICH IS THE ATTRACTION TO-NIGHT.

Some people were skeptical as to the ability of the management of the Grand Opera House to stage the mammoth production, "The Wanderer," which will be here for the first three nights of this week with a Wednesday matinee. It was thought that a city the size of Peterborough could not take care of an attraction that has taxed the seating accommodation of the biggest theatres in America.

There is no room for doubt. Mr. Phil Kellerworth, the chief stage director, who has been here since Saturday is meeting with no difficulty in making arrangements for the presentation. He says the accommodation for the gigantic spectacle are ample and that the Grand Opera House stage is as large as that of any in Canada with the single exception of a theatre in Toronto. "The Wanderer" will lose nothing in the way of effectiveness when it is presented to a Peterborough audience.

The equipment for the play reached the city this morning and a large force of stage hands has been busy all day in the work of preparation. One part of the equipment is 120 head of sheep that have been quartered in the old Oriental Hotel barn under the special care of Mr. Archie Barbeau, who transfers the property of all theatrical companies between the Opera House and the depots.

FIRST FRICTION IN WAR COUNCIL

(By Associated Press)

Paris, Jan. 13.—The first business before the supreme war council when it reassembled this afternoon was the settlement of the question of representation in the first session of the inter-allied conference. It is still unsettled what nations will be represented or the number of delegates which will be allotted to each. It has developed, however, that China will not be represented by Japan but will have her own delegation. Efforts of the French press to bring to the fore the question of the status of the Entente and American troops in Russia and the advisability of sending such troops into Poland to check the Bolshevik advance, it is understood, have been without success so far. The United States it is said will not consent to accept in principle or as a military policy the task of using American forces in Poland at all of in Russia in larger numbers than already are there.

BID FAREWELL TO MR. AND MRS. BALL

NEIGHBORS PRESENT THEM WITH ADDRESS AND READING TABLE.

Over a hundred friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. E Ball's on Wednesday evening last and surprised them by presenting them with an address and a handsome reading table. Mr. Ball has sold his farm and is retiring. He has purchased a home in Millbrook and has the agency for the Massey-Harris implements and machinery for that district.

Mr. F. E. Wilson presided as chairman. Mr. Bert Sanderson read the address and Mr. S. L. Connell and Mr. D. W. Tulley made the presentation.

Mr Ball made a very suitable reply and on behalf of himself and wife and daughted, thanked their many friends for their unexpected kindness and recalled some of the pleasant memories during the past eleven years residing in their midst.

Rev. I. Craw gave a very instructive address, and on behalf of the community, expressed the regret in loosing such a valued neighbor and resident. A short program of songs, recitations and speeches was given followed by an oyster supper, which made the occasion a very pleasant one.

The Address.

The address read as follows:

Mr. and Mrs. Ball and Miss Thelma:

We, your friends and neighbors, have learned with regret that you are about to leave our community in which you have spent so many years, and to retire from farming. You have been very efficient and progressive in your occupation and have shown to us many examples along the lines of agricultural interests.

The long and faithful service that you have given has been recognized by the public. As citizens, you have given freely in time and thought, not only in the affairs of the township, but also, you have given valued assistance to the work of the church. You have been valued members of Springville Presbyterian Church, which has been a credit to yourselves and a benefit to the community.

Your many personal friendships, gained during the past eleven years with us, we hope will ever remain to you a pleasant memory, as it will to us.

May the friendly relationship ever ex at in the future, as it has in the past, is our fondest wish.

As you leave our midst, your many friends desire that you wil laccept from them these words, and they wish you also to accept this reading table as a small token of our esteem, and with it goes, hearty wishes of long life and happiness in your new duties which lie before you.

Signed by the committee,
S. L. CONNELL,
A. E. SANDERSON,
D. W. TULLY.

EMMET FAUX

man who he could not positively identify as Faux, column an spirits upon the 28th of Dec., 1918, about 7 o'clock in the evening.

Mr. Moncur stated that methylated spirits was prepared by the Government for commercial use and that it was sold through the Department of Inland Revenue. It was not a beverage and was a poison.

The case the Crown sought to establish was that as the License Board analyst stated in his report that the sample of the concoct on which Faux was alleged to have sold Bourgon showed 73.29 per cent. of proof spirits it must be regarded as liquor, and Faux, in selling it, was guilty of a breach of the Ontario Temperance Act.

Mr. Moncur, when asked to explain the report of the analyst, replied that he could do so in the way. If it was admitted that the liquor in the bottle was partly composed of methylated spirits and it smelt to him and the doctors who had testified as if it was then there was none of the columnian spirits he had sold Faux in the mixture. If it was methylated spirits, it was not drinkable; it was a poison and yet the report of the analyst would show a percentage of grain or drinkable alcohol in the sample, Mr. Moncur explained. The report of the analyst stated that the liquid contained 73 29-100 per cent. of proof spirits. Proof is a standard whereby the strength of whiskey is measured—a unit of measurement adopted by distillers and the revenue officers. Proof means proof that pure alcohol has been diluted to half its strength. In other words, and figuring approximately, 60 per cent. proof is thirty per cent. pure ethyl alcohol. Therefore, when the analyses that the police had obtained of the concotion in question stated that there was about 74 per cent. proof spirits present, the inference was that there was only 37½ per cent. pure alcohol in the mixture. There would be about 25 per cent. of water added, which would seem to show that the prisoner had really used methylated spirits for making the liquor.

Magistrate Dumble did not catch this statement of Mr. Moncur's and when Crown Attorney Hatton asked him to repeat it later on in his testimony. His Worship would not listen to it, declaring that it had nothing to do with the case, and that he would go by the report of the analyst who stated that there was 73 29-100 per cent. of proof spirits in the liquid and as the law stated that any beverage over 2½ per cent. alcohol was liquor, he would go by the law.

Mr. J. R. Corkery for the defence, reminded the magistrate that the statutes stated that it was any beverage over 2½ per cent. and not medicines and poisons. Mr. Moncur asserted that drug stores were selling medicines and poisons right along which, according to His Worship's definition, should really be considered whiskey. Magistrate Dumble maintained that any liquor that ever was taken inwardly which showed more than 2½ per cent. alcohol must be considered as liquor and would not listen to Crown Attorney Hatton's request that Mr. Moncur be allowed to explain the figures of the analyst. Mr Hatton became angry and stated that if His Worship would not hear evidence of importance he would not continue with the case.

Mr. Moncur stated that upon the same day that Mr. Fayne had filled a prescription for Faux, he had filled one also for Mrs. Henry Faux, in which the alcohol was to be used for bathing the body to ease rheumatism.

This concluded the evidence of Mr. Moncur and the case was adjourned until tomorrow morning at ten o'clock when Joseph Clancey, drug clerk in the store of Mr. Moncur, will be called for the defence and argument on both sides of the case heard.

The evidence taken today was very voluminous and of a most ambiguous and contradictory nature. The questions which occurred to an auditor are: Is the fluid in the bottle which was responsible for the death of Bourgon, columnian spirits or methlated alcohol or is it grain alcohol? Mr. Moncur sold Faux columnian spirits and both he and the doctors now say that the bottle does not contain columnian spirits, but wood alcohol or methylated spirits. In that case the spirits bought of Mr. Moncur was not used in preparing the mixture which proved so deadly. The outcome of the case will be looked forward to with interest.

PACKERS ARE IN DOUBT.

Reported Cancellation of Bacon Contracts Affects Market.

Toronto, Jan. 14. — That the reported cancellation of Canadian bacon and lard contracts is having its effect upon the Toronto market was evidenced by yesterday's lack of trading except in the case of last week's contract hogs and a few loads which were brought in locally.

From up country points there were in round numbers about 2,500 hogs bought last week, sold at last week's quotations, 20½ fed and watered and 17 f.o.b., but outside of this a few farmers' hogs sold at 16½ off wagons. Drovers and shippers at country points are being advised to hold their hogs until the situation clears. A cable one way or the other would settle the price.

GOVERNMENT PUTS DOWN RADICALS

SPARTACAN FORCES ARE BEING DISARMED IN ALL GERMAN CITIES.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Berlin, Jan. 14.—Order has been completely restored in the cities outside of Berlin where the Spartacans had established themselves, according to reports received here today. Spandau, which has been placed under martial law, is quiet. Fifty-five Bolshevists have been arrested, one of their leaders killed and several wounded. All have been disarmed.

The Spartacans leaders at Hamburg have been arrested by military police who had difficulty in protecting them from the enraged citizens. Situation there, however, is still tense. Spartacan leaders at Dresden, when arrested, admitted that they had intended to forcibly prevent the elections of the National Assembly.

MAY USE FORCE TO SUPPRESS SINN FEINERS IN IRELAND

Dublin Dispatch Says That Nothing Less Is Expected in That City—Success of Unionists in Recent Election Means Coercion for Ireland

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Jan. 14.—An intention to forcibly suppress Sin Fein organization is attributed to the British government in certain quarters in Ireland, according to a Dublin despatch.

The Moderates in Ireland the correspondent says, are speculating anxiously as to what developments may be expected from the meeting of the council, which the Governor-General called Monday night at Dublin castle. The correspondent adds:

Sober-minded, responsible men take a very gloomy view of the situation. It is feared that the government is about to embark on a new campaign of repression which may include forcible suppression of the Sinn Fein, with such results as are to be expected when the government takes up armed conflict with 75 per cent of the population.

The writer traces this fear to the Tory successes in the recent elections in England which, he says, are regarded as having given the "coercionists," a predominating influence in the state and have created the belief that Ulster will be supreme in determining the British treatment of Irish affairs.

Viscount French, the Governor-General, is also credited with an intention of exercising his authority in accordance with military rather than political considerations.

Armistice With Germans Extended

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Jan. 14.—Economic terms approved by yesterday's session of the Supreme War Council to be imposed for the extension of the armistice with Germany, provide that Germany shall hand over to the Allies all her cargo steamers in German and other ports, to enable the Allies to revictual Germany and such adjacent countries as may be decided upon.

The terms also require the restitution of all manufacturing machinery, etc., taken from invaded regions.

The financial clauses concern the gold reserve of th Richsbank and the issue of money by Germany. Guarantees will b erquired regarding any removal of the Reichsbank gold from Berlin in view of the Bolsheviki activities.

The naval conditions demand a strict compliance with the requirements of the original armistice concerning the handing over of submarines, which have not yet been complied with.

No question was raised regarding the occupation of German ports by the Allies, as had been reported. The examination into the question of the Allied intervention in Poland against the Bolsheviki was postponed.

The armistice question thus being settled, Marshal Foch left for Treves, where the German delegates will be received.

Word to this effect has been received by both the Militia and Naval Departments here. The vessel has over two thousand Canadian soldiers on board from all parts of the Dominion. General Bickford, commanding the Canadian Infantry Division in Siberia, is believed to be a passenger.

The accused was found guilty of causing the death of Kathleen E. Thorne at Norquay, Sask., last January, evidence submitted by the Crown showing that he failed to take all necessary precautions for sterilization at the time of confinement of deceased, resulting in her death from peritonitis.

LESS HOURS, MORE WORK

Works commissioner Harris of Toronto stated yesterday that the inauguration of an eight-hour day for civic employes, instead of a nine-hour day, would not prevent the city competing for municipal contracts with contractors even though the latter may work their men nine or ten hours a day. "I am satisfied that the men will do as much work in eight hours as nine," he said.

Crees was a peculiar character and it is thought that he took his own life in a fit of despondency. Dr. Greer, the coroner, has gone to the scene of the fatality, and will investigate the circumstances. The remains were removed to Comstock's undertaking rooms.

Says Ex-Emperor Deserve Death

UNITED STATES SENATORS BELIEVE EXTREME MEASURES ARE WARRANTED.

Washington, Jan. 14.—Speeches advocating postponement of consideration of the League of Nations proposal until after the Peace Conference were made in the Senate by Senators Sterling of South Dakota, Republican, and Myers of Montana, Democrat. Both insisted that problems of the Peace Conference should not be complicated by this plan.

Senator Sterling contended that existing relations between America, Great Britain, France and Italy made a League to enforce peace unnecessary. Senator Myers advocated establishing a restricted League later, without impairing the sovereignty of its members and with the Central Powers barred at least for this generation.

Death for Kaiser.

Death for the former Kaiser, life imprisonment for von Bernstorff and others, Senator Myers said, should be provisions of the final peace treaty. He also argued for repudiation of Germany's war debt and payment of the entire cost of the war by the Germans; for confiscation of the Kaiser's personal fortune and retention by the victors of both the war and merchant marine fleets of Germany.

The British cruiser Kent has hurried to her assistance and the Brooklyn navy is ready to leave if further aid is necessary. The Protesilaus broke her propeller but later reports said that all on board were safe. First reports said the Protesilaus was limping back to this port. It later was reported the steamer might effect temporary repairs and continue to Japan for permanent repairs.

With a total contingent of 900 officers and men the steamer Teesta has arrived here. She had aboard two companies of Canadian infantry and a machine gun unit under the Command of Colonel Swift.

The Prince of Wales, who has been visiting the American area of occupation in Germany, returned yesterday to the British sector.

CANADA WILL HAVE TWO DELEGATES

BASIS OF REPRESENTATION IN CONFERENCE IS AT LAST DECIDED.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Jan. 14.—France, Great Britain, the United States, Italy and Japan will each have five representatives in the Peace congress. This was decided upon yesterday by the Supreme Council engaged in the preliminary work of organizing the peace procedure.

The British dominions it was decided, will be represented apart from Great Britain. Canada, Australia, South Africa and India will have two representatives each and New Zealand will have one delegate. Consideration of the question of Russian representation was postponed.

The size of the representation of each nation was decided upon, not, as proposed by the French plan, in accordance with the part played by the nation in the war, but following the American and British plan, in proportion to the extent of the interest of each nation in the peace settlement.

FAUX CASE IS CONCLUDED AND JUDGMENT RESERVED

Crown Attorney Hatton and J. M. Corkery For Defence Submit Their Arguments—Magistrate Dumble Will Give Decision on Saturday.

Today in Police Court the case of Emmett Faux, charged with selling liquor contrary to the Ontario Temperance Act, was continued. The two remaining witnesses for the defence were called, Joseph Clancey and Faux himself.

Mr. Clancey's story was the same as that of his employer, C. M. Moncur. Faux gave evidence which did not differ materially from that given at the inquest.

Argument was then heard in the case.

Mr. Hatton's Contentions.

Mr. Hatton's contention is that the accused, Emmett Faux, contravened the above section of the Act in that he by himself sold liquor without a license so to do. Liquor shall include any drink and drinkable liquids which are intoxicating and any liquor which contains more than 2½ per cent. of proof spirits shall be conclusively deemed to be intoxicating.

As the Government analysis shows that the liquor sold by accused contained over seventy-three per cent. of proof spirits, it was conclusively intoxicating. No evidence can be given to controvert that.

The only question left, therefore, for the Court to consider is: Was the liquor sold drinkable; The evidence is that the contents of the bottle having been tasted by Omer Bourgon, the deceased, was accepted by Bourgon and paid for as being drinkable. He, Bourgon, and his friend, Heatherington, the latter having been previously invited to spend the evening with Bourgon for the express purpose of drinking liquor. This is Heathering's evidence, not contradicted, and that he, Heathering, and the deceased, Bourgon, did spend the evening up to eleven p.m. drinking this liquor in question, is proved by Irwin and corroborated by Mrs. Bourgon. Each of them, Bourgon and Heathering, had at least three drinks each, and as Heathering says may have had four. This, then, is proof that the liquor was drinkable.

That Faux purchased columnian spirits from the druggist is beside the question in dispute. Columnian spirits does not contain any proof spirits. That he, Faux, did purchase two bottles of pure alcohol on Christmas day, three days only before he sold the liquor to Bourgon, has a bearing on the question as showing how he obtained a mixture that he sold to Bourgon, one that was conclusively intoxicating and from the evidence, drinkable.

These two points having been proved, the accused has contravened the provisions of the Act and is liable to the penalty provided for the same.

Mr. Corkery's Argument.

J. M. Corkery, for the prisoner, stated that there was two possible defences for the prisoner. The first was that the contents of the bottle which had been purchased for Bourgon by Faux was not liquor within the meaning of the Ontario Temperance Act. And, secondly, if it was, there was no sale connected with the transaction and his client was being accused of selling liquor, contrary to law.

Section 123 (A) of the O. T. A. defines alcohol as being ethylic or absolute alcohol. Mr. Corkery contended that according to the evidence, it was columnian spirits that the prisoner had purchased and that this preparation being a highly refined form of wood alcohol contained no proof spirits and the report of the analyst showed that the connection, which had been forwarded to him as the mixture responsible for Bourgon's death, contained over 73 per cent. of proof spirits which would go to show that some pure alcohol had been added to the mixture after Faux had given it over to Bourgon. The latter had it in his possession from early Saturday evening until he was removed to the hospital on Monday morning and it was quite possible to tamper with it and add some other ingredient.

His client had been only 15 minutes getting the columnian spirits; therefore, the mixture was in his possession only one-quarter of an hour and yet someone must have mixed some pure alcohol with the liquid.

Mr. Corkery maintained in regard to his second point that Faux was only acting as an agent in connection with the buying of the columnian spirits for Bourgon. Bourgon gave him money with which to buy the spirits, but there was no evidence to show that his client had ever had any intention of claiming a profit on the transaction. He simply acted as Bourgon's agent.

He admitted having received $6.00 from Bourgon and of having spent $2.60 of it and handed over $3 to the Chief of Police. This last $3 was given to him by Bourgon to purchase more columnian spirits, but he was unable to carry out the instructions of deceased on account of the drug stores being closed and the sickness of which he fell a victim himself on Monday.

Magistrate Dumble reserved judgment until Saturday.

CHOIR SERVICE AT ST. JOHN'S REAL INSPIRATION TO WORK

Unanimous Vote of Thanks Passed at Annual Vestry Meeting to Mr. R. J. Devey, Organist, and His Staff.

The annual vestry meeting of St. John's congregation was held in the Guild room last night. The Rev. Canon Davidson presided, supported by Dr. Cameron and Mr. J. A. Aylmer, Wardens, and Mr. W. H. Walkey, clerk.

The financial statement proved a fruitful topic of discussion, and was finally passed on the motion of the Wardens after an hour's debate. Hearty thanks of the vestry were given to the retiring Wardens for their efforts during the past year, and Canon Davidson at once announced that he had asked Dr. Cameron to again accept office as his Warden. On the motion of Mr. Mills, seconded by Mr. Fair, Mr. J. A. Aylmer was unanimously re-elected People's Warden. An interesting report of the Sunday School was read by the superintendent, Mr. R. J. Devey, who appealed for the very best teaching help that was to be found in the parish. A financial report, prepared by the treasurer, Mr. Amos Conway, was also read, and it was suggested that it be audited and printed with the general statement for the future. On motion of Dr. Cameron, it was unanimously resolved that the hearty thanks of the vestry be sent to the superintendent, Mr. Devey, and Miss English for the splendid work of themselves and their staff of officers and teachers. The support of the congregation was asked for the Sunday School project of raising $200 for the Indian work of the M. S. C. C.

A report of the work of the choir was presented by the choirmaster, and Mr. Harry Long in moving a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Devey and the choir, stated that their faithful attendance in such large numbers, no matter what the weather might be, and their beautiful rendering of the church services, was an inspiration to him and to all who attended St. John's. Mr. George Lenton seconded and the motion was carried.

The new synod regulation that a special committee be in charge of all matters pertaining to missions, was brought before the meeting by the rector and a committee formed to appoint a chairman for this important work.

Dr. Cameron introduced the subject of a war memorial for those members of the congregation who had fallen in the war, and after considerable discussion, it was arranged that a special vestry meeting should be called to deal with such an important matter.

Hearty thanks were accorded to Mr. A. W. Turner for the unique display of flags at the Christmas decorations. The Sunday School executive acknowledge with hearty thanks gifts of cash or books for the prizes from the rector, Mrs. Hall, Mrs. Ryerson Ritchie, Miss Doris Clegg, Mr. George Lenton, Mr. A. W. Turner, Mr. C. E. Jamieson and Mr. Harry Long.

Miss Archer was appointed to represent the congregation on the Board of the Protestant Home, and Mr. Fair re-appointed to Nicholls' Hospital Committee of Management.

JUDICIAL ARROGANCE.

ONE OF THE LEADING druggists in the city was on the stand in the Police Court yesterday as an expert witness to explain the intoxicating ingredients in a beverage, that question being the main issue in a case before the magistrate. The magistrate refused somewhat petulantly to hear his testimony, even though the Crown Attorney insisted upon it, and hinted that he would drop the case if the testimony was not admitted. The Crown Attorney was looking for enlightenment, and, like a just official, was disposed to give the defendant a fair chance in the case against him.

To go to court as a witness these days has about as much terror for the average citizen as to be dragged there as a defendant. It is the arrogance of some of the presiding officials and the brow-beating tactics so popular with a certain class of lawyers that accounts for this. Of course, the dignity of the courts must be maintained, but if the judges and lawyers, privileged by the occasion and protected by legal ethics, brow-beat those whom they regard as hostile witnesses, frighten the timid into a state of mental collapse, and do not stop short of insulting respectable witnesses who from the very nature of their profession know more about the real points of the case at issue than judge, magistrate and all the lawyers engaged in an attempt to solve the problem.

FARMS FOR SOLDIERS.

AS THE REVIEW pointed out a few days ago in an editorial that was extensively quoted by our exchanges, it is nothing short of foolish to talk of settling such of the returned soldiers who may have a taste for farming upon the wild lands that are still the property of Province or Dominion. Why ask the men who have done so much to save the country to make still further sacrifices by lending a hand in converting the wilderness into a garden?

Just as we said on a former occasion, the Province of Ontario is sparsely settled in the rural districts. The soil is rich enough, the territory is wide enough, to support a population at least five times greater than the present. The scarcity of labor finds half the farms in Ontario inadequately manned. There is room enough for the returned soldiers from this province who wish to farm without leaving the confines of civilization.

Farm lands are not selling at anything like their real value these days. The scarcity of labor is the explanation. No man cares to tie up his money in land unless assured of a fair return on his investment, and this is impossible if he is unable to work his property through lack of help. Many a farmer whose present holding is too large for him to handle profitably, would be glad to sell part of his possessions at anything like a fair figure.

The man who is willing to farm in a small way finds no property proportionate with his means. He has not the capital necessary to acquire one of the larger farms. Smaller holdings is the explanation, and from a recent announcement it appears that the Government has come to this way of thinking. Farms for the soldiers are to be found not in the wilds of New Ontario but in the uncultivated lands of the older sections. The province is to give the Federal Government the right to expropriate such lands without surrendering title to them.

Land can be expropriated to secure a right-of-way for a railway or for other purposes that are supposed to benefit the people. No greater public benefit could be imagined than a policy that would bring the production of Ontario up to something like its capacity and would provide happy and prosperous homes for hundreds of citizens who would otherwise be a drag on the community.

THE GOVERNMENT'S RESPONSIBILITY.

THE GOVERNMENT provides colleges for the training of members of the medical profession and carefully protects them from the illegal competition of quacks and other incompetents when they have graduated and embarked upon their professional career. Yet people continue to die, Epidemics sweep over the country just as the "flu" did and collect a toll of thousands of lives. No one is unreasonable enough to hold the Government responsible because the medical profession fails to cure every form of disease or to score a success in every operation. There comes a point where the Government's responsibility ceases and the onus for failure rests upon those who are entrusted with the operation of the machinery which the Government has created.

There have been hardships in connection with the military service, hardships that might have been avoided with a little official vigilance. But in the most of these cases it is the agents of the Government rather than the Government itself that are to blame. The Military Service Act achieved the purpose for which it was designed. That Act was grossly violated in hundreds of cases, and not all the offenders have been yet brought to book. But because a law is broken or because a percentage of those who break it are able to cover their tracks is no reason to argue that the aim of the enactment was wrong or that such a law should not have been given effect.

All human laws are broken. Only the other day a man was hanged for murder. Men whose hands are red with the blood of their fellows have managed to escape punishment. Following the line of argument pursued by certain newspapers, it would appear that laws against murder are a reproach to a commonwealth where they exist simply because they are frequently broken and not all the offenders are brought to justice.

THE DAY OF THE SPOTTER.

THE LAND is filled with spies, not the German species, but spies many of whom claim Canada as their birthplace. They are liable to crop up at any time or anywhere. The retail dealer has come to suspect every stranger who drops into his store, believing that he may be a spotter in disguise while he poses as a customer. This suspicion is justified, so many of the dealers have been haled into police court and fined on what were really the merest technicalities.

Recently it was decided in the local police court that the law did not require that a war stamp be placed on a bottle of talcum powder when it was sold. Druggists and grocers accepted this decision as final and governed themselves accordingly. Then another court reversed this magisterial decision. A spotter dropped into the city, and a grocer some distance out from the business centre, a man whose reputation, professional or private, and whose record, are above reproach, who had been selling talcum powder without a stamp, in perfectly good faith, following the legal decision handed down here, was summoned to police court and fined $50. Half of this fine goes to the spotter as compensation for his public service.

It is not the expense and trouble involved in affixing the war stamps to which the majority of the dealers object. What they do regard as an affliction is that having their business affairs pried into by petty officials in the employ of the Government. Another difficulty is to understand the law so as to know what to stamp and what to leave unstamped.

Frequently a grocer is fined for selling as maple sugar a substitute that is really an imitation. The manufacturer and the wholesaler, so far as the records show, are never mulcted for putting spurious articles on sale, but it is always the retailer who is made the goat. It seems that there is a provision in the law that if the retailer gets a guarantee as to the purity of the goods which he purchases, he is relieved from all responsibility if they are not as represented. Frequently the dealer forgets to safeguard himself, but more often he is satisfied to take the word of the man who supplies him with his stock.

How can the average grocer or druggist be expected to know what articles are to be stamped when the very officials charged with the enforcement of the law are often unable themselves to supply the desired information, while even the courts themselves are not able to agree?

It is cheering to learn that some of the orders-in-council now in existence are to be modified. This will tend to bring to the people a feeling of security to which they have been strangers for months. No man should be branded as a law-breaker or regarded as a criminal because he has violated without guilty intent some enactment that for the time being makes an indictable offence of what under other circumstances was a perfectly harmless not to say legitimate act.

UNION BANK OF CANADA STILL CONTINUES CAREER OF GROWTH

Nearly Ten Million Dollars Added to Assets, Deposits Are Increased and a Substantial Amount Is Added to Rest Account.

The statement of the Union Bank of Canada for the year ending November 30th, 1918, shows an increase in the total volume of assets amounting to about nine and three quarter million dollars since the same date in 1917. Current loans in Canada are the item showing the most striking growth over fifteen million dollars and the profits for year as in 1917. Current losses in Canada might be expected in the circumstances, are correspondingly enhanced. As those profits were not subject to deduction for depreciation or contingencies it was possible, besides paying the usual 9 per cent divident, to transfer $200,000 to Rest Account (the first addition made to this account since the war began) and to write off $75,000 from premises account.

On the liabilities side note circulation at $12,134,649 shows a slight reduction and savings (interest-bearing) deposits a considerable reduction, from $75,508,158 to $60,437,490. The explanation of the latter drop is that the big payment on the last Victory Loan flotation was made just before the balance sheet was struck, and the public withdrew large sums of money from the savings accounts for that purpose, the reduction, judging from past experience with similar transactions, will be only temporary. Non-interest-bearing deposits rose about 14¼ million, to $58,805,200. Small items of balance due to Canadian and other banks bring up the total of public liabilities to $141,553,127 an increase of about $9,400,000. Acceptances are $2,706,467, capital $5,000,000. Rest Account $3,600,000 and profit balance $126,229 which with dividends due and other small liabilities makes the balance sheet total $153,181,451.

Of the liquid assets which total $72,368,327, a reduction of over 4¼ millions from 1917, the most important items are Dominion notes $15,113,307; Deposits in Central Gold Reserve $7,800,000; Securities of the Dominion and Provincial Governments, $12,527,938 (increase of over three millions) Canadian municipal and British and foreign public securities $15,720,339 (reduction of half a million) call loans in Canada $6,508,729; and call loans elsewhere $3,889,150. Current loans in Canada are $74,021,028, and current loans elsewhere are $1,944,112.

Profits for the year were $624,175 which compares with $763,464 in 1917 and ..651,184 in 1916. After deducting the war tax pension fund appropriation and sundry donations for patriotic and charitable objects, there remained $744,675 for distribution or for putting back into the business, this being at the very satisfactory rate of over 8 per cent on the combined capital and Rest Account.

While the expension in current loans is a highly gratifying evidence of the improvement in business conditions and the willingness of the bank's management to assist in the promotion of genuine commercial activity it is to be noted that it is not carried to the length of rendering the liquid reserve less strong that the dictates of caution would suggest. Even after the reduction caused by the withdrawals of savings deposits, the liquid reserve is still equivalent to more than 51 per cent of the liabilities to the public, an extremely conservative ratio and one which places the bank in a position to look forward to any future developments with complacency. The have marked the bank's policy for aggressiveness and originality which several years past are having results which should be most satisfactory both to shareholders and clients.

LESSONS IN RIGHT LIVING

(By Dr. W. A. Brady)

Since Pasteur introduced the conception of bacteria as a cause of disease a prodigous hysteria of germ killing has pervaded the whole civilized world. It is no exaggeration though it may seem paradoxical, to say that nearly all intelligent human beings resort more or less to antiseptic or germicidal chemicals in the prevention and treatment of disease—nearly all except educated physicians.

The more a physician knows about the nature of germ diseases and the action of antiseptics and germicides the less use he has for these agents in his work. A surgeon well trained in the rudiments of his art and experienced in operating probably employs antiseptics less frequently than the average lawman does. It is the doctor who lacks training and skill who makes the greatest use of such chemicals. Sometimes he uses them obviously for the purpose of assuring the patient and the patient's friends that all "antiseptic precautions" are being taken—whatever "antiseptic precautions" may be. But more often he applies antiseptics with about as vague a notion of their effect as the layman has when he dabs peroxide on a cut or sore.

Antiseptics do inhibit or delay the multiplication of germs but they do not necessarily kill the germs. Germicides kill germs—direct sunlight or boiling for example. Peroxide applied in full strength will noticeably diminish the multiplication rate of many germs, but germs will grow in peroxide, nevertheless. Germs will grow in antiseptics, even in the noisome iodoform which old time surgeons delighted to sprinkle around.

The childlike faith a lawman places in his favorite antiseptic is amusing to one with fundamental knowledge of the nature of infection. But when a doctor adopts such naive tactics as spraying the nose with some antiseptic solution with the view to preventing germ invasions or destroying or inhibiting germs that have already invaded the lining of the nose, the spectacle becomes pitiable.

It is apparently futile to search for any antiseptic or germicidal remedy on the germs in tissues to the surface of which the remedy is applied. The bacterial cell is so similar to the tissue cell—all the body tissues and membranes are composed of cells—that any chemical which delays the growth of or destroys the one will have the same effect on the other. This explains why a trifling cut or sore is so long in healing when you persist in applying such destructive things as peroxide, carbolized salve and the like.

Little Girl Going to Blow Away

"My daughter, aged three and a half years seems to dislike fruit. As a baby she took prune or orange juice every day, but now it is impossible to make her eat fruit of any kind except under duress. She eats everything else and seems very well, but I feel that it would be better for her to eat fruit. How can I make her eat it?

Mrs. S. M. M."

How can you make the little girl eat anything she does not want? And why should you? I remember when I was a little girl—I was a great dollboy at that age—grandma constantly threatened that I would dry up and blow away if I didn't eat canned quinces and such stuff—ugh! I've dried up considerable but I am still here, and I'd like to see anybody force me to eat canned quinces. Give the little girl a ten year rest on dietetic maxims, and she'll pull through.

FOOD, NOT FORCE

SAFEGUARDS FOR PUBLIC HEALTH

CARE TAKEN IN SCHOOLS TO PREVENT SPREAD OF "FLU."

Since the reopening of school on Jan. 6th, the attendance of pupils at the various public schools of the city has been good.

Precautions to prevent the recurrence of influenza are being continued and pupils having colds are being sent home until they recover.

The members of the teaching staff are all on duty.

Pupils returning to school after recovering from an infectious or contagious disease or coming from a home where such a disease existed must furnish a doctor's certificate in order to be admitted to school.

Feminine Fashions Up-To-Date

Plain, old-fashioned burlap made its appearance a few weeks ago as a dress suit trimming. The style designers favoring the material have used it with generous hand on garments made of the richest of silks and satins. The fact that some of these designers chose to dress the material up with fancy names did not deceive the public as to what the fabric really was—just plain, rough-and-ready burlap, used normally as an outer covering for carpets, rugs and other commodities when packed and rolled and ready for shipment by freight or express.

Perceiving that burlap made an effective trimming for very good looking and expensive items of outer apparel for womankind, other fashion artists concluded that using it in economical quantity was unnecessary, and that if it appeared to good advantage on a dress trimming there was no reason at all why the material should not be used in the construction of entire garments.

A recent sketch indicates the result attained by one style designer who used burlap in the development of a separate skirt. A foundation of Georgette was first made, and the burlap skirt, ravelled at the edge so as to form a self-fringe about ten inches deep, was draped over it. A trimming of colored silk braid was employed on the belt, the braid also being used to swing the little fringe-trimmed pocket.

The burlap used in this skirt, as originally designed was tobacco brown in color, the Georgette underskirt was navy, and the braid combined the two colors.

It is very likely that burlap will have quite a vogue in the development of sport skirts for spring and summer wear, although it must be regarded as merely one of the novelties of the season and not as one of the materials that actually form the backbone of correct apparelling.

The real value in calling attention to the season's extreme novelties is merely to point out that when correctly handled no material need be a loss, and that attractive garments may be developed out of the most unusual and unheard of fabrics.

WHAT READERS ASK

Laura M.—Peroxide of hydrogen is the simplest of all bleaches. Use equal parts of it and water. The following bleach for discolored neck may prove more effectual: Borax 1 dram; lemon juice 2 drams; bay rum, 2 ounces; rose water, 2 ounces. Daub on frequently with absorbent cotton.

Mrs. James H. — An effective means of enlarging the bust is by massaging with cocoa-butter. Use the palms of the hands in a rotary motion, passing upward from the body to the nipple. This exercise, if persisted in for one half an hour daily, is said to show good results in a few months. Deep breathing and arm exercises are also excellent assistants to this. Vaucaire tonic, formula for which I will gladly send you, is helpful when you desire to build up the entire body also, as this tonic has a tendency to produce flesh.

UNION BANK OF CANADA

54th Annual Statement—30th November, 1918

The Fifty-fourth Annual Meeting of the Shareholders of the Union Bank of Canada was held at the Head Office of the Bank, in the City of Winnipeg, at twelve noon, on Wednesday, the 8th instant.

The President, MR. JOHN GALT, in the chair.

DIRECTORS' REPORT

The Directors have pleasure in presenting their report showing the result of the business of the Bank for the year ending November 30th, 1918.

During the year, owing to the depletion of the staff caused by enlistment for military service, the following offices were closed:—Coatsworth, Eastons Corners and Toledo in the Province of Ontario; Adanac, Guernsey, Jansen, Major, Netherhill and Salvador in the Province of Saskatchewan, of which all except Adanac have since been reopened.

ALDERMEN WILL ATTEND CHURCH

The Mayor and Aldermen of the city will attend the evening service at Park street Baptist Church on Sunday, January 26th, as the result of a motion of Aldermen Edgar and Garside which was carried and provides for the acceptance of an invitation extended by letter and read at last night's meeting of the council.

There was some discussion in regard to the most convenient time to carry out the laudable project the communication which was written by the clerk of the church, Mr. Harry Goodwin making it optional with the Council whether they attend the morning or evening service. QUAKER OATS COMPANY GIVE NOTICE OF APPEAL

Peck, Kerr and McElderry, Their Attorneys, Will Carry Assessment Matter, re Payment of the School Taxes, Up to Higher Tribunal—Routine Business of the Council.

Peck, Kerr and McElderry notified the Council by letter last night that they intend appealing on behalf of their clients, the Quaker Oats Co., from the Judgment of Judge Hu[illegible] in the recent assessment case, and will carry the matter to the Ontario Railway Municipal Board. Alderman Edgar moved that city solicitor's given authority to defend the case and engage legal assistance if he deemed it necessary. His motion was seconded by Alderman Murray. An amendment referring the matter to the Legal Committee was introduced by Aldermen Taylor and Gainey and was carried.

The usual grant of $75 to the Poultry Association was ordered paid upon motion of Aldermen Taylor and Turner.

Street Railway Affairs.

The Ontario Hydro Power Commission wrote Council in regard to matters pertaining to the street railway. They felt that the city authorities and themselves were working along opposite lines, which was not conducive to the prosperity of the system. They wished this state of affairs could be remedied and suggested that a joint committee, composed of aldermen and members of the Board of Trade be appointed to envolve satisfactory plans for the future development and prosperity of the system.

Mr. Angassey, of Rubidge street, informed the Council by letter that he was about to take action to compel the corporation to pay him damages amounting to $[illegible]35 for injury to his horse sustained when it stepped into an excavation near the manhole at the corner of Donegal and London streets.

Mayor Duncan stated that he had been informed of the matter and had sent the city engineer to look into it. He thought the amount of damages claimed was perfectly ridiculous. This matter was referred to the Legal Committee.

London Street Bridge.

Several letters were received from companies in connection with the building of the London street bridge. One of them from Mr. O'Toole, [illegible] correcting a misapprehension as to the amount of his tender another made an offer in regard to constructing the work on a percentage basis.

A letter from Tax Collector Greene in regard to a small sum of money the responsibilty for payment of which was disputed between himself, A. Lowe, and the city was referred to the Legal Committee.

City Appointments.

A bylaw, appointing Alderman Taylor a member of the Foley Estate Committee for a term of two years in the stead of A. H. Stratton, whose term had expired received its several readings and was carried. Bylaws re-appointing Frank T. Sollitt for another term as member of the Public Library Board, and James Murty, W. H. Buller and W. H. Morgan, as members of the Board of Health for 1919, were carried. Thomas Quinn, who had been endorsed by the Trades and Labor Council, for the position, was appointed to the Board of Fuel Commissioners to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Alderman Murray.

Before the adjournment Alderman Turner introduced the question of the probability of a visit to the city in the near future of a C. P. R. official, who would go into the matter with any representatives appointed by the city of an improved passenger service to Montreal.

Alderman Turner also suggested the advisability of engaging men to trim the trees of the city which were badly in need of such treatment and which would provide work for a number of men. He thought that the amount of wood obtained as a result of such a move would go a long way towards financing the operations.

After adjournment the members of the Council spent some time in an informal discussion of questions relating to the construction of the Hunter street bridge with Engineer Barber and in looking over the plans.

City Assessor W. J. Henry wrote the Council last night asking for permission to appoint a new clerk in place of Miss Knapman, who has been employed in his office, and who has resigned.

A letter from Mr. F. E. Kerr, asking that the city employees who have flooded the South Central school rink in the past be allowed to do so again, was received and a motion passed providing for compliance with the request.

The Maple Leaf Forever.

His Lordship Bishop O'Brien drew the attention of the Council by letter to the fact that basswood trees on Reid and Brock street had grown to such an extent as to threaten the life of maple trees planted near St. Peter's School and suggested that some act on be taken to have the obnoxious trees removed so that the maples would not be injured. This matter was referred to the city engineer with power to act.

Munition Boxes.

Ex-Alderman Dobbin, president of the Patriotic Fund, communicated with Council in regard to the advisability of selling some of the larger boxes which had been given to the Council by the Imperial Munitions Board to distribute to the poor of the city, free of charge, for firewood, and which had previously been used for munitions. At the Renfrew works, alone, there were 8,600 of these, and while the Munition Board had stipulated that if the city charged for these the money obtained thereby would have to be paid over to the Crown, he suggested the advisability of selling some of the larger one as garbage receptacles for a nominal amount and handing over the proceeds to the Government as stated in the agreement.

Mayor Duncan asserted that up to the present he had seen none of these boxes which would be large enough to put to such use as described by ex-Alderman Dobbin. The Council decided they would take no action in regard to the matter at present.

School Board Estimates.

The estimates of the Board of Education for the year were received. They amounted to $124,500, and as Mayor Duncan remarked, are $13,000 in excess of those of last year. Upon motion of Aldermen Taylor and Phelan, the first installment of $800 was ordered paid.

The Playgrounds Association.

In connection with this matter, Alderman Turner stated that in his opinion the Playgrounds Association should carry on their work under the supervision of the Board of Education, and that they should also look after the financial side of the movement. He felt that the School Board should be ready to assume such a responsibility as it realy came in their field. Mayor Duncan thought the suggestion was a good one and felt that the sum of money they had impressed for, this year, should be ample to assume and carry out such an obligation.

$7,100 For The Library.

This year the estimates for maintenance of the Public Library are placed at $7,100, of which the city's share is $6 000.

A lengthy letter from the Reconstruction Commission, pointing out the advisability of organizing in each community to look after the problems arising out of the past war [illegible] was received.

The usual application for a grant towards the Sick Childrens' Hospital was received and referred to the Finance Committee.

A new high record was created for 1937 Victory bonds at Montreal when sales were effcted at 102¾.

The Province of Quebec is selling a parcel of $1,625,000 bonds bearing 4½ per cent. at $5.97, thus yielding 5.50 per cent.

STORY OF PRODIGAL SON TOLD WITH NEW SETTING

"The Wanderer," Presented at the Grand by a Company of Artists, Draws Large Audience—Stage Realism Reaches Highest Pinnacle of Art.

The plot in the magnificent spectacular play "The Wanderer," which was presented for the first time at the Grand Opera House last night is based upon the beautiful and familiar story of the Prodigal Son. The scene is laid near Hebron and the time is about one thousand years before Christ. The home of Jether, the Prodigal is an imposing old mansion set among Judean hills which are covered with the flocks that belong to his father and which are tended by the elder brother and his assistants. Jether is the petted son of his parents. Idle and given to dreams of the lure beyond his native hills. Finally he persuades his father to give him the "portion of goods that falleth to one."

Jether sets out for Jerusalem, where he falls in with evil companions who cuddle him while his gold lasts and cast him out with contumely when his wealth has vanished. Deadheads and adventurers borrow his money, thieves rob him female harpies lead him into evil ways. The maiden upon whom his fancy dwells advises him to renounce the God of Israel and to worship idols and finally to attempt to regain something of his lost wealth by gambling with loaded dice.

Ragged and diseased the prodigal drags himself to the home of his childhood where he is finally forgiven by father and elder brother and received by the mother with that maternal affection that is always showered upon the erring one of the family.

This play is magnificently staged The costumes are historically correct as worn either by the shepherds on the hills or by the gay triflers in Jerusalem, and the language of the dialogues is that of the Bible translation of the speech of that age.

There is an element of realism running through the entire production. A flock of sheep follow their shepherd meekly through the valleys from the fields to the fold, a helpless lamb being tenderly carried in the shepherd's arms. All the religious rites of the simple country people of that day are scrupulously observed. The houses as shown on the stage are the substantial structures of Palestine with the flat roofs fitted out as living places and watch towers from which a commanding view may be had of the country for miles around.

When the scene is shifted to Jerusalem the picture presented of life in that city explains why judgment overtook the people of that community. The entire time of the inhabitants seemed to be given over to frivolity in every form of voluptuous pleasure, wine drinking and dancing. Two of the startling climaxes of the play are when the ascetic prophet appears in the halls of pleasure and pronounces doom upon the sinners. Another is the supernatural storm that Jether recognizes as Divine disapproval of his offences.

There is some excellent acting in the performance. Frederick Lewis, as Jether, plays the part of the idle and petted youth of the innocent dupe, and of the discredited and penitent prodigal with equal success. Henry Duggan takes the part of Jesse, the father, and Richard Thornton that of Gaal, the elder brother. Florence Anner, as Hulda the mother of Jether, gives a splendid representation of what the average mother would do under such circumstances. She sends the wanderer away with a blessing, prays for him while he is absent, watching for his return, and when he comes back kisses his scarred and emaciated face as passionately as when it was rosy with the health of babyhood. Olga Newton, as Naomi, was the damsel whose devotion never wavered.

There is a bevy of Oriental dancing girls, house servants, and representations of every eastern country. The play sheds a new light upon the Bible times and upon the familiar story that was first told the twelve Disciples even though the playright has taken liberty with the details and the setting.

The Wanderer will be presented again tonight and tomorrow night, with the usual Wednesday matinee.

EX-CROWN PRINCE TALKS SUICIDE

DECLARES FRENCH OR BRITISH WILL NEVER TAKE HIM ALIVE.

New York, Jan. 14.—The World prints the following from Cyril Brown, its staff correspondent in Holland:

The German ex-Crown Prince has made up his mind to commit suicide rather than face criminal trial by a jury composed wholly or in major part of French and British. "They will never get me," he repeated several times in an informal interview today.

I made the wearisome journey to Wieringen from Amsterdam on the chance of catching his ex-Royal Highness at home, and in an unburdening mood. As I drove up to the modest red brick two-storey house I caught a glimpse of him at his bedroom window changing his pantaloons.

I was shown into the only sitting room, the billiard room, containing a shabby, moth-eaten second-hand billiard table and two wornout leather armchairs. A few minutes later the ex-Prince entered wearing a salt-and-pepper sporting suit and decidedly self-conscious of his changed position. After we had chatted a few minutes his manner became natural and unaffected; he talked freely and answered questions readily.

Perched on the edge of the sorry billiard table, the former Prince lit a cigarette (of a unique brand, the tip being a thin straw) and faced my informal cross-examination. I had seen his arrival on the dull Devil's Island of Wieringen and I observed that since then he had pulled himself together, had recovered his nerve and, in relative solitude, had done some tall thinking about his situation and future.

"They'll Never Get Me Alive."

I asked what he thought about the much discussed possibility of being "extradited" with the Kaiser and placed on criminal trial.

"I don't give a hang about it," he said, in the American phrase with a decided English accent. In his next sentence he explained this real or pretended indifference as to what the allies might decide to do about his person.

"They'll never get me," he said, with a quiet smile. "They'll never get me—alive," he repeated.

I asked if, in view of his reported statement that he was innocent of complicity in the outbreak of the world war, he would not welcome a court trial as offering an opportunity of clearing himself, if he could. But the ex-Crown Prince expressed and stubbornly clung to the opinion that he would not get a square deal at a criminal trial, "certainly not if the French and the English had their way."

"They want my head," he said. "And I know it. But they won't get me. Clemenceau and Lloyd George are looking for some one to put the whole blame for the war on. They're looking for a scapegoat. And they're picked my father and myself to be the goats. Clemenceau is a bloodthirsty old man."

His present plan obviously is to sit tight on Wieringen as long as the Dutch will let him. I asked if, as an interned German officer, he was not free to go back to Germany.

"Free enough," he answered, "but it would not do me any good, Germany would give me up quick enough to the French. The present Government was in such a kowtowing, bootlicking frame of mind that they would readily fulfil any demand made on them by the entente, including the demand for my head or my person."

Aid. Nesbitt will move for an enquiry into the social conditions in Toronto's Jail Farm, Police Court, Juvenile Court, Belmont Home for the Aged, House of Industry, etc., holding that some of them are more suitable to a small town than a big city.

SALTS FINE FOR ACHING KIDNEYS

WE EAT TOO MUCH MEAT WHICH CLOGS KIDNEYS, THEN THE BACK HURTS

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless; inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

Ask For Revision Of All Pensions

BRANTFORD BRANCH G.W.V.A. SENDS OPEN LETTER TO OTTAWA.

Brantford, Jan. 14.—An open letter addressed to Sir Thomas White, acting Premier has been forwarded by Capt. (Rev.) C. E. Jeakins, president of the Ontario G. W. V. A. The letter calls for a revision of the pensions awarded to disabled soldiers, which, at best, are in some cases inadequate, in view of what the soldiers had given.

"But when an attempt is made to reduce these pensions, to cut them off entirely," continues the memorial, "and without any warning, it is time that an emphatic protest were made agiast such gross injustice. It has come to our knowledge of late that there has been such reduction and cutting off of pensions, not only of returned men, but of the dependents of those who have paid the supreme sacrifice."

Some specific cases are then cited. One whose lung had been penetrated and who had received $74 a month, had been cut without warning to $19 a month. A second had two inches of bone removed from his leg since returning. His pension of $36.45 for himself, wife and three children had been reduced to $19 a month.

It does seem most unwise at a critical time like this through which we are passing, to add to this unrest by the reduction in part or altogether of the pension awarded to the returned soldier by your government."

The memorial then continues: That waste of money for monumental arches and such like memorials would be ill-advised and unjust when the legitimate claims of those for whom the memorials were intended were needing large sums of money. The finest monument Canada can provide for her soldiers is an adequate and judicious pension scheme.

LABOR LOSES IN FIRST ROUND

ALDERMEN FAIL TO APPOINT THEIR MAN ON LIBRARY BOARD.

Labor Aldermen lost out at the meeting of the Council last night in their first trial of strength when they failed to appoint their candidate, Thomas Ogilvie, a member of the Public Library Board. Frank T. Sullitt, the present member was appointed on a vote of six to five. Just as was expected Ald. McIntyre voted with the four labor aldermen. This made a tie which was broken by Ald. Taylor who was in the chair, voting for Mr. Sullitt, the Council being in committee of the whole at the time.

Mr. Ogilvie was endorsed for the position at the last meeting of the Trades and Labor Council to which he is a delegate. He is a member of the electrical workers union and is employed in the C.G.E. plant. Mr. Sullitt too, is a workingman but is said to be at odds with the union.

The reason that organized labor was anxious to appoint a member of the Library Board was their contention that there is a scarcity of Labor literature in that institution.

War to Peace

Demobilizing Canada's Army

THE actual work of bringing back our soldiers to Canada and getting them out of khaki is in the hands of the Department of Militia and Defence. Complete plans have been made and machinery organized to handle the work. Every detail has been considered. The plan is harmonious and will work smoothly. It is described here. Notice how every contingency has been considered. How the soldier is cared for at every step. How everything is done for his comfort and to inform his waiting relatives and friends.

From France to England.

Peace is not yet signed. The victorious Canadian Corps is still a fighting unit. But as fast as the situation permits the Canadian Corps in France will be returned to Canada by units allotted, as far as possible, to the areas from which they came. These units will be reconstructed so as to include only men desirous of returning to the area to which the unit has been allotted.

The remainder of the Canadian forces overseas will be returned in drafts of 500 men for each area. Married men first, according to length of service. Then single men, according to length of service.

Preparing to Leave England.

Canada has been divided into 22 dispersal areas for demobilization, with a dispersal station for each.

1. The province of Prince Edward Island—Charlottetown.
2. The province of Nova Scotia—Halifax.
3. One half of New Brunswick—Moncton.
4. One half of New Brunswick—St. John.
5. The north country of Quebec down to Three Rivers—Quebec.
6. The remainder of Quebec—Montreal.
7. The Ottawa Valley and Ontario down to the Thousand Islands—Ottawa.
8. The Kingston district west to Oshawa and north to the Madawaska River—Kingston.
9. The Toronto district north to the French River and the north mining country—Toronto.
10. The Niagara Peninsula—Hamilton.
11. Southern Ontario—London.
12. From White River to the Lake of the Woods—Port Arthur.
13. All of Manitoba except the Brandon territory—Winnipeg.
14. The Brandon territory—Brandon.
15. Southern Saskatchewan—Regina.
16. Northern Saskatchewan—Saskatoon.
17. Southern Alberta—Medicine Hat.
18. From Calgary north to Nordeg—Calgary.
19. Northern Alberta—Edmonton.
20. All of British Columbia except 21 and 22—Vancouver.
21. Vancouver Island and the immediate mainland—Victoria.
22. Cariboo, Kootenay and Gale—Revelstoke.

Each soldier overseas chooses the dispersal area in Canada to which he wishes to go.

A report of the number of men for each dispersal area is cabled to Militia Headquarters.

As fast as they can be absorbed by the dispersal areas—a cable is sent to England for drafts.

Prior to sailing, a cable is sent from England stating how many men are coming and giving their occupations.

In this way arrangements are made to handle the men, to care for them, and to find employment for them.

Before a man leaves England he is medically examined, his discharge papers and other documents are made out. All delay in Canada over these details is avoided.

On the Ship.

The transport staff check the medical and pay documents. The Y.M.C.A. provides recreation and entertainment. Twenty-four hours before arrival in Canada a wireless is sent to the port giving details of any men who are sick and in need of hospital care, and general information that will ensure speedy transport from boat to train.

Wounded Men.

Wounded men are brought back on hospital ships in the care of Army Medical Corps. They are taken on hospital trains to the various military hospitals and are in charge of the military authorities until medical treatment is complete.

In Port.

Halifax and St. John, are the ports of disembarkation in winter. Quebec and Montreal will also be used in summer. Immediately upon arrival of troops, the officer commanding wires a list to the Soldiers' Aid Commission in each province who notify the men's relatives. He also wires the Dispersal Station to prepare to handle a certain number of men. A third wire is sent to the general officer commanding each military district, through whom the dispersal station is again notified. This gives the dispersal station a double check.

Various voluntary organizations and the citizens of Halifax, St. John, Quebec and Montreal all give soldiers every assistance. Canteens and club rooms are open. Coffee and cigarettes are provided. Telegrams are sent for the men.

A permanent transportation committee of railroad experts, representing the C.P.R., the G.T.R., and the Canadian National Railways, arrange for special trains to meet every transport.

On the Train.

Troop trains consist of colonist, tourist, commissariat, standard sleeping and dining cars. A Y.M.C.A. representative is on every train.

Should a stop-over or delay become unavoidable, the men are provided for. Barracks and an ample food supply are available at the following divisional points: Halifax, Amherst, St. John, Mount Joli, Levis, Megantic, Quebec, Montreal, Cochrane, North Bay, Port Arthur, Winnipeg, Brandon, Regina, Calgary, Edmonton, Revelstoke, Vancouver.

At the Dispersal Station.

The principal city in each area is the dispersal station. When the troop train pulls in, the relatives and friends of the men have been notified and are on hand. Voluntary organizations have motor cars at the station. Municipal reception committees are also on hand.

In each city the military have provided every accommodation for men staying overnight—barracks, rations. Out-of-town men who are given overnight leave and do not wish to remain in barracks can find the best of accommodation at hostels provided by voluntary organizations.

The Discharge.

Men taken sick en route are immediately received by the District Depot for medical treatment and receive pay as part of that unit.

All other men are paraded at the dispersal station. The offices here are so arranged that each man can pass quickly from one to the other and get away in the shortest time.

First comes the ordnance office. Here the men turn in their equipment, except steel helmets and clothing, which they are allowed to keep.

Next is the office of the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment. Here each man is given advice and information on the many questions relating to his return to civil life—employment, housing, vocational training, medical treatment.

Men who are unfit for their former employment are taken on the strength of the Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment for vocational training. They are paid during this period and their dependents receive separation allowance.

Third is the paymaster's office. Here the men receive their back pay, clothing allowance of $35.00 and first month's War Service Gratuity.

Finally the officer commanding issues each man his discharge certificate, and in the same office is a railway ticket agent who gives each man a ticket to his home town. The man is now a civilian.

Here also is an information and complaint office. All complaints are dealt with and information given by an officer specially chosen for that purpose.

The dispersal station will supply quarters and meals for men until train time.

The Government's care for the soldier does not end when he passes through the dispersal station. The important work of other departments will be covered in reports immediately following this.

BASEBALL TERMS PUZZLE ALL THE BRITISH FANS

Extraordinary Language Used by Players Mystifies London Patrons of the Game.

London, Jan. 14.—As long as present weather conditions hold in some part of England winter baseball will be the foundation of the athletic program set up by the Y. M. C. A. to keep American troops contended and stifle their impatience as the months go by and they remain as far from home as ever.

Plentiful supplies of equipment have been obtained by "Y," officials and are to be had by the troops for the asking. But the requests are not all for balls and bats and gloves. An American lieutenant following an exciting experience at a game in a series which schedules a contest almost every day, has asked that the games in which he takes prt be held within closed gates.

It happened this way. The lieutenant had brought a team from an air base for a game arranged by the Y. M. C. A. for the benefit of the English Red Cross. His team was one run behind, the tying run was on second base and a heavily hitter strode up to the plate swinging three bats in his best Ty Cobb style.

"Hit her on the nose, Dixie! A hit means the runs that ties it up. Come, boy, bring home the bacon!"

"What extraordinary language! 'Hit her on the nose and bring home the bacon!' Very extraordinary indeed-"

Dixie ingloriously fanned, and as the lieutenant walked disconsolately back to the bench a venturesome young woman asked him why the players abused each other so.

"They're just kidding," replied the American, now imbued with a determination to stand his ground and justify his lapse from military dignity. "It's all joshing, jollying, you know, trying to talk each other out of a play. It all goes."

"Well, I should think they would give each other a sporting chance at least."

And as she resumed her seat another young woman queried.

"The pitcher? Who's he? What's he got too much of and on what?"

The lieutenant explained as best he could, ignoring a suggestion that the pitcher ought to be a sport and give the batter a chance to hit the ball, and was fumbling with a reply to a request for information as to how the batter knew a ball or a strike was coming when some one threw him a rope.

"Now, young ladies, let this officer attend to his game while an old girl who played rounders fifty years ago tells you all about it."

The lieutenant seconded the motion and spent the rest of the afternoon in deep centerfield.

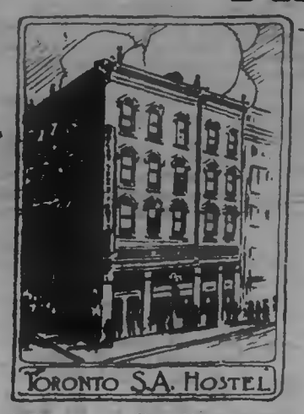
Soldiers Home The Salvation Army Coming Campaign

The Boys Have Done Their Part



The boys have won a great Victory. Their banners are crowned with glory. But they won't all be home for many weary months yet—perhaps 1920 will see some of them still waiting and longing——

We must see this thing through to a finish—just as they are doing. "Till the boys (all the boys) come home"—that was your pledge, and while there is a Canadian garrison on duty in Germany or elsewhere; a Canadian company in Paris, Boulogne, London, Liverpool, or anywhere else, waiting for transport, Canadian troops landing in Halifax, St. John, or Montreal; or returned soldiers waiting to start civilian life again—THERE THE SALVATION ARMY LASSIE MUST BE.

The Salvation Army Million Dollar Fund

January 19th to 25th

"FIRST TO SERVE—LAST TO APPEAL"

Think what might happen to your boys with military discipline relaxed and no Salvation Army to furnish the fun and a song, to bake pies, fry the eternal eggs, mend clothes, provide a place to write to you, steer the boys out of graver dangers than German shells, and mother them in the hundred and one ways every man needs and never misses until he is away from his women folks.

Repatriation

Then think how vitally necessary it is that the Salvation Army should keep open the doors of its Hostels—yes, and open MORE Hostels—right here in Canada, for the returned soldier, from the moment he lands until he has settled down to civilian life again. Assure our boys Hostel comfort in Halifax, St. John, Quebec, Montreal, Kingston, Toronto, London, Chatham, Winnipeg and Vancouver.

The Hostels are soldiers' hotels where the men can find a hearty, wholesome welcome, find good entertainment, home cooking, clean beds, and a bath;—all at prices they can afford to pay.

If they haven't the Hostels, where will they go? THAT is the problem. It is for you to answer by your whole-hearted help!

Remember how the boys went away with your promise ringing in their ears: "We'll keep the home fires burning till the boys come home." And we WILL too,—till the last boy is home and settled down.

"By love serve one another"

OREGON FARMER GAINS 28 POUNDS

"I SIMPLY FEEL LIKE A NEW MAN," SAYS BEAVERTON, AFTER TAKING TANLAC

"To look at me now you'd hardly think that just a little while ago my life was despaired of and I was told to make my plans accordingly; but Tanlac has fixed me up so I am out in the fields every day forking hay, and that's a strong man's job I can tell you."

This remarkable statement was made the other day by William Welch, a well-known farmer who has lived all his life about a mile northeast of Beaverton, Oregon, on Route 4, Box 31, in telling of his wonderful recovery through the use of Tanlac.

"I had always enjoyed pretty good health up to the first of last March," he continued, "when something seemed to go wrong and I got into such a run down condition that I fell off from a hundred and fifty-five to a hundred and thirty-two pounds, a loss of twenty-three pounds. I was terribly weak and my heart would beat and thump so fast that I could hardly rest at night. I had to be very careful about what I would eat and for three months I lived on the very lightest kind of diet. My skin had a yellowish sallow look like I didn't have any blood in my veins and I wasn't able to do a lick of work on my farm. I got mighty discouraged, for none of the medicines I took did me any good and I really thought my time had come.

"I was in this awful fix when I read about the wonderful way Tanlac was helping others, so I got me a bottle. Well, I began to feel better soon after starting on it and kept on improving right along as I kept on taking it. I have just finished my second bottle, and I have not only gotten back all my weight but am actually five pounds heavier than I was before I was sick at all, that is I have gained twenty-eight pounds since I began taking Tanlac. I don't have a bit of trouble now and simply feel like a new man."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. E. Warne Drug Co. Ltd.; in Havelock, by A. C. Deatke; in Lakefield, by Tanner Drug Co. Ltd.; in Fowlers' Corners, by W. A. Hunter; in Cetert, by A. J. Scott; in Westwood, by G. Pringle & Son.

ARE BRITISH BRIDES

Ottawa, Jan. 14.—Although full particulars are as yet unavailable, it is established that by far the greater majority of the 50,000 soldiers' dependents still to come to Canada are the wives of Canadian fighters married in Great Britain since the outbreak of the war, many of whom will see the shores of the Dominion for the first time when they come with their soldier-husbands between now and the end of August, when it is hoped by the Government that overseas demobilisation will have been completed.

RECEPTION FOR THE EX-PRESIDENT

MR. TAFT WILL RECEIVE A WARM WELCOME TO PETERBOROUGH.

On January 23rd Peterborough will have a distinguished visitor in the person of ex-President Taft, who will be here as one of the speakers in Lyceum Course, arranged by the local Council of Women.

In connection with the preparations to accord him a welcome, Mr. R. R. Hall and Col. Arthur Stevenson, constituted a deputation to the Council at its meeting last night.

They stated that upon his arrival in the city Mr. Taft will be met by American friends who will show him about the city during the afternoon, and in the evening at five o'clock, he will be given an address by the Bar Association, after which there will be an informal dinner at the Empress Hotel, at which it was hoped that Mayor and Council would be present.

It was decided that each person who attended this dinner would pay his own way, but Mr. Hall and Col. Stevenson intimated that if the Council wished, the dinner to assume the form of a public function, tendered by the city and would like to assume full control of the arrangements they were at liberty to do so.

It was decided that the Council would attend the dinner and the details of the arrangements were left with the Reception Committee. Mayor Duncan felt that the Council and committee already had enough responsibility to engage their attentions and seemed to favor the idea of attendnig the dinner as guests and not making the city assume the role of host.

WHERE HARMONY REIGNS SUPREME

REV. R. J. WEBB COMPLIMENTED BY MURRAY STREET BAPTIST CONGREGATION.

On Sunday morning a matter of more than ordinary interest occurred at Murray Street Baptist Church. Just before the sermon by the pastor Rev. J. R. Webb Dr. W. D. Scott stepped up to the platform saying that he had been requested to represent the members of the church in expressing congratulations to the pastor, and thanksgiving that he had today begun his twelfth year as pastor of the congregation. The doctor after speaking of the progress made during the period said that the people are hoping that Mr. Webb will be spared for years not only to the Christian ministry but to minister to Murray Street Church.

The pastor was taken completely by surprise not having any idea of the plan of his people, but in well chosen words he expressed his gratitude and the pleasure he had always experienced in working with the membership of the church.

POPE ADDRESSES LETTER TO CHURCH

URGES CATHOLICS TO CARRY OUT DECISION OF PEACE CONFERENCE.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Quebec, Jan. 15.—Pope Benedict is to use all influences with the Catholics the world over to have them accept and loyally carry out all the decisions that may be arrived at by the peace conference. In a letter addressed to the Hierarchy of the world, a copy of which has been received by Cardinal Begin, His Holiness deals with the coming peace and enjoins all Catholics to pray that the delegates to the conference may be enlightened from on high.

CIVIL SERVANTS TO GET INCREASE

MARRIED MEN GET BONUS OF $200, SINGLE MEN $100.

Ontario civil servants are to get a war bonus. This morning a deputation headed by Albert Grigg, Deputy Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines, and president of the Civil Service Assocaton; Deputy Minister of Mines Gibson, Dr. Merchant and S. Squires, of the Ontario Fisheries, interviewed the Premier and got the promise of a war bonus.

Some time ago it was stated that civil servants had decided to ask the Government for a war bonus, and yesterday they went to the Premier, and he promised them what they desided.

"It will be $200 for married men and $100 for single," said the Premier, "but this will not be for those in outside institutions who have free who have perquisites; that is those houses, etc., will not get the war bonus.

"It is understood that this is strictly a war bonus for this year. The civil service commissioner has not yet made his recommendations as to increases in salaries, but there will be some adjustments made as soon as his report is in."

REIGN OF TERROR HAS BEEN BROUGHT TO END

Bolshevism Appears to Have Been Crushed Out in Berlin—Only Occasional Outbreaks by Small Bands of Night Prowlers.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Berlin, Jan. 15. —Berlin's long week of Bolshevism is finally ended. Here and there scattered desperadoes, mostly youths, still fire occassionally from some house top and during the nights attempt are made by small bands of followers of Dr. Karl Leibknecht to revive the reign of terror. They are insignificant, however, compared with what has passed. Dr. Leibknecht's sister was arrested yesterday and several hundred rebels are locked up awaiting trial, which, in-as-much as martial law was not proclaimed, must be left to the regular courts. Losses inflicted on each side during the past week are as yet estimated only roughly, but it is believed that they will greatly exceed 200 dead and a thousand wounded. The overwhelming majority of these are Bolshevists.

Greece Presents Its War Claim

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Jan. 15.—Through Premier Venizelos, the Greek Goernment has presented to the Peace Congress its claims representing the Hellenic nation of eight million people. Greece claims North Epirus and all of Thrace with the exception of Constantinople itself, which it is willing to forego for the sake of permitting it to be taken over by an international league of nations. Turkey and Bulgaria must be strongly curbed by the Peace Congress, to give permanent peace in the Balkans.

SOLDIER KILLED ON WAY OVERSEAS

RIFLEMAN KAY OF INGERSOLL FELL INTO HOLD OF TRANSPORT

(By W. E. Playfair, Canadian Press Correspondent)

Vladivostick, Jan. 15.—C. F. Just of the Canadian economic commission to Siberia, is here awaiting the arrival of his fellow commissioners. Competent authorities here say the vast trade possibilities for Canada in Siberia are at present unavailable owing to the lack of transportation to the interior. The railway situation is the dominating factor.

Rifleman Joseph Kay, son of Mrs. Desmond, of Ingersoll, Ont., fell into the hold of the ship Teesta on the voyage here from Vancouver and was killed.

TO ENFORCE DECREES OF NEW PEACE LEAGUE

That Is the only Dispute Now in Connection With Question—Will Allied Force Be Necessary or Will Persuasion Suffice?

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Jan. 15.—With the resumption today of the meeting's preliminary to the Peace Conference, it is apparent that the movement to create a league of nations is being carried on by two forces, having the same object, but differing as to the means for making effective the decisions of the proposed world society.

One of these represents the contention that the decisions of the League must be backed by its combined physical forces, while the other represents the view that its findings can be enforced without the aid of a common world police force Diplomatists, watching the movement of the two ideas as they come into bearing before the Conference, seem impressed with the view that both are moving toward a common ground which, for example, might provide that nations could reserve for each individual case their decision whether they would utilize armed force or avail themselves of other means.

Students Oppose Military Drill

The students of the University of Toronto are very much dissatisfied at being forced to take military drill now that the war is over. At a largely-attended meeting yesterday the students of University College strongly condemned the practise, and asked the Students' Administrative Council to take action in the matter. A special meeting of the Students' Council has been called for Friday to consider the question. Compulsory drill was commenced, one of the members told The Globe, in 1916, and since then the students have had to drill twice a week. Returned and discharged men, and students not physicaly fit, are exempt from drill leaving, he declared, a minority that have to drill.

REV. T. H. MITCHELL RESIGNS HIS PASTORATE IN TORONTO

Former Minister in Charge of St. Andrew's Church Here Is Forced to Retires on Account of Ill Health.

Rev. T. H. Mitchell, pastor of Old St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Toronto, formerly of this city, has resigned his charge. Formal resignation was received by the Secretary of the Presbytery, who informed the congregation on Sunday through Rev. Dr. Robert Law, the associate pastor.

Mr. Mitchell states that he is resigning partly on account of ill-health, and that he intends to take up a special line of study which he had long contemplated before accepting the pastorate of St. Andrew's Church.

The resignation will be considered at the annual meeting of the congregation, which will be held this evening.

Rev. J. H. Mitchell came to this city from a church in London to take charge of St. Andrew's Church, during the absence overseas of Rev. James Rollins, the regular pastor who went to Europe as quartermaster of the 93rd battalion. Mr. Mitchell soon was regarded as one of the ablest preachers in the city and he was popular with the masses with out regard to denomination. His health, however, was always a handicap. While well enough physically he was the victim of nervous trouble which was caused by overwork. Several times while here it was feared he would be obliged to give up his duties just as he had been compelled to resign in London after a successful pastorate of nine years.

When the unexpected call came to him from old St. Andrew's Church, Toronto, he hesitated about accepting it and only decided to do so when it became known that he was to have an associate in the work and would be required to preach only one sermon every Sunday. He went to Toronto with the understanding that if he found himself unequal to his new duties he would retire.

Mr. Mitchell owns a farm near Toronto and it has always been his ambition to retire sometime to this retreat and spend his last days close to nature, while at the same time carrying on the literary work that he has been engaged in for years and preaching at intervals,as the occasion arose. He probbaly has the same haven of rest in mind now.

While he was in Peterborough Mr. Mitchell was active in every branch of the work of the church and took an especial interest in the various men's societies. His removal from Peterborough occasioned universal regret among his own congregation and those of all other denominations in the city. He liked Peterborough, the people here, the congregation and the work and under other conditions there is not a doubt that he would have staid indefinitely at St. Andrew's.

EX-MAYOR BULLER ELECTED CHAIRMAN OF HEALTH BOARD

Filled Same Position Last Year--Miss Reid, the Matron of Isolation Hospital Resigns.

EX-MAYOR BULLER
Re-elected president of the Board of Health.

Last night the first meeting of the Board of Health for this year was held, the following members in attendance. Wm. Buller, James Murty, H. Morgan and Dr. C. H. Amys, M.O.H.

Mr. Buller was re-appointed chairman upon motion of Dr. Amys and Mr. Murty.

Miss H. Reid wrote the Board resigning her position as acting matron of the Isolation hospital, to take effect on February 14th. It was accepted and Chairman Buller and Dr. Amys were appointed a committee to choose a successor.

Miss Kincaid, a member of the nursing staff of the Isolation Hospital was given an increase in salary of $100 and the caretaker R. Hunt, was allowed $50 increase per year.

Reports were received upon the goods transferred from the Emergency hospital to the Isolation hospital and covering the month of December 1918.

The annual report of the Isolation hospital for the year 1918, as submitted by the acting matron Miss Reid, shows that the number of patients admitted during the year was 35; 28 of whom suffered from scarlet fever, 5 from diphtheria, 1 from measles, and 1 from mumps. There were six patients in the hospital at the begining of the year, making a total for 1918 of 41. Of these 39 were from the city and two from outlying points.

There were 36 patients discharged during the year and only one death as a result of pnaumonia following influenza.

Up to the present in January of this year there are four patients in the institution, all of them suffering from scarlet fever.

Accounts rendered $1033.10
Received on account 555.55
Total expenditure $4764.47

Miss Reid stated that new floors had been laid in the nurses' apartments and recommended that the building be painted and the cement work around the windows which was cracked to a degree which allowed the wind and rain to beat in should be repaired. Some windows needed glazing which might be responsible for the seeming impossibility of keeping the nurses' quarters warm. It might also be attributed to the coal and of course last winter was extremely cold.

Messrs Morgan and Murty introduced a motion which was carried recommending the City Council that the percentage of butter fat in the milk sold in the city be increased from 3 to 3.25 per cent and that there be a standardization set for domestic cream.

Upon motion of Messrs Murty and Morgan a resolution was carried recommending to the City Council that obstructions inside the entrance to the market hall—caused by vendors be prohibited and that fish vendors be forbidden to carry on business in the market hall either upstairs or down in order that the place may be kept in a more sanitary state.

A recommendation will also be forwarded to the City Council suggesting that a roadway be opened up from a point north of the Protestant Home, through to the west of the Isolation Hospital and that the M.O. H. appear before the city council in connection with this matter at its next meeting.

City Engineer Parsons will be requested to furnish information regarding the possibility of providing sewed connections to houses facing on Park and Gilmour streets, north of Murray, to the creek.

A motion was passed recommending that in the interests of sanitation in the City the Council should invite the M. O. H. to meet with them and discuss the building by-laws.

GEN. WILLIAMS TO VISIT CITY

NEW OFFICER COMMANDING THIS DISTRICT MAY ADDRESS PUBLIC MEETING.

General Williams, the new general officer commanding military district No. 3, will visit Peterborough some time this month to meet the officers of the garrison, returned officers, veterans and citizens, generally.

Arrangements have not yet been completed but possibly a great mass meeting will be held in the Armouries at which the General, who was a prisoner of war in Germany for some time will speak. General Williams is a distinguished officer and well worth hearing. Arrangements in connection with his visit will be announced later.

INDUCTION AT TRENTON

Trenton, Jan. 15.—Rev. R. A. Cranston, M.A., formerly of Palmerston, has been formally inducted into the pastorate of St. Andrew's Church here.

The 1937 Victory bond reached a new high price of 103 at Montreal.

Minister of Labor Here Tomorrow

Hon. G. D. Hobertson, Minister of Labor will arrive at Peterborough at 3.30 tomorrow. At 6.30 p.m. he will address the Canadian Club at a luncheon in the Empress Hotel and later in the evening will speak at a meeting of the labor men of the city in their hall on George street.

Hon. G. D. Robertson was appointed to the Senate last year and was made Minister without portfolio in the Union Government. Upon the retirement of Hon. T. W. Crothers as Minister of Labor he succeeded to his position. He was the logical and unanimous choice of Labor as he is a member of the Telegraphers' Union and a genuine brother of the workers fraternity of Canada. He is a resident of St. Catharines.

Tickets for the Canadian Club banquet can be obtained from the secretary, Mr. V. J. McElderry or at the Empress before the banquet tomorrow evening.

Senator Robertson's address promises to be of unusual interest to employers and workingmen alike. The labor situation is one of the most acute before the public today. The Senator understands the situation from all angles and it is believed that he will give an outline of the probable course to be pursued and the labor legislation to be brought down at the next session of Parliament.

At the public meeting in the Labor Hall, after the luncheon at the hotel Senator Robertson will hear the views of the workingmen and listen to all suggestions as to their desires in the way of amendments to the present laws directly affecting them. The case of political prisoners will also be brought up.

When Senator Robertson reaches the city he will go direct to the Empress where he will be pleased to receive callers during the afternoon.

Salvation Army Drive, January 20

On the twentieth of this month the great Million Dollar Drive to raise funds to carry on the work connected with demobilization, activities of the Salvation Army will be launched in Peterborough where the objective is set at $30,000. The teams are organized and everything is ready for what will in all probability be the last appeal to the public in connection with war work. The drive will last three days, Jan. 20, 21, and 22nd.

The money to be raised is required for the following purposes:

Hostels for returned soldiers.
Emergency receiving and maternity homes for women and children.
Home visitation and home helpers work.
Industrial homes for jobless men to work out their own salvation.
District nursing of the poor.
Shelters and food depots.
Tracing last and missing friends.
Rescue home sfor fallen women and their children.
Prison visitation and welfare work and Homes for Ex-Prisoners.
Day nurseries for children of working women.
Night patrols to protect young girls.
To serve humanity in every hour of need.

The Salvation Army was the first to serve and is the last to appeal.

MEETING THURSDAY EVENING

Thursday evening a meeting will be held in the interests of the Red Shield Drive of the Salvation Army to raise, locally a share of the million dollar fund for welcome and reconstruction work. The Mayor will preside at the meeting. Speakers will address the gathering and explain the objects and bespeak all assistance.

Thursday evening, 16th, is the date. Commences at eight o'clock.

The Army has not made any general appeal to the country as to the Canadian public for assistance in its work for the war. It has depended on voluntary offerings and small collections, and has lent its full strength to assist the appeals of other organizations. Today, seeing the need to be as great as ever, although different, the Salvation Army appeal to the generosity of the people of Canada, to put them in funds to provide for such of the men returning and their families as are in need.

Come to the meeting and hear the appeal.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 15, 1919

THE PLAYGROUNDS ASSOCIATION.

THE WORK of the Playgrounds Association has been carried on for several seasons in this city, thanks to the energy of a number of public-spirited ladies, assisted by a comparatively small number of men who were of the same way of thinking. The Board of Education, when appealed to, have at times extended slight assistance, not altogether with good grace either. However, a change seems to have come over the civic spirit.

Mr. J. W. Worth, a member of the Board of Education for the past year, has always been an advocate of the Playgrounds Association and a working member. He has the written opinion of the Minister of Education that the School Board can just as legally maintain properly supervised playgrounds for the benefit of the children during the summer vacation as for the ten months of the school year. During that period the grounds are open to the children, and their games, if not supervised by a paid official, are always conducted under the eyes of the teachers.

The opinion of Hon. Dr. Cody may or may not be good law, but it will appeal to the most of us as good common sense, and nothing more should be required.

Ald. Turner, whose active interest in the welfare of the rising generation is well known, brought this matter up at the first meeting of the new Council. He believes that the Board of Education should assume the responsibility, financial and otherwise, for this work, and Mayor Duncan took the same view, adding that the increase in the Board's estimates for 1919 should be ample to provide for this additional burden.

There is practically a new Board of Education now in control of the educational system of the city. Trustee Cameron, as well as Trustee Worth, has been a Playgrounds Association advocate and worker. There are others. Trustee McKone, the new member, is a well-known advocate of physical as well as mental culture, and great things are expected of him in his public capacity. There seems no reason why the ladies of the city who have maintained this admirable work for years should be reduced to the necessity of almost begging for funds for the carrying on of their altruistic service.

PETERBOROUGH'S DISTINGUISHED GUEST.

PETERBOROUGH will next week have the honor of entertaining one of the most distinguished American citizens in the person of ex-President William Howard Taft, who comes to the city to lecture in the Chautauqua course and for whose visit the enterprise of the Local Council of Women is entitled to all the credit. Peterborough proposes to extend to Mr. Taft a hearty welcome. There are American citizens in this city who will be the first to greet their fellow-countryman. Then the local Bar Association will give him an official welcome, and will not only present him with an address but will entertain him at an informal dinner.

No honor which the legal fraternity can confer upon ex-President Taft will be misplaced, because no brighter ornament to the legal profession has ever existed. It was first as a lawyer that he made his mark in his own country, and his promotion was steady from the start. He began the practice of his profession in Cincinnati after graduating from Yale and the Law School, and was successively prosecuting attorney for his district, Judge of the Superior Court of the State of Ohio, and afterwards Judge of the United States Circuit Court. Both positions first mentioned were reached by popular election instead of by the easier process of appointment by a political party.

In all of these positions Mr. Taft was distinguished for his integrity and ability, and it was not long before he was enjoying a nation-wide reputation. Early in the present century there was a demand for his public services in a still wider field, and in 1901 he was appointed governor of the Philippines, a position that required the tact and judgment for which he was noted. After this he filled public offices in which diplomacy of a high standard was essential. In 1904 he was appointed Secretary of War in the Roosevelt Cabinet. Two years later he was sent to Cuba to deal with the insurrection there, and just as he had previously done in the Philippines, he succeeded in restoring order. One year later, when the work of building the Panama Canal was in danger of collapse owing to climatic and other difficulties, he was sent to Panama on a tour of inspection, and devised the sanitary and other plans that made the completion of the waterway possible. After his election to the presidency he again visited the scene of his former triumph.

No man at that time had a higher regard for Mr. Taft than had the late ex-President Roosevelt, who during his administration leaned upon him and was guided by his sane counsel in every difficult public question that arose. Mr. Taft was Col. Roosevelt's choice as his successor in office, and the presidential mantle passed from one to the other almost as a legacy.

It is well known that a political career never really appealed to Mr. Taft. All his tastes were judicial, and the ambition of his early life was to reach the bench of the United States Supreme Court, a position which he could have had for the asking from either President McKinley or Roosevelt. But he was persuaded, against his will no doubt, to devote his talents to other lines of duty.

Mr. Taft became president, lacking real political training. He was unable to understand the chicanery and the schemings by which he was surrounded, and congressmen and senators of easy political virtue were often able, in the parlance of the day, to "put it all over him." But during his term of office he developed a wonderful independence which turned against him the clique who had hoped that he would be as putty in their hands. His presidential career shows not one single stain on his honor. He had high ideals, being a statesman if he was not a politician, but his plans for the betterment of humanity were frustrated by the enemies that he made by his independence.

With a united party in 1912 Mr. Taft would have been re-elected president. The world is only seven years older since his defeat, but that time has been sufficient to demonstrate that in the main points of his policy he was right. If he made enemies in Canada by his Reciprocity pact, it must be admitted that if the measure was emphatically rejected here, it has since to all intents and purposes been given effect in the United States.

Ex-President Taft was always opposed to war, but since the outbreak of hostilities four years ago he has been a devoted friend to the Allied cause and has from the first urged participation in the struggle by his own country. Anyone who knows the ex-president believes that he was actuated by principle rather than by political expediency, something to which he is really a stranger. He could distinguish between a war of aggression and one waged for the defence of honor, liberty and civilization.

During his term of office Mr. Taft devised an alliance that was really in embryo the present proposed league of nations. He perfected a treaty with leading European powers by which all international disputes were to be settled by a court of arbitration, but the United States Senate refused to ratify the agreement. The late Col. Roosevelt, at that time an editorial writer, attacked the treaty with characteristic energy, taking the ground that it was a surrender of the inalienable right of Congress to declare war or make peace.

A posthumous article by the late Col. Roosevelt, just published, favors a league of nations. If the late Colonel is right, if the leading statesmen of Europe are right in 1919, then it follows that Mr. Taft had, ten the right idea ten years ago, even if he was in advance of the times. The men who favor a league of nations now are learning by experience to lock the stable door after the horse has been stolen. Mr. Taft would have guarded against the theft by timely precaution. Had his plan been perfected out of it, there is something more than a possibility that a powerful alliance between the United States and European powers would have grown strong enough to have prevented the late war.

Some Canadian newspapers bewail the fact that the United States, especially that considerable section of the people comprised in the Republican party, lack a leader now that Col. Roosevelt has passed. There is no warrant for anything like commiseration while Mr. Taft is spared. He is in all respects the equal of his former colleague in everything save in aggression and personal magnetism. He is safe and sane and may yet be recalled to the highest place in his nation's gift. That which the nation's builders rejected in 1912 may yet become the cornerstone of the structure.

A QUESTION OF REPRISAL.

EVER SINCE the recent barbarous hanging of a condemned criminal in the Toronto jail nearly two weeks ago, there have been a number of letters dealing with the matter published in the Toronto papers. Some correspondents take the ground that execution should be by electricity instead of hanging. Others would abolish capital punishment altogether, while still others defend it. The chief contention of the latter is that the man who takes human life cannot expect other than to forfeit his own. This is the old principle of reprisal in a new setting.

When the Germans violated every rule of civilized warfare, when they used poisonous gas in their operations against their opponents, when they shelled unfortified cities, and dropped bombs from airplanes upon other defenceless towns, the British hesitated a long time before making reprisals. The inhuman tactics of the Huns had it was for a long time contended, no justification for the adoption of the same methods by any nation that had regard for the laws of God or man. Still, as a matter of self-defence, retaliation was finally resorted to and carried on to an extent that made the efforts of the Huns appear inconsequential by comparison.

Reprisal, however, was a last resort, a policy adopted when all appeals to humanity, all protests against such outrageous disregard for solemn international treaties, had failed. If, however, the Allies had been able to capture the men responsible for the barbarities, and so to prevent their ocurrence, the necessity for reprisal would have been obviated.

The man who in civil life commits murder, even in a single instance, has little consideration shown him as compared to that extended to the one in high place who murders by wholesale and by cruel methods that the offenders of lesser degree would even in the heat of passion hesitate to adopt. But the murderer can be sequestered and so prevented for all time from repeating his crime. In his case reprisal is not necessary.

The nation that hesitates, in its dealings with another power, to take life in kind, should be slow to wreak its vengeance upon some individual for whose execution there is not the same reason as there is for reprisals against an adversary who can be reached in no other way.

DRUG HABIT IN LONDON SOCIETY

(By Dowager.)

The drug habit that has recently been responsible for a sure-going London society, has provided a subject for discussion and grave consideration that cannot have its importance over-estimated. I saw it stated the other day in a well-known and widely read London paper hat the drug taking habit had had a very decided impetus given to it since the war. Whether this is true or not I cannot say, but without a doubt the most awful dramas are constantly being hushed up, and one feels that sooner or later there is going to be a denouement thta will bring forth revelations involving people whose names are well known and whose addiction to drugs are matters of half-public knowledge throughout a certain set.

The death of the very pretty, twenty-two year old actress called "Billie" Carleton, which has been engaging the attention of the authorities ever since her tragic end after the Victory Ball at the Albert Hall a few weeks ago, has given considerable impetus to official investigations. I am interested in noticing the name of a certain man who has been the most severely questioned witness in this case, for it has brought back to my memory another drug-taking case with which he was connected.

My memory goes back to the time when poor Anna Robinson (who married the Earl of Rosslyn, from whom she obtained a divorce about eight years ago), was a friend of this same man who is now being questioned in connection with drugs and the sale of drugs in London.

It was well known about five years ago that Lady Rosslyn was addicted to drugs, that her special "dope" was veronal, which at that time could be obtained at druggists' shops for an indefinite period if a doctor's prescription could be produced. This poor pretty woman, who died so tragically in New York about 18 months ago, would absorb veronal in large quantities and then she evidently required some stronger stimulant, and with the man who is now being so closely examined as a witness in the present drug case, used to take heroin and other poisonous compounds. When Lady Rosslyn went back to New York about three years ago the man who was her partner in this drug-taking duet remained in London, where he is now one of the best known designers of dresses for stage and society. I saw him in the street with his lawyer a couple of days after the first hearing of the case relative to the death of poor little Billie Carleton and I must say I have never seen a more terribly nerve-shattered looking creature. His appearance gave one to suppose that no amount of "dope" could silence the fears that beset him, and his face was positively ashen-hued and his eyes, with their large distended pupils, looked as if he were haunted. And yet he is going about London in the same old way, and I saw him recently being spoken to by quite reputable people at a first performance at a fashionable theatre.

I suppose every great city has its quota of these people who fatten upon the weaknesses of others, but it seems strange that they should be allowed to move about spreading their poisonous practices in every direction.

TODAY'S STORY

Meekly made up his mind that he wasn't going to be bossed any longer by his wife, so when he went home at noon he called out imperiously: "Laura."

Mrs. Meekly came out of the kitchen with perspiration on her face, her hands covered with war flour, and a rolling pin in her hand.

"What do you want with Laura?" she asked.

Meekly staggered, but braced himself up. "I want you to understand madam"—and he tapped his breast dramatically—"that I am the engineer of this establishment; that I am—"

"Oh, you are, are you? Well, Joseph, I want you to understand that I"—and she looked dangerous—"I am the boiler that might blow up and sling the engineer over into the next street. I hope you hear the steam escaping, Joseph?"

Joseph heard and prayed that he might be passed grade one when he went before the medical board.

FEMININE LOGIC

The young lady across the way says she saw in the paper that the entire output of the American Chicle company had been commandeered by the government and she supposes almost anything on wheels will be useful in France for a long time to come.

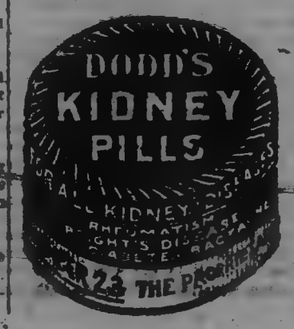
LABORITE DECLINES POST

Stephen Walsh Does Not Want Cabinet Position

London, Jan. 15.—Stephen Walsh Laborite, has refused to accept his appointment as Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Board of Trade, which was announced on Friday. His retirement leaves only four Labor representatives in the Government, compared to eight in the previous administration.

William Roniker, wanted for embezzlement of $30,000 Bank of Cambridge, Mass., has been arrested in Montreal.

Guelph police are still working on the Fedesco murder case, but have made no arrests as yet.



WIT AND WISDOM

"I suppose your son broke himself down at college football?"

"No; the doctor said what gave him nervous prostration was trying to get his lessons between the games."

"Are you in favor of protection or free trade?"

"It's a delicate question," replied Senator Sorghum. "There is a difference of opinion among my constituents as to which I really favor. And I don't propose just now to break in and try to decide any dispute."

Looks Suspicious.

Mrs. A.—My husband wanted to select a hat for me.

Mrs. B.—Perhaps he wanted to get even with you for selecting his ties.

The Limit.

"You look unhappy, old man."

"I am. I am almost as unhappy as a woman with a secret that nobody wants to know."

Airy About It.

"Where are you going, John?"

"To raise the win."

"What for?"

"To meet a draft."

Beating the Band to It.

"So you don't consider your political rival a leader."

"Well," said Senator Sorghum, "he's the sort of a leader our village band used to have. He had to beat time mighty carefully so as not to get out of rhythm with the men who really know the tune."

Located.

"Dear Clara," wrote the young man, "pardon me, but I'm getting so forgetful! I proposed to you last night, but really forget whether you said 'yes' or 'no.'"

"Dear Will," she replied by note, "so glad to hear from you! I knew that I said 'no' to someone last night but I had forgotten who it was."

Jones—Can you manage to meet your expenses?

Jorkins—Meet them! Jerusalem, man, I can't run away from them!

How They Got Rich.

Mrs. Blank—I could have married Mr. Brown or Mr. Jones if I'd wanted to, and both of these men I refused got rich, while you are still as poor as a church mouse.

Blank—Of course. I've been supporting you all these years—they haven't.

The Ensign—There seems to be a good many barks in this night.

The Coxswain—Yes, sir. An ocean greyhound chased a catboat up our crosstrees.

Placing It.

Miss Gush—I just adore caviar, don't you?

Miss Green—I nevr heard him except on the phonograph.

Weigh your friends in the scale of prosperity and they will be found wanting—to borrow your money.

Make Some One Man Responsible

(Toronto World.)

If the Ontario Temperance Act is to be properly enforced some one official must be made primarily responsible for its enforcement. To import into or to sell liquor in this province or to consume liquor in certain places may be a crime in the eyes of the law, but it is not a crime like murder, arson, or theft, which all good citizens desire to punish. Even persons in entire sympathy with prohibitory legislation shrink from laying an information. The pecuniary reward to the informer repels rather than attracts the ordinary citizen. A man who would hasten to notify the police of a burglar would think twice before he informed on a neighbor who had violated the Ontario Temperance Act. The very word "informer" unmistakably carries with it in the minds of many a certain stigma.

This being the case the Ontario Government must prepare itself to enforce its prohibitory legislation, and as the first step in this direction it must place the responsibility for such enforcement squarely upon the back and shoulders of some member of the government. The attorney-general would seem to be the proper official and he cannot hide himself behind Sir John Gibson's famous declaration, "I am not a policeman." He must be made to be a policeman for enforcing the Ontario Temperance Act.

Our present long-winded statute could well be rewritten. Instead of containing 30,000 words the law should be couched in 300. It should be so simple that everyone could know what the law was, and many details that now load down the statue book should be committed to the regulatory power of the lieutenant-governor-in-council. But above everything else the law should provide for it's own enforcement.

Our neighbors in the United States long ago discovered that certain laws will not enforce themselves, and will be silly enforced if they have to rely for their enforcement upon private citizens and village constables. Hence when the United States Congress passes a statute like the anti-trust law or the railway act they place squarely upon some official the duty of enforcing that law and provide him with the men and money needed for such enforcement. They recognize that certain statutory offences will go unpunished unless some official makes it his business to see that they are punished. They have something like a standardized clause in certain acts of congress which reads as follows:

It shall be the duty of the attorney-general of the United States to enforce the provisions of this act and to institute and prosecute all proceedings, civil and criminal, that may be necessary for that purpose and to employ such agents, attorneys, experts and other assistants as may be required, and the sum of $..... is hereby appropriated for the enforcement of said act.

Liberal appropriations are made from year to year for the enforcement of certain statutes, in addition to the general appropriations for the administration of criminal justice. Our Dominion Government has special officials and special appropriations to enforce the laws against smuggling, to enforce inland revenue taxation, etc. Our provincial temperance legislation should be enforced by the province in the same business like way in which the laws against smuggling are enforced by the Dominion. There should be no passing the buck, but the responsibility for enforcing the law should be placed upon some official and upon his record that official must stand or fall.

LITTLE BENNY'S NOTEBOOK

(By Lee Pape.)

I wunted a nickel to go to the movies, and I looked for pop and he was taking a nap on the setting room sofer, me thinking, G, if I wake him up jest to ask him that, he proberly wouldn't do it enyhow because I woak him up.

Wich he proberly wouldent of, and I stood there a wile thinking he mite wake up by himself, wich he proberly would if Id of stood there long enuff, ony then it would of bin too late, and I thawt maybe if he woak up by axsident it would be all rite.

And I started to try to think of a good axsident, and all I could think of was leeving sumthing fall down stairs to make a noise, thinking, A chair would be a good thing, ony its too delicate. So I took the shoe blackening box out of the bathroom and undumped all the things out of it and carried it up to the top of the 3rd story stairs and pushed it down, banging agenst the bannisters and making sutch a fearse noise wen it landed you wouldent of thawt jest one blackening box could of did it, the lid coming off the hinges and hitting the bathroom door another fearse crack and pop coming running out of the setting room as awake as enything, saying, Wat the doose, who the devil, Benny, are you hert?

No sir, I sed up at the top of the steps. Wich just then pop saw the blackening box in 2 pieces and the big mark on the bathroom door, and I quick sed, I was up heer balancing it on the edge, pop, and it went down by axsident. Not telling him about me pushing it to make the axsident, and pop sed, Come down heer, I need you to take an important part in another axsident, and youre not going to be the innocent bystander, either.

WASHINGTON WOMEN WHO SET FASHIONS FOR OTHERS

(By Margaret Wade)

Washington, D.C., Jan. 11.—Now that the price of a woman's hats has been made the subject of debate in open senate with the conclusion that a hat under $15 is a necessity, but one over that price is a luxury, Washington may well ask itself how the average gown is to be classed—and indirectly taxed—by this once august body of lawmakers, most of whom are married men who ought to know better.

Even the most untrained masculine eye could hardly declare the new gowns one meets every day, and almost every hour, anything but luxurious if the $15 hat is to be accepted as standard of value. While furs! ! !

Well, even the average woman is willing to admit sable, chinchilla, ermine and a few other choice pelts to the acknowledged class, while the price put upon the humble gray squirrel and the once despised muskrat is putting these skins as made up by fashionable specifications quite beyond the means of the average woman, however anxious she may be to keep warm.

Mrs. Marshall Field is wearing a sable cape well below the waist line in full circular style in which the skins show very choice markings. With this she usually wears a modish one piece gown of black velvet, a rather large round hat, also black velvet, with ostrich plumes all about the crown. Not ostrich ornaments or made to order aigrettes, but real long rich curled plumes of the kind we used to see on picture hats, which are always elegant, as are the large pearl earrings which Mrs. Field wears on every occasion.

Mrs. Arthur Glasgow, formerly of London, but a native of Richmond, now reckoned among Washington's resident hostesses, is wearing one of the handsomest circular capes of the season in chinchilla. She tops this with a wonderful blue hat, a real bright blue velour or velvet, in a mushroom shape with gay flowers placed in a detached wreath about the crown. To keep the color note high Mrs. Glasgow also wears long blue earrings of turcoise presumably but cut in the colonial design of our great grandmother's gold ones.

Mrs. Aakel Wichfield wore, one recent cold afternoon, an otter cape just a trifle below the waist line with a round hat of unusual shape, being something larger than a turban, of otter, with double bills of the fur and a small round crown of the color velvet. This is evidently a part of the costume, as the skirt is otter colored cloth.

The small close rather high turban is meeting with great favor as the season advances. Mrs. H. Morgan Hill looks smart with a hat of this kind in beaver, topping an all black suit.

The colored gowns of cloth and velvet that have largely displaced the black and dark blue of last season in New York and several other American cities have not been as promptly accepted at the capital which makes the smart burgundy worn by Mrs. Medill McCormick a cheerful note in the headquarters of the republican woman's national committee, of which this clever and popular young matron is the chairman and worthy of that title.

Mrs. McCormick's warm hued gown is one of the soft cloths made in rather severe one piece model with square cut neck finished in the long plain white collar that is both smart and becoming. She tops this usually with a velvet hat of round shape with ostrich of the new henno tone encircling the crown.

One of the most pronounced of the new "Victory" colors which had its initiation in Washington at the Price-Collier-Fellows-Gordon wedding is the magenta of more than a generation ago which promises a great popularity.

The hats worn by Mrs. George Baker St. George as sister of the bride and the three bridesmaids, Miss Louise Delano and the Misses Frances and Louisa Hoar of this city and Springfield, Mass., were of meteora velvet encircled in ostrich of the same shade, while the gowns were a distinct contrast. Mrs. S. George wore a vivid blue gown—a new shade that takes its tone from the cobalt blue rather than the more popular French or Chinese blues.

The bridesmaids' gowns were also of a new tone in pink that bordered on the orchid. All were in smart, straight models, the matrons differing slightly in detail, as her gown had a panel effect back and front, thus losing the advantage of a smart girdle which on the bridesmaid's frocks reproduced the several tones of the costumes with an added line of gold.

The Misses Hoar are attractive young women, daughters of Mrs. Frederick Gillett by a former marriage, and granddaughters of the late Senator Hoar of Massachusetts who are, however, rarely identified with congressional society, as they have from their school days cultivated the diplomatic and residen tcircles wherein Miss Frances Hoar has been especially popular.

Miss Sara Price-Collier, the bride of this latest international marriage, was also very popular in the younger diplomatic circle and in spite of being of the heiresses of the capital, served as secretary to the French high commission during several months of the late war.

In one minute your clogged nostrils will open, the air passages of your head will clear and you can breathe freely. No more hawking, snuffing, blowing, headache, dryness. No struggling for breath at night, your cold or catarrh will be gone.

Get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist now. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic, healing cream in your nostrils. It penetrates through every air passage of the head, soothes the inflamed or swollen mucous membrane and relief comes instantly.

It's just fine. Don't stay stuffed-up with a cold or nasty catarrh—Relief comes so quickly.

Germ-Proof Money.

To a bank in Spokane, Wash., belongs the distinction of circulating the first antiseptic germ-proof national bank notes. The United States treasury is still experimenting with devices to launder dirty bank notes to bright, crisp ones, but the Spokane bank has the first sanitary money on record. Fifty thousand dollars in bills, put out by the bank, were signed with an ink said to consist largely of carbolic acid. The result is the bills are saturated with an agency which means death to the most vigorous germs which live there.

DRUGGISTS NOT AFFECTED.

By Medical Bill To Be Passed Next Session.

Toronto, Jan. 14.— The coming medical legislation in Ontario will not interfere in any way with the druggists. Yesterday a deputation representing the druggists of the province called upon Hon. I. B. Lucas and Hon. Dr. Cody to voice misgivings about the effect upon their business of the proposed definition of "practice of medicine." The Ministers assured them that the medical commissioner, Mr. Justice Hodgins, had had no thought of touching the druggists, and that the legislation brought down would make it clear that druggists did not come within the definition.

TROOPS COMING HOME.

Over Two Thousand Soldiers Are At Present on the Way.

Two thousand and eighty-five Canadians are now on their way home. The Scotian, carrying fourteen officers and 311 other ranks, was expected to dock at St. John last evening, the Metagami with forty officers, three cadets and 411 other ranks will probably arrive at St. John today, and the Olympic, which was substituted for the Aquitania on this trip, will arrive at Halifax on the 15th with 39 officers, forty-seven cadets and 1,220 other ranks. A majority of these men will be for the Toronto district.

Why the "Von."

"Von" before a name in German denotes a privilege title, either inherited or bestowed by a monarch upon his subject for meritorious services. While formally this prefix was found in military or feudal families only, many commoners, captains of industry, scientists, financiers and artists were so honored by their monarchs. The title is either hereditary or ceases with the death of the distinguished person.

Disgusted at Politics.

Recently a retired politician of note was giving a young man about to break into the political arena a bit of advice. "I've had everything it is possible to get except the presidency. When I started in politics things looked very bright—I got positions of trust, big appointments, and everything I wanted. Now all I have after years of activity is a lot of warm enemies and cold friends."

Fremont's Career.

The term "Pathfinder" was a complimentary nickname given John C. Fremont in the presidential campaign of 1856, in honor of his pathfinding explorations in the region of the Rocky Mountains. But he did not find the path to the presidency, receiving only 114 votes to 174 for James Buchanan.

LIBERALS FAVOR CUT IN TARIFF

RESOLUTION IS DRAWN UP AT A MEETING OF PARTY LEADERS IN OTTAWA.

Ottawa, Jan. 14.—As a preliminary to the general convention of Eastern Ontario Liberals, which will be held at St. Patrick's Hall here today a committee composed to two delegates from each of the twenty-three constituencies of the district passed a series of resolutions embodying the changes which the party would make in the tariff.

The resolution states: "the tariff increases of 7½ per cent and 5 per cent, should be immediately repealed but that there should also be an immediate downward revision of the tariff in accordance with the omnibus resolution moved by the Liberal opposition in the house of commons on May 22, 1917, in these terms:

"(1) That wheat, wheat flour, and al lother products of wheat be placed upon the free list.

"(2) That farm implements and machinery, farm tractors, mining, flour and sawmill machinery, and repairs for same, rough and partly dressed limber, illuminating lubricating and fuel oils, cement, and fertilizers, be added to the free list.

"(3) That staple food and food products (other than wheat flour), domestic animals and food, therefore, be admitted into Canada free of duty when coming from and being the product of any country admitting like Canadian articles into such country free of duty.

"(4) That substantial reductions be made in the general tariff on all articles imported into Canada, excepting luxuries.

"(6) That the British preference be increased to 50 per cent, of the general tariff.

KEEP URIC ACID OUT OF JOINTS

TELLS RHEUMATISM SUFFERERS TO EAT LESS MEAT AND TAKE SALTS.

Rheumatism is easier to avoid than to cure, states a well-known authority. We are advised to dress warmly; keep the feet dry; avoid exposure; eat less meat, but drink plenty of good water.

Rheumatism is a direct result of eating too much meat and other rich foods that produce uric acid which is absorbed into the blood. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this acid from the blood and cast it out in the urine the pores of the skin are also a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly cold weather the skin pores are closed thus forcing the kidneys to do double work, they become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate the uric acid which keeps accumulating and circulating through the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles causing stiffness, soreness and pain called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts; put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is said to eliminate uric acid by stimulating the kidneys to normal action, thus ridding the blood of these impurities.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and is used with excellent results by thousands of folks who are subject to rheumatism. Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink which helps overcome uric acid and is beneficial to your kidneys as well.

Ears Continue Growing.

It is said that throughout one's lifetime one's ears continue to grow bigger. The ears of a girl, admired perhaps for their small size, are fairly large by the time she has reached middle age. In old age they may be larger. In any company of people one may notice that it is the elders who have the big ears. In the very old they are overgrown.—Boston Globe.

That Strict Confidence.

We were listening (and who wouldn't?) to two women talking at each other on a Fifth avenue bus in the more or less busy city of Gotham, and in so doing we heard one of the master paradoxes. One woman said to the other: "Why, she told me in strictest confidence only the other day—"—New York Sun.

C.P.R. OFFICIAL HONORED

Sir George McL. Brown.

THE appointment of Lt.-Col. G. McLaren Brown as Knight Commander of the Order of the British Empire is the result of the very fine services rendered by the European Manager of the C. P. R. to the British Government for whom he acted as Assistant Director of Transport during the last three years of the war. "G. McL." as he is popularly known, both in Canada and the Old Country, is the son of Adam Brown of Hamilton, Ontario, and was born in 1865. In 1887 he was appointed agent of the Canadian Pacific Railway at Vancouver, promoted five years later to be Asst. General Passenger Agent, Western Division, and subsequently became in turn Executive Agent, Superintendent of Hotels and Dining and Sleeping Car Dept., and General Passenger Agent C. P. R. Atlantic Steamship Lines. In 1908 he was appointed General European Traffic Agent, and in 1910 General European Manager, with head offices at 62-5 Charing Cross, London, S.W.

Col. George McLaren Brown, says a friend writing in the "Montreal Gazette," is one of those rare men whose friendships are equal to the number of their acquaintances. To all in that wide circle the announcement of the new honor which has been conferred upon him comes as pleasant and very welcome news. It is a recognition of qualities and services which they all know him to possess and to have rendered. The reputation which he enjoyed in Canada, not alone in the railway world, has been enhanced in proportion to his larger opportunities as European Manager of the Canadian Pacific Railway in London, and the value of his service in the organization and direction of troop transportation during the war can hardly be overstated. It was as successful as it was onerous, and although given with no other thought than that of duty, was none the less deserving of recognition now accorded. It was but one, if the chief of his war activities, which were in fact as varied as were the demands upon his help and counsel. In all this McLaren Brown has been true in both impulse and action to the stock of which he comes. Similar impulses, finding similar expression having regard to place and circumstances, have characterized the long and honorable career of Adam Brown, his father, now and for many years postmaster at Hamilton. Active and successful in commercial life, a pioneer in railway development, and one of the fathers of the National Policy, Adam Brown at ninety-six, is still young in spirit, giving largely of his time and substance in philanthropy, and to the support of war relief organizations. As is the father, so is the son, strong in his undertakings and, withal a thoughtful, kindly gentleman.

Motto for Dead Authors.

We are told that once, when Patience Worth was spelling out the endless pages of the "Sorry Tale," she came to a sudden stop, then wrote, "This be nuff," and knocked off for the night. A blessed phrase, and, of a certainty, her finest inspiration. Would that all dead authors would adopt it as their motto; and with ouija boards, and table legs, and automatic pencils, write as their farewell message to the world those three short, comely words, "This be nuff."—Agnes Repplier, in Atlantic.

But the girl who loves beauty must be careful not to put a higher estimate on the beauty of bright eyes than on that of a sweet soul. Do not value the sheen of silk above the charm of kindly speech. In seeking beauty, do not lose sight of the beauty which is the highest of all.

Airplanes Will Cross Atlantic

London, Jan. 14 Gen. Brancker, who is giving up his post as Master-General of Personnel in the Air Ministry to devote his time to commercial aviation, in an interview, with The Daily Express asserted that a flight across the Atlantic probably would be accomplished in May. He added that the trip was feasible at the present moment, as there were three or four types of airplanes available which were capable of making the flight.

Gen. Brancker said the time was not far distant when airplanes would be owned and driven as automobiles are to-day. He said it probably would be necessary to establish an aerial police force, the duty of which would be to watch over air routes and frontiers.

The Evening News says that it has been officially informed that the British Admiralty is embarking on a big program of airship construction Airships are being built with a gas capacity of 2,500,000 cubic feet. The aircraft will have a large lifting capacity and will be able to make between 60 and 70 miles an hour. They will carry crews of 25 men.

Still larger airships are projected and flights with passengers are predicted for the near future. Several airships which will be equal in size and capacity to the largest Zeppelins and which are of a similar rigid type are being built. Primarily they are being constructed for sea work and general observation duty for the navy. These airships, it is said will be capable of remaining in the air for a week.

The newspaper says a regular airship mail service between Britain and the United States during the summer of 1920 is regarded as certain by airship builders.

OMEMEE

(Special Correspondence.)

Omemee, Jan 14—The death of Archie Pogue, one of our most prosperous young farmers, which occurred on Saturday the result of pneumonia following an attack of influenza, has cast a deep gloom over the entire community. "Archie," as he was popularly called, was the youngest son of the late Ephriam Pogue. To the sorrowing young widow as well as to the bereaved mother, brothers and sisters is extended the heartfelt sympathy of the whole countryside. The funeral was held very quietly on Saturday afternoon, the remains being laid to rest in the Emily cemetery.

Mrs. Walter Byers, who has been in a critical condition for several days from influenza, succumbed on Tuesday morning to the dread disease. The death of Mrs. Byers is deeply regretted on all sides, and to the sorrowing husband, who at time of writing is lying in a critical condition, and to Mr. and Mrs. Frank Saunders, of Franklin, parents of deceased, we extend sincere sympathy in their great sorrow. The funeral of Mrs. Byers was held Tuesday afternoon, interment taking place at Cavan cemetery.

While visiting at the home of her daughter in Cobourg, Mrs. David Pogue passed away Sunday morning. Mrs. Pogue was one of the older residents of Ops, where she resided for over forty years. Her husband predeceased her twenty-five years, and since that time she had lived on the homestead with her son, Burton. The funeral service was conducted by the Rev. Mr. Herrington on Tuesday afternoon at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Bert Sanderson, the remains being laid to rest in the family plot in the Emily cemetery. Left to mourn the loss of a loving mother are four daughters: Mrs. Sanderson, Omemee, Mrs. Fleming, Keaboro, Mrs. Lang Omemee, Mrs. Henderson, Cobourg, and four sons, Arthur, Vincent and Burton, of Omemee, and Percy, of Lindsay, to whom is extended the deepest sympathy of the entire community.

Mr. Robt. Wilson of Toronto paid a short visit to Omemee last week.

The High school opened on Monday, five students being in attendance.

Influenza is still on the rampage in Omemee, new cases being heard of daily, although every precaution is seemingly put into play to prevent the spread of the malady.

ONE YEAR IN JAIL

Quebec, Jan. 14. — Charged with wilfully rendering himself unfit for military service, Joseph Rouleau, of Angele, county of Rimouski, was tried here before a court-martial and sentenced to one year in jail.

It appears that Rouleau, through a man named Balcourt, at Pinonne, said there was an easy way of inoculating a man with some germ that would rank him as unfit to mingle with the army, and Rouleau, in court, openly admitted that he submitted to the inoculation, becoming shortly after covered with "sheer" pimples that caused him to be declared unfit for service.

INTERMEDIATE CLASSES HAVE SUPPER AT THE "Y"

Interesting Program Has Been Arranged for the Boys of the City—Officers Elected.

"Serenely full, the epicure would say:
Fate cannot harm me—I have dined today!"

That all-softening, over-powering knell
That tocsin of the soul, the dinner bell!

Two intermediate classes are to meet every Tuesday night at the regular supper hour at the "Y" for a simple meal, served usually by a few of the mothers, through the kindness of the Mothers' Club, at a charge of 15 cents. After this a Bible study period will be conducted, under the most favorable auspices.

This plan commenced last night when 41 intermediates met for supper. After supper the employed boys, 24 in number, adjourned to one club room where they continued their program under the leadership of Mr. Wm. Hamilton, while the School Boys adjourned to another club room, where they continued their program under the leadership of Mr. Wallace Mulligan. Those who attended the supper will be glad to learn that, although a good spread was provided, the 15 cent fee paid all expenses and left a surplus of 17 cents. If this surplus continues the club will soon have a special treat.

Election of Officers

The election of officers proved to be an interesting feature of the program in both clubs. The chosen few were as follows:

Life problem Club:
Grand Mogul—Curly Reid.
Vice Grand Mogul—Bert Jefferies.
Chief Correspondent—Norman Hoar.
Chief Cashier—Dyal Waterman.

School Boys' Club:
Grand Mogul—Bob Moore.
Vice Grand Mogul—Douglas Young.
Chief Correspondent—Jack Bardill.
Chief Cashier—Sidney Nottall.

The executive of each club will meet later in the week to complete plans for next week's program.

Mr. Wm. Hamilton continued by taking the study period with the employed group. He is following the course of studies on "Life Problems of Boys Who Work," by Jeremiah W. Jenks. The first study was on "The Relation of Training to Life." Mr. Hamilton is a returned soldier and his experience, coupled with some fine material he had collected, enabled him to render a most interesting and helpful talk.

Meanwhile Mr. Mulligan was conducting a similar study with the school group on the "Relation of School to Life" taken from another of Jeremiah W. Jenks' books on "Life Questions of School Boys."

Mr. Mulligan conducted the study in an interesting manner and the fellows are looking forward with interest to the next study on "Custom and Habit."

After the Bible study period the club group was dismissed. The program for this school boy group is arranged so that they have their gymnasium class and swim before supper, thus leaving them free to go home to their studies immediately after little study.

The Employed Class however, go on the gym floor after supper, not before.

Both group are looking forward to competition in basket ball, hockey indoor baseball and other sports, all of which will be announced later.

Next week Mr. Wm. Hamilton is planning to give a lecture on some of his experiences while in France, continuing the following week with the regular studies. If the club room proves too small to accommodate those attending, meeting will be held in the gymnasium. Any boy, whether a member of the group or not, be welcome at this special meeting.

Intermediates, do not forget next Thursday, 6.15.

LAWN BOWLERS PLAN NEW DEAL

TALK OF HIRING HALL FOR PASTIME DURING WINTER MONTHS

The members of the Lawn Bowlers' Club are talking of securing suitable quarters for the carrying on of their favorite pastime during the winter months. If a sufficiently large hall can be found the floor will be covered with a carpet designed for the purpose and the bowls as are used on the green will answer the same purpose for indoor sport. The top floor of the Royal Bank building is under consideration. Members of the Club will meet at 5 p.m. today in the office of Principal McKone of the Peterborough Business College, to make further arrangements.

Carpet bowling has been adopted by Clubs in other cities. One advantage of having a hall is that it can be used not only in the winter, but during wet weather in the summer season.

Work Is Resumed On Welland Canal

Toronto, Jan. 14 With the employment of a gang of carpenters from St. Catharines and Niagara Falls, some machinists and other labor, the work on the new Welland ship canal was commenced yesterday morning where it had been terminated with the outbreak of war, according to Mr. James Marsh, a general organizer of the Carpenters' Union, who was in the city yesterday.

Middle Aged Women

Are Here Told the Best Remedy for Their Troubles.

Freemont, O.—"I was passing through the critical period of life, being forty-six years of age and had all the symptoms incident to that change — heat flashes, nervousness, and was in a general run down condition, so it was hard for me to do my work. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended to me as the best remedy for my troubles, which it surely proved to be. I feel better and stronger in every way since taking it, and the annoying symptoms have disappeared."—Mrs. M. GODDEN, 925 Napoleon St., Fremont, Ohio.

SIR WILFRED EXPLAINS STAND ON CONSCRIPTION

His Only Object in Opposing the Draft Act Was to Win the War—Ready to Retire as Leader of Liberal Party.

Ottawa, Jan. 15.—In the peroration was found the most striking portion of the address which Sir Wilfrid Laurier delivered to the delegates to the Eastern Ontario Liberal convention here tonight. That part of his speech was his apology for his opposition to the policy of compulsory military service and his appeal to former followers to let by-gones be by-gones and return to their old political allegiance. Only once did he mention conscription. He approached the subject after the subsidence of a burst of applause which greeted a reference to his many years of service as leader of the Liberal party.

Admit Mistakes.

"I am conscious," said Sir Wilfrid, "that I have made a great many mistakes and," he added, "I have had to disappoint some of my friends. But, anyone in my place knowing this country as I know it from one end to the other, would realize that, acting as I did, my aim was to win the war and that that was the best method, so far as I was concerned to win the war.

"If we have differed in the recent past," proceeded Sir Wilfrid, "upon a merely transient question which is not to arise again, because Mr. Lloyd George pledged himself a little while ago to put an end to conscription, let the past be forgotten and let us all be Liberals again, situated only by conscience. If a man will come to me and say, 'I was a Unionist at the last election,' I shall tell him, 'I will not rebuke you, you have sufficiently rebuked yourself. We do not look to the past, we look to the future, that is the only horizon for us.'"

Tariff Policy.

A considerable portion of the Opposition leader's speech was devoted to the discussion of tariff policy. Sir Wilfrid announced that he and his followers during the coming session of Parliament would call for the recission of the War Tariff Act, which added a duty of 7½ per cent. ad valorem to all items in the general tariff, and 5 per cent. to British preferential rates.

Is Ready To Retire.

After a brief discussion of the "Democratization of labor" resolution adopted by the convention and a laudatory reference to Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, Sir Wilfrid spoke of his own long tenure of the office of leader of the Opposition. "I would gladly have resigned the position to younger hands, and I would do so readily today," he said. "Nothing would be a greater satisfaction to me, now that I begin to feel the weight of years than to pass the reins into the hands of a younger general and fight in the ranks." Some persons in the gathering were inclined to attach significance to the fact that Sir Wilfrid so closely followed his commendation of Mr. King as "the only real Minister of Labor Canada had ever had," by his allusion to his own views on the subject of the leadership of the party.

OTTAWA LOSES TORONTO GAME

ARENAS BREAK THEIR STREAK OF HARD LUCK AND WIN

Toronto, Jan. 15.—In a slow and uninteresting game Arenas last night defeated Ottawa by the score of 6 to 2. The locals, despite the enforced absence of Cameron and Noble, showed an all-round superiority that the visitors failed to cope with. Harry Mummery, the big defense man, proved of great assistance to the Blue Shirts and repeatedly broke up the attacks of the Senators.

The contest was not overly exciting and the play inferior to that exhibited in the Canadien-Arenas game here last week. The visitors were responsible for this state of affairs and played in a careless manner throughout. Arenas showed vast improvement [illegible] especially brilliant in back check work. Skinner, Dennenay, Crawford, Adams and Meeking easily overhauled the opposing forwards and broke up nearly all of the attacks.

Randall and Mummery presented a stonewall defense, which was difficult to outguess, and the latter stopped more shots than the goalkeeper. His return has strengthened the locals where they most needed it, and they are expected to make matters interesting for any and all comers in future games. Randall played a most useful game while he was on and scored one goal after a rush from end to end.

Crawford Plays Well.

Crawford shared the honors of the match with Mummery, and his sensational rushing enlivened proceedings. He scored three of the five goals and was going great guns from beginning to end. Skinner did an immense amount of back-checking and did not allow his check any undue liberties. Dennenay was also much in evidence, both offensively and defensively, but experienced ill luck in his shooting.

Ottawa did not impress the critics as being of championship calibre. They played in disappointing fashion and were very weak around the local's net. Nighbor was probably the best of the lot, but, even he was not in his usual good form. He scored all of the Ottawa counters.

Gerard, Nighbor and Boucher hurdled at every opportunity and never appeared [illegible] any results thereby. As a matter of fact, this style of play caused them many nasty spills, for which the Arenas were in nowise to blame. Randall and Cyril Dennenay were banished from the game in the second period.

Officials—L. Mamh and S. Vair.

LEGISLATION AT COMING SESSION

MATTERS OF IMPORTANCE TO BE TAKEN UP BY PARLIAMENT.

Ottawa, Jan. 15.—When the second session of the thirteenth Parliament of Canada opens, the Government will have all ready a record of accomplishment in connection with the all-important matters of demobilization and reconstruction to be presented to the notice of Parliament in the speech from the Throne.

There will be at that time nearly 90,000 soldiers and their dependents back in Canada from overseas, and there will be in operation a co-ordinated system of Federal Labor Bureaus such as advocates of it before the war did not expect for many decades.

In order that the volume of work available through the country may be increased, a Trade Mission under Lloyd Harris has been sent to London, with the result that forty million dollars' worth of lumber has been ordered and other orders are expected daily. To work with it there is a Canadian Trade Commission in Canada under Sir Charles Gordon, and in order to co-ordinate the activities of every Government department, every Provincial, and municipal agency, every association and corporation and company, and every Canadian to help in repatriation work, the Government's Committee on Repatriation and Employment has already developed a nation-wide organization under the direction of Mr. H. J. Daly.

Resolutions passed at meetings of earlier Liberals indicate that details of work already done by the Government will come in for attack and criticism by the Opposition.

The necessities of the case are such that in the Speech from the Throne there will have to be reference to legislation necessary to validate arrangements made for national housing and soldiers' land settlement schemes to further changes in the matter of pensions as well as to give Parliamentary sanction to the war gratuities allowed on their discharge to tide them over the first few months of possible unemployment.

Whether foreshadowed in the address or not, legislation will be necessary in order to render beyond all doubt the legality of the order in Council enacting prohibition for the term of one year after the declaration of peace. An opinion has been obtained by the Government to the effect that the order in Council, though based on the War Measures Act, would be effective for the term of one year after the declaration of peace, but enough doubt is expressed to make it advisable to have the legislation. The probable course of such legislation is to continue prohibition until one year after the Canadian army has been demobilized and then to hold a Federal plebiscite on the question.

THREE THOUSAND MEN WANT WORK

THAT NUMBER REGISTERED IN EMPLOYMENT BUREAU AT OTTAWA.

Ottawa, Jan. 15.—Unemployment in Ottawa is on the increase. The Ontario government bureau, administered by the provincial government, reports that these are more than 3,000 men on its books now, the highest number since the war began.

Many men are being placed in positions, but the majority of the work fed workers are unable to secure work at present. Contrary to the view that war abolished unemployment, the fact is that the Ottawa labor exchange carried an average of 600 men on its unemployed lists during a great part of the time hostilities were going on. Since the armistice was signed, the number has been steadily increasing until the present high figure of 3,000 and over has been reached. It is not expected any substantial reduction will be noted until the spring. One labor union of the city reported this week that 60 of its members were out of a job.

Large concerns are calling for help as required. The C.P.R. has asked the Ottawa bureau for a list of returned soldiers with a view to placing them in jobs. Returned men are getting the preference in openings offered. The soldiers' civil re-establishment branch is opening quarters in the employment bureau on Queen street. Mayor Caldwell will be in charge and he will deal particularly with questions affecting returned soldiers in their reinstatement in civil life.

Hot Water for Sick Headaches

Headache of any kind, is caused by auto intoxication—which means self-poisoning. Liver and bowel poisons called toxins, sucked into the blood through the lymph ducts, excites the heart which pumps the blood so fast that it congests in the smaller arteries and veins of the head producing violent, throbbing pain and distress, called headache. You become nervous, despondent, sick, feverish and miserable, your meals sour and almost nauseate you. Then you resort to acetanilide, aspirin or the bromides which temporarily relieve but do not rid the blood of those irritating toxins.

A glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, drank before breakfast for a while, will not only wash these poisons from your system and cure you of headache but will cleanse, purify and freshen the entire alimentary canal.

Ask your pharmacist for a quarter pound of limestone phosphate. It is inexpensive, harmless as sugar, and almost tasteless except for a sourish twinge which is not unpleasant.

If you aren't feeling your best, if tongue is coated or you wake up with bad taste, foul breath or have colds indigestion, biliousness, constipation, or sour acid stomach, begin the phosphated hot water cure to rid your system of toxins and poisons.

Results are quick and it is claimed that those who continue to flush out the stomach, liver and bowels every morning never have any headache or know a miserable moment.

HONOR FRED ADAMS.

Former Local Resident is Popular in Toronto.

Yesterday afternoon about fifteen hundred munition workers assembled in the shell plant of the Russell Motor Car Company in Toronto with the object of marking in a tangible way their appreciation of the worth and work of Mr. Fred Adams, who has been factory manager for the company during the four years of munition work now coming to a close. An address expressing the admiration of Mr. Adams' fellow-employees was read by Mr. Geo. Ellis, superintendent of the fuse plant.

Mr. Adams was a former resident of this city and has many friends and relatives residing here.

Miss Madelaine F. Jaffray of Galt, who won the Croix de Guerre for her services as a nurse in France and was wounded there, has since her return addressed hundreds of meetings for Red Cross and other patriotic purposes.

MUCH WORK STILL FOR WOMEN TO DO

WAR ACTIVITIES DID NOT CEASE WITH SIGNING OF ARMISTICE.

Since the signing of the armistice the impression seems to have become more or less general that women's war activities are at an end. Because the Red Cross no longer needs supplies for the army does not mean that there is nothing to do. There is a very great deal to be done, work which needs doing immediately, and is actually suffering for want of workers. Women's organizations have been requested to direct their efforts to relief work, and it is strange how this appeal, which is so urgent can be made in vain. To any woman who thinks for a moment it must be perfectly evident that it will be months, even years, before the poor refugees of Serbia Belgium and France can be self-supporting. They have no possible means of obtaining clothes, and even if they possessed money, materials are not available in those countries desolated by war.

Many societies are working for these poor people but it is no use pretending that there is anything like the enthusiasm and energy shown for this work that there was for the Red Cross supplies. There have been but few workers in attendance at the meetings of the local Red Cross Society since relief work was begun.

The winter is slipping away and in the meantime these suffering people are cold and ill-clad. The first and most obvious duty for us all is "to feed the hungry and clothe the naked." Let us once more realize that this work is a definite duty for the women of Canada to do, and get together without further loss of time to do our part for those whose sufferings already have been so tremendous, that they may at least have clothes.

If we shirk this duty we shall prove unworthy of the Victory which has been won for us.

Relief work in connection with the Local Red Cross Society is being carried on in the Public Library every Monday, Wednesday and Friday afternoon. Every woman in the city who can give even one hour a week to this work is urged to come on any one of these afternoons.

CHARGES INFRACTION

Kingston Doctor Issued 120 Prescriptions One Day.

Kingston, Jan. 15.—In Police Court Dr. A. W. Richardson was charged with an offence under the Ontario Temperance Act in issuing prescriptions for liquor, the charge being lodged by inspectors for the Ontario License Board. He pleaded not guilty and in the box on his own behalf stated that he had examined every applicant and satisfied himself that he was justified in giving an order for liquor. Two provincial officers swore that they got liquor from Dr. Richardson and were not examined. The returns to the government from the local license vendor showed that in October Dr. Richardson issued 1,399; in November, 1,233, and December 739. The highest number issued on any one day was 120. There are eight more charges pending against the accused.

Y.M.C.A. Workers Are Under Arrest

Paris, Jan. 15.—It became known that three Young Men's Christian Association workers are under arrest in Paris, charged with defalcation of funds of the association.

The men are George Schoeffel, former Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce of Rochester, N.Y.; the Rev. R. Atkins of Eagle Pass, Texas, and — Mansfield, said to have been a former Secretary of the Sailors' Union of New York city.

The total amount alleged to have been misappropriated approximates $38,940, most of which has been recovered.

The Y.M.C.A. has asked the army to prosecute these cases to the limit and to impose the full penalty. The military court-martial will begin during the present week.

WHAT THE GOVERNMENT IS DOING

Q—What is the Dominion Government doing to help returned men and others get jobs?

A—It is co-operating with the Provincial Governments to distribute employment quickly and fairly.

Q—What is a man going to do when he wants to get a job?

A—A complete chain of employment offices is being opened by the Government, from Halifax to Victoria, in every centre of 10,000 population and over

Q—What has that got to do with getting a man a job?

A—Through these Government employment agencies all persons in need of employment, both male and female, will secure such positions as are available.

Q—Where does that benefit the returned man?

A—The returned man is given preference in every instance.

Q—Suppose a man goes to an employment office and is told that no jobs are available?

A—If a job is not available in the particular office to which the man or woman applies, details of the applicant's requirements will be telegraphed to one of the other employment offices.

Q—If a man is willing to take a job in another city or town then what?

A—A complete survey of Canada has been made and every job available in every line of work is listed at Ottawa. A telegram to headquarters will bring a reply in a few hours, telling where a job can be obtained.

Q—What's the use of going to Government employment offices if the employers do not look to them for their labor when men or women are needed

A—The service of these employment offices is given to both to employers and those seeking employment, free. Employers are being interviewed and educated with the idea of having them employ men and women only through the Government employment offices.

Q—Will the right men or women be placed in the right jobs? Will a man or women be sent to the first job that offers, or will his particular case be dealt with individually?

A—The employment offices will supply only such help as the employer can confidently rely on. Every man or woman placed by the employment offices will be the right person in the right place.

Q—How will these offices benefit the small employer of labor?

A—They will take the place of the employment manager. To the larger employer of labor they will be of great assistance.

Q—How many men will there be in each employment office?

A—There will be a superintendent, with a staff of interviewers, and an outside staff of canvassers to call on employers and learn of their requirements.

Q—Will these men be returned soldiers?

A—In every case.

Q—Will the system be the same in every employment offices?

A—The system is standardized, and directed from Ottawa.

Q—This simply means that everyone will be able to get a job?

A—Yes. As Mr. Daly, the director of repatriation aptly, says: "Every willing worker will have work to do."

The Ontario Government is to open up new waters for fishing purposes in the north country.

VETERANS GIVE AID

Messrs. W. D. Tait (1), David Loughman (2), and R. B. Maxwell (3) have been named by the Great War Veterans' Association at the request of the Dominion Government, to act as an advisory council to the Repatriation Committee, of which Hon. J. A. Calder is chairman and Mr. H. J. Daly chief executive officer. These three, all of whom saw service early in the war, and have been home in Canada long enough to have a grasp of the new conditions the war has brought about, are devoting their whole time to conferring with the committee upon its many problems. Mr. Tait, who is a graduate of Dalhousie and Harvard Universities, and prior to going overseas was assistant professor of psychology at McGill University, served as major with the 7th Canadian Seige Battery. Mr. Maxwell, who belongs to Winnipeg, enlisted early enough in 1914 to receive the regimental number "725", served with the 8th battalion, the "Little Black Devils," and was wounded at the second battle of Ypres. He was twice president of the Winnipeg G. W. V. A. Mr. Loughman served overseas with the 16th Battalion, and was wounded at Ypres. Since his return to Canada he has been honored with many offices in Veterans' Organizations and is now editor of "The Veteran."

Pulse in Animals.

The normal pulse beats per minute in the domestic animals are as follows: Horses, 33 to 42; cattle, 38 to 50; sheep, goats and hogs, 70 to 80; and dogs, 80 to 100. The pulse beats faster in young than in old animals. Excitement and a nervous temperament may cause a more rapid pulse. When exercising and immediately after, the rate is higher than when the animal is at rest.

Atrocious Pun.

Councillor Lumb, an old man when Lord Erskine was in the height of his reputation, was of a timid and nervous disposition, usually prefacing his pleadings with an apology to that effect; and on one occasion, when opposed in some cause to Erskine, he happened to remark that he felt himself growing more and more timid as he grew older. "No wonder," replied the relentless barrister, "every one knows the older a lamb grows the more sheepish he becomes."

Treeless Australian Cities.

Australia, with its boundless scrub and bush has many towns without a tree to protect it from the glaring sun. This has been forcibly brought home to the Australian forces who have gazed in admiration at the endless avenues of England and France that are planted with trees, mainly oaks, elms and poplars. No village, however humble, seemed to be without these avenues, which appealed so much to the "Aussies."

Staid and serious Mary felt keenly responsible for the deportment of her younger sister, Margaret, who was entirely lacking in a sense of decorum. At a children's party one afternoon Mary was horrified to see her sister chewing gum with all the vigor and abandon of her nature. Hastily sweeping the offender into a corner, Mary pointed out a third little guest who was managing her stick of gum with commendable moderation and restraint. "Margaret," she said severely, "I want you to notice how a lady chews gum."

A LITTLE DISPLAY OF TEMPER

A Group of Rocky Mountain Sheep.

One hears of the affection of wild creatures and their devotion to one another, even unto death. This is undoubtedly true in many instances, but to my mind more wild animals die through displaying bad temper than through gentler senses. I have seen a grand ten-point antlered deer brought down while fighting a game little spike buck. I have seen a surly pike ram his head into a net while attempting to annihilate a big bull trout. More than once I saw a grizzly that died because he had lost his temper when the man approached as the bear was dying, and I was once an active participator in the death of a lynx that would have escaped unscathed had it not stopped to claw up a dog that it could have outrun on three legs. On the other hand, there are many cases of affection. Once I was an interested observer of a she-bear putting a last-climbing Dane up a tree and keeping him there while her twin cubs attacked neighboring saplings and were, in her opinion, learning how. I have been told of devoted bears that committed deliberate suicide because their mates had taken poison. I know of enormous bull moose off the coast of British Columbia who personally see to it that the smallest pup is driven into the safety of the black waters when danger threatens. Then there are the cases of the male salmon guarding the spawning beds from buccaneering males while the female salmon deposit their eggs, and sailing men have told me of whales [illegible] their great flukes while their mothers were reaching deep for [illegible] mother's vitals. All these are worth telling and may be told, but at present the subject is temper leading up to the demise of the mountain sheep whose eighteen-inch horns had been the ambition of hunters for three long seasons.

He ranged the peaks a score of miles below Banff, where, from the highest pinnacles of his range he could look down the fair sweep of the valley and see C. P. R. trains rolling up or roaring down the grades. He did not know what they were nor did they bother his mind much. To him they may have been crawling flies. His simple life did not include them, his chief annoyances were the self-imposed duties of whipping young and ambitious bucks, keeping his band of ewes in proper subjection, and avoiding the two-legged creatures who crawled so clumsily about the rocks and frightened one with sharp noises followed by high-pitched whines. Once, when he had heard the sharp sound and did not hear the whine, his side had hurt for a long time and the blood had flowed as it does when an eagle or a mountain lion rips the hide, and he did not want to repeat that experience. So he was very watchful.

One day he stood on a wind-swept slope and gazed high-headed over the broad valley. Nearby his band browsed placidly. A youthful and injudicious male edged over to a charming young female and butted her playfully. She too displayed frivolity, she shouldered him away invitingly. The king of the band saw [illegible] and stamped a stern warning. The young buck and the silly ewe sprang apart with a Keen appreciation of what followed outbursts of temper by the lord and master. A small stone, loosened by the hasty feet of the young buck rolled and clattered down the rocky grade.

Around behind a distant shoulder of rocks a man who had been fruitlessly hunting all afternoon had turned toward his valley camp, warned by the lengthening shadows of late afternoon. He heard a distant clatter of a rolling stone on loose shale and paused a moment before dropping to his knees and creeping noiselessly toward the point from whence the clatter came. The big buck, high-headed and watchful, but raging and foaming with anger, was just stepping down toward the impudent young male with every intention of inflicting merited chastisement when the rifle cracked. The animal turned and fled, blindly and fast, half stunned by the blow that smote his shoulder and burned his interior. He ran instinctively upward while his band also scattered to the heights by other routes and the white man, breathless and panting, followed the blood drops that marked the path of his prize. He followed to the snow line and beyond, his hunter's soul gladdened by the crimson dashes on the white mantle. And at last, a half mile from where he had raised the band, and a thousand feet above the spot, he came upon the bighorn chief's body, half buried in the pure white of a heaven-climbing slide. One little display of jealous temper had ruined the life of the most astute Rocky Mountain sheep in the whole hunting country south of the C. P. R. main line.—L. V. K.

Unkindness Often Sad Habit.

Unkindness is more a loose, indifferent habit than intentional neglect, disrespect, or downright meanness. Words and deeds are generated by thoughts; and it is so easy to fall into slothful, indifferent thinking that, oftentimes unthinkingly, we neglect, speak carelessly to, or treat unconcernedly those toward whom we ought to act with most consideration and deference. G. E. W., in Great Thoughts.

Chinese Don't Like Cheese.

Statisticians have figured out that England eats the larger part of Europe's output of cheese. Europe's output amounts to 340,000,000 kilograms. England alone consumes 120,000,000 kilograms of this amount. Next comes Holland, which takes 56,000,000; Switzerland takes 43,000,000; France, 31,000,000, and Germany 20,000,000 kilograms. The only people on earth who eat no cheese are the Chinese.

Color Blind.

One man in England in every sixty is partially or wholly color blind, so at least the tests for the English mercantile marine seem to show. A noted professor maintains that the proportion is even larger. Candidates, after passing all the usual tests relied upon by the navy and the railway companies, have been found to be defective by his lantern.

Contrary Mineral.

Coal is a contrary critter. Instead of expanding generously, like water, in freezing weather, it contracts rapidly. The sensitive coal pile shrinks at the first touch of winter and, with the mercury at zero, when every respectable commodity is frozen stiff, the costly coal pile melts away like Simple Simon's snowball before the fire.

Painful Insinuation.

FREAK PITCHING WILL ALWAYS BE A FEATURE OF BASEBALL

Vigorous Campaign to Stamp Out Spit Balls and Other Mysterious Deliveries Have Always Failed—Pitchers Too Sharp for the Officials

(By Billy Evans)

The freak pitching delivery has about come to stay in baseball. That may seem a rather strange statement but it is true nevertheless.

The spitball, which might be classed as the first of the new-fangled methods of pitching, is still with us. There has been constant agitation for the abolition of the "spitter," but it usually proves to be mere winter chatter.

With the spitball doing business, it is rather hard to attempt to eliminate the other freak methods of deceiving batsmen.

Last season the American Association sought to solve the freak pitching situation that had played havoc with the batting, by abolishing the spitball. No pitcher was allowed to come up to the mouth with the ball, as is customary with spitball pitchers, in preparing the ball for delivery.

Just how successful the scheme worked out, I don't know. I have talked with several American Association umpires and they tell me the rule was rigidly enforced. I do know several association pitchers who joined the American League, after the close of their season, relied largely on the spitball for success in the Johnsonian organization.

There is Ray Keating for instance who joined the New York Americans. Perhaps Keating got by in the association with the fast one and the curve, but the moment he came back to the American League his best asset was the "spitter."

I have always regretted the introduction of the spitball and other freak deliveries. I think baseball would be more interesting if pitchers confined their stock in trade to speed, curves and a change in pace. It would give the batsmen a better chance, and, since a certain amount of batting is essential to the interest of the game, that would be one advantage gained. In the second place it would tend to develop smarter pitching if the twirlers had no freak delivery to resort to in a pinch. In the third place, the introduction of the freak deliveries slowed up the game, because a pitcher in using a freak delivery must have the ball properly manicured before delivering it, and must be careful as to how he holds the ball as he starts it to the batter.

Another puzzling feature that has crept into the pastime as a result of the use of freak deliveries is the constant desire of batsmen to make a careful investigation of the ball any time he strikes out or fails to come through in a pinch, in a great many cases the thought of an alibi is uppermost in the athlete's mind, as he demands that the ball be given the "once over". Yet in many cases I have not attached a whit of blame to the player because he got such a deceptive break on the ball it was practically certain the pitcher reported to some unusual method.

Russell Ford made the emery ball famous. Many other pitchers prolonged their careers through its use. The American League, realizing the emery ball must go, placed such a drastic penalty on its use that the emery ball proper is no longer included in the repertoire of American league pitchers.

To offer an example of the theory I am attempting to prove I submit the conversation I had with an American League pitched a few days before the close of last season. I will not give his name because that would be unfair, but I will say he is one of the best pitchers in the American League, one who could easily hold his own if speed, curves and a change of pace were really all you could possibly get away with.

I had noticed that whenever in a pinch his pitcher would get a lot of stuff on the all important ball he could make it "sail." As a rule he wouldn't resort to such a delivery more than a dozen times in a game, but when he did the batsman was practically helpless. Undoubtedly had pitcher believed baseball would be on tap in 1919 he would never have mentioned the secret.

The nail on the thumb of the right hand was made to resemble a perfect little saw. I could see at a glance that the passing of that thumb nail over the smooth surface of a new ball would produce a roughened surface of any size desired.

"Why I have been as particular about that thumb nail," continued the pitcher, "as I have been about my salary arm or my general condition. I have called it into use only on rare occasions, as I did no desire to arouse curiosity. I knew my ordinary stuff would serve me out of the time, but in a pinch I wanted some thing in reserve, and as such times I resorted to my thumb-nail ball.

Just to satisfy myself, I took a new ball out of my pocket, handed it to him and asked him to exhibit his deftness. In side of ten seconds he had turned the trick, and it was the roughest little rough spot you ever saw. So while the crazy ball has passed, there are so many substitutes equally effective that its passing has meant nothing to the batters.

Guelph Board of Health lifted the ban on public meetings, as the influenza epidemic is under control.

DIAMOND GOSSIP

Stories of Silk O'Loughlin's career as an umpire are many, following his death, and they reveal two outstanding features in his makeup—quick wit and never-failng courage. One of the best told is of a little spat Silk had with Ty Cobb, in which Ty was made to see the point and admitted he saw it.

Cobb was batting, O'Loughlin was umpiring and things were popping. It was Ty's first time up. Silk called a strike, which Ty thought was too high.

"Clean out your lamps—look 'em over," said the irate Cobb.

"Never missed a strike in my life, Tyrus," replied Silk.

"You missed that one—it was a mile too high," insisted Cobb.

"Trouble with you, Ty, is that you took too long a stride," replied the umpire.

"What do you mean? Are you trying to tell me how to bat?" asked the Peach.

"You were just telling me how to umpire," came the reply from O'Loughlin. "You stick to your batting, let me umpire, and we'll get along bully."

Kid Gleason once stopped O'Loughlin, but it wasn't in a ball game. The contest hadn't started, at Comiskey Park. On that particular day Silk ventured over to the White Sox bench. The Sox had lost two games of the series and nobody on the team was in a cheerful mood.

"Well, waddye want?" snapped the Kid as Silk approached.

"I'd like to borrow a pencil," said O'Loughlin.

"All right; let him have one, but tie a string to it. A fellow's taking an awful chance when he lends an umpire anything," said Gleason. Silk, remembering no game was in progress, let the Kid get away with it. Besides, the Sox were losing, and Silk probably decided to consider the source.

They tell one on Kid Elberfeld and O'Loughlin that happened in the Kid's tempestuous career. In this instance the Kid actually thanked O'Loughlin for firing him out of a game.

Elberfeld had been chased from the park for infringing on the code of baseball etiquet. The club-house was in centerfield. The Kid dressed, left the club-house and strolled straight for the home plate. He came from centerfield, stepped on second base, strolled through the slab and strode up to the old home pan. Under each arm he carried a large pane of glass.

"What do you mean by stopping this ball game?" snapped O'Loughlin, as he walked up to the Kid.

"Mr. O'Loughlin, I forgot to thank you," explained Elderfeld. "I had to put these panes of glass in the kitchen window. You have done me a great favor, and I wish to thank you from the bottom of my heart. I didn't know an umpire could be so kind. I actually believe your're half human after all."

"Get out-" roared O'Loughlin, pointing his thumb toward the gate. "You're carrying two panes and you give me one." And with that Elberfeld, the scrappy shrimp, strolled out of the park. The game proceeded without further incident. But it had lost half of its interest with the departure of the Kid.

"Silk O'Loughlin had nerve—that was his middle name," declared Jack Riley, former minor league umpire and a close friend of the late big-league umpire, when he recalled some instances when Silk showed that he ruled baseball games with an iron hand.

"It was in 1908," continued Riley, "that Silk had trouble in Cleveland with the New York Americans, then under the leadership of Clark Griffith. Silk had chased player after player on the New York team, including Griffith, until there were not enough men on the field to make up a team. Then he forfeited the game to Cleveland.

"The New York newspapers had big write-ups on the incident. They declared O'Loughlin could never be permitted to umpire another game of ball on the American League's grounds in New York.

"Well, I was in the big town a few weeks later, and going up on the 'L' to the ball park I dropped into a seat by the side of Silk. He was scheduled to umpire the game that day. I walked into the grand-stand and got a front seat. The boys were warming up near me, and one said, 'Who's going to umpire today?'

"Just at that moment the bell rang, and Silk walked onto the field from the dug-out. His reception was not what an umpire would really relish, but Silk walked to the plate, got the batteries and balls, and the game started. The crowd started to ride him immediately. Griffith was on the third-base coaching line. Well, it was in the first inning, and Griffith made one of his lunges out of the coaching box onto the base line.

"'That's enough of that,' commented Silk, but Griffith started toward the plate, apparently to give him an argument. 'Go,' ruled O'Loughlin, as he pulled his watch, 'and run while you're going.' Griffith went, and Silk made him trot to the club-house.

"Well, New York lost that game, and the crowd rushed onto the field, but that nervy Silk just walked through them without a bit of rough that nerve. Well, I'll say it is."

LOCAL BOWLERS WIN 5-MAN EVENT FROM TORONTOS

But Visitors Win All Singles and Doubles in the Evening.

At the Water street alleys yesterday afternoon, Toronto bowlers fell down before the Peterboro heavyweights in the five-man league event.

The Petes were in good shape and rolled a total of 2965 for the three games, while the visitors had 2635, giving the Petes a margin of 325 pins on the game for Toronto on Monday next. For the Petes, Solmon had a total of 748, and high single of 320, while P. Gettas rolled 659 and Bloomfield for the visitors was high with 547.

In the evening the singles and doubles were played and Toronto carried off all the honors in these events, the Petes not having got into shape after the afternoon success.

After the games were over, cheers were given for the players. All then adjourned to the Boston Cafe where they sat down to a sumptuous repast. After the minor man had been satisfied songs and speeches were in order.

The visitors left on the early train for Toronto this morning. The score was:

Lindsay Warder Explains Defeat

Speaking of the hockey game at Lindsay Monday night between the Intermediates of Lindsay and the team from this city, the Warder says:

The visitors were accompanied by number of supporters and by Jerry Coughlin, their trainer. They brought their best team, one that showed every sign of giving an even better account of themselves when they get out on larger ice.

They did not exactly put it over Lindsay like a tent, but they demonstrated a speedier forward line, a more tactful defence and better headwork. Added to this they were in better condition.

All of which is not to be wondered at. Peterboro started seven and eight months ago locating players, and succeeded in signing up a crew of old timers at the game, including Halpin the speedy defence man who was wanted by the Hamilton Tigers and by Kingston. Also Jackson and Rose, and the old reliable Legrow in goal. Then they have a hulking giant called Saults on defence and a speedy man named Evans in centre, while Lowes and Kennedy subbed. They have been at work in the "gym" for months past—and on the ice as well.

ALL GRADUATED FROM ORIOLES

BASEBALL MANAGER WHO FIRST WON FAME WITH BALTIMORE TEAM.

Far back in the history of the national game was a ball team called the Orioles, famous and fearless.

It was a fighting team, scrappers who never knew when they were beaten.

And it has remained for five of its members to demonstrate that class will always tell.

For five of them have been called to the managership of big league teams, a record in itself.

Of the five, "Muggsy" McGraw has had the most unqualified success. His handling of the Giants is wherever baseball is played.

Hughie Jennings too, has had his measure of prosperity, profits and pennants.

Wilbert Robinson led Brooklyn to a pennant.

Joe Kelley was the only Oriole manager failure. He led the Boston Braves and the Cincinnati Reds in losing battles. His best effort was landing the Reds in third.

And most recent of the old Orioles to become a big league manager "Kid" Gleason has just been appointed to head the Chicago White Sox.

Gleason has acted for several years as assistant manager and there have been many who claimed that it was he and not Rowland who put the win in the White Sox of 1917.

Kid now has a chance to show who did it.

He will make the White Hose a different type of manager than it has ever had.

For like McGraw and Jennings, Gleason is a fighter and who is out to win and who never knows his team is beaten until the ump sings the swan song on the last inter.

By the way the Kid is far from being one; but at that, he's only 53 years young.

Mrs. Frank, wife of Fred. W. Frank, secretary of Brantford Water Commissioner, died suddenly.

HON. DR. CODY WOULD HAVE ONE ON EVERY BOARD.

London, Ont., Jan. 15.—Speaking at the formal opening of London's technical and art school building, Hon. Dr. Cody, Minister of Education, said that he hoped the Dominion Government would see its way clear to include aid for technical education in its reconstruction program. "If they do this we can go ahead in the work by leaps and bounds," he said. Canada, he added, is launched definitely in the stream of world life. These technical schools are designed to meet the demand that Canadian workmen shall be the best trained workmen in the world.

Speaking of the election of three ladies to the London School Board, Dr. Cody said "There are few spheres of public advice for which ladies are better adapted than education. I hope the time will soon come when every board in the province will have at least one woman as a member. There are none who have a keener interest in the children."

PARENTS' CIRCLE AT QUEEN MARY'S

ALL OFFICERS WERE RE-ELECTED AT ANNUAL MEETING OF SOCIETY.

The parents Circle of Queen Mary School held their annual meeting on Monday afternoon in the school. Officers of the previous year were elected by acclamation and are as follows:

President—Mrs. S. T. Medd.
Vice-President—Mrs. Connelly.
Secretary—Mrs. E. W. Borbridge.
Treasurer—Mrs. Blade.
Treasurer of Flower Fund—Mrs. M McCullough.
Convener of Visiting Committee—Mrs. W. Waugh.
Convener of Reception Committee—Mrs. Edmiston.
Convener of Program Committee—Mrs. C. Adair.
Convener of Sewing Class—Mrs. C. Clemence.

Representatives to Loyal Council of Women.—Mrs. Waugh, Mrs. E. Borbridge and Miss McKay.

A standing vote of thanks to the President and executive for their services during the past year was moved by Mrs. M. A. Morrison and heartily responded to by those present.

It was decided to hold the regular monthly meetings on the first Friday in every month. The sewing classes to be held every Friday afternoon at four o'clock in the school.

Miss Caldwell delighted those present with a piano selection after which the annual report was read, as follows:

Although the Circle has been greatly handicapped in their several undertakings during the past term owing to the recent epidemic, still much has been accomplished.

Last spring it was decided to raise funds to provide for a first aid kit and flower fund for the school. Through the generosity of Mrs. M. A. Morrison, who kindly offered her home for the occasion. An afternoon tea and musical was given, at which, a silver collection was taken and a sum sufficient to meet the required demands was realized.

We have to thank the Engineer's Club of the city, assisted by the executive and members of the Circle for the very instructive moving picture production of the Waterways of Canada, produced at the Empire theatre in April last, to which all pupils of the third and fourth classes of the public and separate schools were invited.

In May an open night was given at the school which took the form of an impromptu concert to which the general public was invited. The splendid program was entirely in the hands of the pupils, who without special preparation or practice carried it through with wonderful success. The numbers consisted of chorus, violin, piano and orchestra selections. A silver collection was taken, the proceeds of which were given to the Red Cross.

In June the annual picnic was held in Jackson Park and as usual proved to be a very enjoyable affair, an unusually large number attending.

The Sewing classes organized by Mrs. Clemence, assisted by members of the Circle, and which met with such success during the early part of last winter had to be discontinued owing to the fuel situation. It is sincerely hoped that with the better condition this winter these classes will be continued.

At the last regular monthly meeting it was moved by Mrs. McCullough, seconded by Mrs. Connolly that:—The Parent's Circle of Queen Mary School place themselves on record as approving the motion of the Renfrew branch of the Woman's Council, to place the subjects, sewing, cooking, home-nursing, etc. on the curriculum for senior classes in public schools, but, further suggest that these subjects be extended to the curriculum in lower classes.

FAVORS ALLIANCE OF ENTENTE

Prof. J. Gibson Hume of the University of Toronto, addressing the Men's Society at St. John's Anglican Church on Portland street last night, declared himself in favor of an alliance of the Entente nations instead of the much talked of League of Nations. It was impossible, he said, to include Germany or the other Central powers in any arrangements that would be made. Though Germany was defeated, she was not, he said, truly penitent. Prof. Hume declared himself in favor of maintaining the Canadian and other allied troops for a time in Russia. It was the allies' duty, he said, to bring about peace there.

OBITUARY

MRS. GEORGE MILLS
(Calgary Herald.)

Mrs. George Mills, an energetic Red Cross worker of the Three Hills district, succumbed to the influenza on Saturday last and was buried on Tuesday. Deceased was president of the Twining branch of the Red Cross and it was due largely to her efforts that such splendid results were accomplished by that branch during the period of the war.

The late Mrs. Mills was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Chatten, of Twining, formerly of Lakeside, Ont. She leaves her husband, now seriously ill; a daughter of five years of age, two brothers, George, with the 127th battalion in France; Clifford, at home, and two sisters, Hazel and Myrtle. She was a niece of Mr. and Mrs. F. K. Richardson, of 114 Nineteenth avenue northeast, Calgary.

Mrs. Mills was well known in Calgary, where she went to the Normbal school about eight years ago. She resided here for some time after her marriage, while Mr. Mills was engaged in the plumbing business in the city. Mrs. Mills was only 27 years of age when she died.

MRS. MARY LEONARD

Mrs. Mary Leonard passed away yesterday morning at 9.30 a.m. at her home, Ennismore, con. 7 lot 9, after an illness of four months' duration.

Deceased leaves a son and daughter, Patrick John and Mary Elizabeth, both at home, and three brothers, Patrick C. Sullivan and Michael C., of Ennismore, and John C. of Ashburnham. Mrs. John K. Gallery of Ennismore, and Miss Kate Sullivan, of this city, are sisters.

On Thursday morning at 9 o'clock the funeral will be held to St. Martin's Church and cemetery, Ennismore.

"$5,000 AN HOUR" WILL HAVE LOCAL SHOWING

Hale Hamilton, of "Get-Rich-Quick Willingford" fame in $5,000 An Hour" will be seen at the Grand theatre Thursday, Friday and Saturday this week. It is a screen adaptation of the famous story of the same name by George Randolph Chester, noted dramatist and writer. The story is of unusual vigor and strength and presents Mr. Hamilton in the dynamic leading role which is one eminently suited to his virile and compelling style of comedy, and as Johnny Gamble, he is seen at his best.

The story deals with the problems of a young man who has set himself the seemingly impossible task of making a million dollars in six weeks—five thousand an hour. The reason for this is a girl—if he does not have the money in the appointed time he cannot, in honor, ask her to marry him, so, obviously, the money must be found. His methods are so convincing and full of ingenious subtlety that he carries all his business associates with him through a series of breathless adventures which will appeal to those who admire vigor and determination in a man and love and loyalty in the girl who loves him.

With Mr. Hamilton is Lucille Lee Stewart, who plays the part of the girl, Constance Joy. Others of note in the exceptionally strong cast are, Florence Short, William Fredericks, Robert Middlemass, Gilbert Douglas, Robert Whittier, Warren Cook, Charles Edwards, Jack Bulgar, Hardee Kirkland and Isabel O'Madigan. The play was directed by Ralph W. Ince under the personal supervision of Maxwell Karger.

Large Audiences See "The Wanderer"

BIBLE PLAY AT GRAND PRESENTED FOR LAST TIME TONIGHT.

Last night the imposing Biblical play "The Wanderer" was presented for the second time at the Grand Opera House and drew a much larger attendance than that which greeted it upon Monday night. This afternoon and this evening the concluding performances will be held.

The play is the work of Maurice V Samuels and is the story of the Prodigal son, written in proper form for the stage and faultlessly interpreted. The success of the presentation is assured by the adoption of every electrical applianre which lan render it more spehtadular. The slenery is of the most elaborate kind and the hostumes of those taking part are a faithful representation of the habit worn in the days when the youthful son of Jesse demanded his portion of the father's estate and went forth into the world to seek fortune and enjoyment in strange cities and countries and above all in the pleasure haunts of the great metropolis of Judea.

In the presentation of "The Wanderer" superior qualities are demanded of the actors who assume the leading rolls. They impersonate men and women who lived in the dim ages of the past of whose liobets of life little is known except what can be gleaned from the pager of the Good Book itself which is not given to detailed descriptions of a kind which would facilitate a playwright in preparng a masterpiece such as "The Wanderer," undoubtedly is. The leading players are of a superior order and carry out their parts by making use of all the arts peluliar to the talented actor and the employment of best emphasis in speaking.

Those who fail to see this great play either this afternoon or tonight will miss an opportunity which may never be offered them again of seeing that intensely interesting story of the Bible presented by a company such as seldom visits this city. The story of the Prodigal Son is two thousand years old, but is of an absorbing interest in the year of Grace, 1919, as ever before, because the moral it holds never grows old or less its contemporary application. There are just as many prodigals today as in the days of Jether and Jesse and they are being fleeced with as much ease and profit by the sharks of our cities as was the Jewish spendthrift in the luxurious roof gardens of Nadina in Jerusalem in the long ago.

Must Still Carry Military Papers

REGULATION IN THIS REGARD HAS NOT YET BEEN ABOLISHED

Ottawa, Jan. 15. — Important regulations under the Military Service Act, it is officially stated, are still in force. These include the regulation which requires each person of apparent military age and description to carry documents proving his status under the Act. They include also the regulations pertaining to the duty of employers to notify registrars of all Class One men taken on or off their employ, and of securing themselves that no men in their employ, or taken on their employ, are in any way in default under the Military Service Act.

A number of other regulations passed under the Act have been suspended. Men becoming 19 years of age, Americans, British subjects coming to Canada to reside, and men becoming widowers, are no longer required to register. It is also unnecessary for any Class One men to make any further application whatever in connection with exemptions, as all exemptions current on November 11, 1918, are continued effective indefinitely.

Requirement of notification of change of address to the Military Service Act Registrars is suspended, as also is the provision requiring registrants to obtain permits to leave Canada.

To render the detection of defaulters as simple as possible registrars are issuing a uniform protection certificate to all men under their jurisdiction and in good standing on their records on November 11, 1918. This certificate will replace all exemption and protection certificates previously issued by registrars.

With the exception of a nucleus staff, consisting of the registrar and five assistants, registration offices are to be closed on Feb. 15.

The Arenas of Toronto and Ottawa by 5-2 in Toronto last night. Some O.H.A. stars who were expected to appear in the Arena lineup did not play.

NEBRASKA VOTES DRY ON FEDERAL LIQUOR BILL

LAST OF STATES REQUIRED TO GIVE MEASURE EFFECT.

GREATEST REFORM ON RECORD

LAW WILL BECOME OPERATIVE ONE YEAR AFTER THE RATIFICATION.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Washington, Jan. 16.—The United States has voted itself completely dry. Nebraska has ratified the Federal constitutional amendment, being the thirty-sixth state to make this decision. U. S. Congress will now vote general prohibition for the entire nation.

The News in Chicago.

Chicago, Jan. 16.—The United States today completed the Legislative process of voting itself dry. When the word was flashed over the wires that the 36th state, Nebraska, had ratified prohibition, amendment prohibition leaders declared that the accomplishment was the greatest piece of moral Legislation in the history of the world. The amendment to Federal constitution prohibitiong the manufacturing and sale of intoxicating beverages becomes effective one year after the date of its final ratification. Mean while, the nation goes dry July 1 next, by presidential proclamation as a war measure unless the President rescinds it before that date.

How the States Voted.

Congress passed the resolution submitting the amendment to the various state Legislatures in the midst of the seething preparations for war in 1917. The Senate adopted the resolution August 1 by a vote of 65 to 20 and the Lower House on Dec. 17 by 282 to 128.

The Legislature of Mississippi was the first to ratify taking this action on Jan. 8, 1918. Michigan, having by a state law made itself dry in 1918, was first state to ratify in 1919, the Legislature voting on the second day of the New Year.

From that date until today the Legislatures have acted rapidly. In California court action has already been taken to restrain the Governor from certifying the action of the Legislature to Washington. Every resource of the distilleries with one billion dollars available will be employed in a supreme effort to save their businesses, it is said.

New York To Enforce It.

Albany, N.Y., Jan. 16.—Immediately upon receipt of the word that the ratification of the Federal prohibition

TRADES COUNCIL ACCEPTS ISSUE WITH BOARD OF TRADE

Believes Latter Body Is Jealous of Labor's Success in Election—Plans to Freeze Out Delegates by Raising Membership Fee of Their Organization.

At the regular meeting of the Trades Council last night one of the delegates reported that he had attended a meeting of the Board of Trade and that he had noticed a disposition on the part of the members of that body to freeze out the representatives of Labor by raising the membership fee to $25 a year. The reason for this spirit of enmity as stated last night was that the Board of Trade members were jealous of the success of the Labor candidates at the recent civic elections. The Board of Trade, it was reported also proposed to appoint a paid secretary who will be on duty all the time.

The delegates at last night's meeting accepted the issue and declared that one year hence they will put up a stiffer fight than ever and will set out to capture the majority on the Board of Aldermen.

A delegation consisting of President Bolwell, Secretary Stevens, Alderman Morrison and Gainey and Delegate Sharpe will meet Minister of Labor Robertson at the Empress at 5.30 this evening to arrange for the public meeting to be held in the Labor Hall tonight after the Canadian Club luncheon.

What is a Bolshevist?

The term "Bolshevist," when applied to the labor men of Canada was resented as a libel. Then some discussion followed as to the real meaning of the term. One delegate stated that the difference between a Socialist and a Bolshevist was that while the first was satisfied to ask for something the latter went out and got it. The concensus of opinion seemed to be that a Bolshevist is an oppressed member of humanity who is making trouble because he lacks both work and bread.

The action of Mr. E.G. Patterson who as a member of the school board favored the granting of the bonus recently allowed teachers, so that those in receipt of small salary would receive more than those highly paid, was commended. One of the delegates went so far as to allege that this action which meant a square deal, was in line with the creed of the Bolshevists.

"Then Trustee Patterson must be a Bolshevist," remarked one delegate.

"You may call him that if you like," was the reply.

It is worthy of note that the delegates who approved Mr. Patterson's action are men who are employed in the plant over which Mr. Patterson is manager.

Delegates Lane, Begley, Dugan, and Marchand were appointed a committee to attend the meetings of the City Council to officially watch the proceedings of that body with special reference to the course pursued by the Labor Aldermen.

It was decided to organise a local branch of the Independent Labor party and Delegates McArthur, Lane, McMurray and Sharpe were appointed a committee to devise ways and means.

The next regular meeting of the Council will be held Wednesday evening, February 5th.

SUPREME WAR COUNCIL DECIDE TO GIVE NEWSPAPERS A HEARING.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Jan. 16. — The Supreme War Council today, after considering the matter of the relations between the conference and the press, decided to call a meeting, to be attended by members of the press and representatives of the various nations, to exchange views on publicity methods.

It Was Merely A Private Affair

RESIGNATION OF REV. T. H. MITCHELL AS PASTOR TORONTO CHURCH.

A meeting held in old St. Andrew's Church in Toronto last night, called for the purpose of considering the resignation of Rev. T. H. Mitchell, the pastor formerly of Peterborough, was held behind closed doors. After the meeting Mr. Mitchell stated that the affair of his resignation was a purely personal matter, there being nothing between the congregation and himself. He simply wished to be free and the congregation had acceded to his wishes.

A Man of Honor.

Today's Globe says: Old St. Andrews' Church unanimously accepted the resignation of its pastor, Rev. Thomas H. Mitchell, at the annual meeting last evening. A resolution moved by Hon. W. A. Charlton, and seconded by Mr. John G. Kent, was carried without dissent. It was in the following terms: "That the congregation of Old St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, while it feels and desires to express undiminished confidence in Mr. Mitchell as a man of honor and as one who has always shown himself sincerely desirous of conforming to the highest standards of Christian conduct, and while it appreciates and is grateful for Mr. Mitchell's services as a preacher and pastor, nevertheless recognizing that the strain of carrying on the work of this congregation in his present situation is greater than it is possible [illegible] and in the interests of the work, this congregation is constrained, though with deep regret, to acquiesce in his resignation of the pastorate."

London, Jan. 16.—Order has been restored in Berlin, it is announced by an official wireless appeal to the German nation sent out by the German government and picked up here. The appeal, which was signed by Premier Ebert, Philipp Scheidemann, Herr Landsberg, Gustave Noske, and Herr Wissell, members of the Cabinet, says that the government is determined to prevent by every means at its disposal a repetition of "similar abominations."

The appeal refers to the coming elections, under the "freest suffrage in the world, to determine the constitution of the German state," and adds that the present government is preparing a draft of a constitution which protects the free right of the self-determination of the nation "against all counter-revolutions or efforts at terrorism." Efforts are being made, it is said, to "arrive at a peace safeguarding the freedom of the German nation and which will render possible the foundation of a union of nations which will give protection against the danger of a fresh war."

After declaring there is a necessity for defending the nation against Polish annexationists, the appeal concludes: "No less is it our task to protect our frontier against fresh Russian military despotism which wants to force upon us, by means of warlike power, its anarchistic conditions and unchain a new world war of which our country would be the theatre. Bolshevism means the death of peace, of freedom and socialism."

Object To Plan Of Representation

FRENCH PAPER SAYS BRITISH AND AMERICANS WILL CONTROL CONFERENCE.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Jan. 16.—The decisions of the Supreme Council as regards both publicity and representation announced last night, are freely criticized in the French newspaper this morning. Le Journal, commenting on the question of representation, after pointing out that the British and Americans together have fifteen votes out of the total, asks why, if the British dominions are represented separately, are the French colonies and protectorates not similarly represented.

Supreme Council of Five Great Entente Powers Resumes Session Today—May Explain Measure of Restriction that Is to be Placed on Reports.

Paris, Jan. 16.—The Supreme Council of the five greater powers resumed its session at 10.30 o'clock today with a full attendance of members. There were present for France Premier Clemenceau and Foreign Minister Pichon; for the United States, President Wilson and Secretary of State Lansing; for Great Britain, Premier Lloyd George and Foreign Secretary Balfour; for Italy, Foreign Minister Sonnino, and for Japan, Viscount Chind and Baron Matsuo. Vittorio Orlando, the Italian Premier, is still detained in Rome.

The impression prevailed today that following protests that have arisen against the decision of the Council, and restricting all news of its sessions to formal communiques, some explanation or statement on the subject might appear in tonight's communique to the effect that the restriction will apply only to the actual proceedings of the current day and not to any comment by the delegates on the general question before the Council. This impression cannot be officially confirmed, but it finds place among the reports in circulation today.

NATIONAL ASSEMBLY TO BE ELECTED BY THE RUSSIANS

Admiral Kolchok Says That Is the Only Means of Settling the Destiny of Former Empire Whether as Republic or Monarchy.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Omsk, Central Siberia, Jan. 16—The destiny of Russia can be decided only by a National Constituent Assembly. Whether the future of Russia is monarchy of the most radical republic does not concern the present government," was striking utterance of Admiral Kolchak, supreme governer of the Omsk government to the Associated Press. Admiral Kolchak, confirming his statement that people will be given opportunity to register their desires, signed in the presence of the correspondent a historic document proclaimng an all-Russian national election at the earliest practicable moment. Later he informed the representatives of the Entente powers that the Russian Government desired the trans-Siberian railway to be turned over to an international technical commission. Admiral Kolchak then proceeded to justify the coup by which he gained control at Omsk.

CANADIAN POET, AUTHOR, ARTIST WILL DIRECT MUSICAL COMEDY

Wilson MacDonald Will Supervise the Presentation of His own Play "Sunny France" at Grand Opera House January 27 and 28

The Peter Robinson Chapter, I.O.D. has been fortunate in securing the services of Mr. Wilson MacDonald to supervise and direct the presentation of his musical comedy, "Sunny France," to be given under the auspices of the Peter Robinson Chapter at the Grand, January 27th and 28th. "Sunny France"—every word, note and action in it was written—composed and planned by Mr. MacDonald and the play is copy-righted throughout the English-speaking world. "Sunny France" has been presented in twelve cities in Canada from Vancouver to Montreal, and has received the highest praise, both for the genius and merit of the play itself and the manner in which it has been presented. The cast contains 165 people. The group dancing by children will be a revelation to Peterborough people, as to what can be accomplished in two weeks' rehearsals by Peterborough children under the direction of an artist of Mr. McDonald's ability and experience in this particular line.

Sir Thomas Lipton described Mr. MacDonald as "one of the most wonderful men I have ever met." Mr. MacDonald's most recent book of Canadian poems entitled "The Songs of the Prairie Land," and other poems, has just been published in Toronto. This little volume is made up of poems which are regarded in literary circles as ranking with the most wonderful of Canada's and England's poetry. Albert Smythe, literary critic of the Toronto World, said in an interview: "Wilson MacDonald has struck the highest note yet attained in Canadian literature."

The following press and other comment on Mr. MacDonald and his work will speak for itself:

Brand Whitlock, Mayor of Toledo, and famous American novelist wrote Mr. MacDonald: "I am writing to tell you how fine I thought your poem (The Shame of Society in the Toronto Star) and what a noble work it is you are doing."

Albert Smythe, literary critic of the Toronto World, said in an interview: "Wilson MacDonald has struck the highest note yet attained in Canadian

RANKS OF VETERANS OF '66 GROW THINNER EACH YEAR

Twenty-Two Years Ago There Were 70 and Now Only a Few Are Left—Held Reunion Last Evening.

Wednesday evening was the occasion of a very happy reunion of the volunteers who are left, who fifty-two years ago were called to arms to repel the Fenian raid in June of 1866.

Twenty-two years ago the veterans of '66 formed an Association in Peterborough with a membership of over seventy, today there are only a few left.

The following members were present:—

Pres. Col. J. W. Miller, J. D. Collins, H. Rush, G. Stanton, P. Thompson, R. Tivey, Alex. Fitzgerald, J. McComb, W. C. Boaro, H. Nesbitt and R. J. Sanderson.

The following gentlemen were [illegible] Mr. Firth, Mr. F. Pratt, Col. Mills and Peterborough's popular merchant, Mr. [illegible] and in song, speech and recitation these gentlemen contributed to the evening's entertainment and their kindness was appreciated.

The president in a neat speech referred to Comrade Tivey having attained his eightieth year and on behalf of the Association extended congratulations. Mr. Tivey expressed himself as pleased with the courtesy of his comrades and in good form gave an excellent recitation.

Refreshments were served and it was a happy bunch who sat around the board to do justice to the good things provided by Coleman Bros.

Mr. Coleman contributed a good Scotch song.

While the company were enjoying their smokes Mr. Rush moved a vote of thanks to the guests. Mr. Pratt in replying for the guests said he was pleased to be present and would be glad to spend another evening with the veterans. The singing of the National Anthem and Auld Lang Syne brought the entertainment to a close.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH"

THURSDAY, JANUARY 16, 1919

A HISTORY OF THE 93RD.

THE OFFICERS AND MEN of Peterborough's justly famous military unit, the 93rd Battalion, have requested Capt. C. R. Widdifield, one of its most distinguished members, to write a history of the regiment, from the time the order was issued for its organization down to the present. The object is a worthy one, and no volume could possibly be written that would attract more general interest. A history of the 93rd would be in large measure an account of Peterborough's part in the war.

The preparation of such a work could not be entrusted to more capable hands than those of Capt. Widdifield. He has all the requisite equipment, the essential literary ability, to begin with. He was one of the officers of that company, and his individual record from the day of his enlistment is above reproach. He went overseas as a captain, and on reaching England reverted in rank with others of the regiment in order to get to France. He won back his original rank by gallant service in the trenches.

Such a history as is contemplated will contain mention of the record of the individual members of the battalion, such as their full names, regimental numbers, date of enlistment or discharge, the service each rendered in England, and with what unit they fought in France, the length of time they were in the trenches, whether they were wounded, and why discharged.

Some of the most prominent young men in Peterborough, those who left promising professional or business career to enter the service of their country, gave their lives for the cause. To describe the part played by each of these will be one of the duties of the historian. In this department the co-operation of the parents of these young men will be required, and all such are asked to communicate with Capt. Widdifield and supply him with the desired information. The same request is made of the parents of all those members of the battalion who are still out of the city.

This is not a scheme to make money, and those who have undertaken the work have no funds to expend in advertising or in securing clerical help. It is, however, a matter of such general interest to the city, a tribute to the heroes who have made the name of Peterborough famous, that all residents who are in any way able to do so, should be glad of the opportunity to help.

Peterborough will always be proud of the battalion that went overseas from here just at the time when the services of such a unit were so urgently needed. The fact that it was broken up on reaching England, instead of being sent intact to the front, has always been regretted, but this step was due entirely to the exigencies of war. The battalion was complete in every department, splendidly officered and composed of as fine a fighting force as ever answered the call for volunteers.

Let the chronicles of such a battalion be written now and part of the history of Peterborough itself as well as one chapter in the story of the war. Let all aid Capt. Widdifield in the new duty for which he has volunteered.

SIR WILFRID AT OTTAWA.

IN HIS ADDRESS to the Liberals of Eastern Ontario at Ottawa, Sir Wilfrid Laurier said that during his regime the Liberal party had one fiscal goal in view—a tariff for revenue only, and that they worked steadily toward that end. This being the case, it must be said that the party believed in making haste slowly. They were fifteen years in power, and at the rate of progress toward their destined end that they made in that time it may be said on a rough estimate that they would not have attained their object inside of one hundred years. In that time, however, the world may have been made over, fiscally and otherwise, labor conditions may be the same in every country under the sun, and the necessity for such things as tariffs may no longer exist.

Sir Wilfrid is charitably disposed to welcome back to the fold all those Liberals who went over to the Union Government a year ago, provided they express repentance for what they have done. There is an excellent opportunity here for the mutual exercise of the virtue of forgiveness, and it is possible that the leader himself had more to be forgiven for the wreck he made of the party than have those who deserted a stranded and condemned barque.

Sir Wilfrid attempts to explain—or to apologize for—his attitude on conscription by saying that his sole object was to preserve harmony among the various elements of the population and so win the war. He claims to understand the temper of the Canadian people better than does any other living man.

If harmony was his object, then Sir Wilfrid failed dismally to achieve his purpose. On the contrary, his attitude on the conscription question fomented anything in the way of racial differences that previously existed and set one section of the Dominion against the other in a fued more bitter than was ever known before. Sir Wilfrid may be willing to welcome the Liberal Unionists back home; he certainly needs recruits for his party. [illegible] will ever condone his war attitude. If there was one man living who could have reconciled his own province to the war policy of the Government, that man was Sir Wilfrid Laurier, but he never so much as raised a finger in an attempt to do so.

Sir Wilfrid has no message of comfort to bring to his followers. He has no platform to suggest, and he seems to realize that the stars in their courses are set against the Liberals.

THE RIVAL EXPRESS.

THE DAY IS COMING when such a thing as a street car track will be unknown on city streets, when motor 'busses will take the place of the present means of urban transportation. The experiment has been made with success in European cities and to some extent in the United States.

The motor 'bus requires no exclusive right-of-way. It mingles with the ordinary traffic of the street on the same terms. Another advantage is the personal safety which it affords. It can take on or discharge passengers close to the curb and so do away with the risk involved in boarding or leaving a street car in the middle of the thoroughfare.

Trunk lines of radial railways are always likely to remain a public necessity, but it is probable that the feeders for these lines will not be branch radials but motor 'busses run on improved modern county highways, that retain their smooth surface all summer regardless of whether the weather is wet or dry. The motor 'busses that in different parts of the Province are now gathering up the farmer's produce and taking it to market are already recognized as rivals of existing radial roads. The provincial highway from Toronto to Hamilton, where it parallels a radial road, especially from Oakville to the latter city, has already had its effect upon the earning capacity of the cars that are operated by electricity on an expensive track. As good country roads are built the motor 'bus and the automobile will come into more general use, and the rural transportation problem, either as to freight or passengers, will to a great extent be solved. As regards expense, the gasolene-propelled vehicle has all the best of it. It is claimed, too, that during the winter months, even with the snowfall heavy, the country road can be kept open for auto traffic just as cheaply as the same task can be accomplished on the radial line.

FORCE VERSUS FOOD.

THE FIRST FRENCH revolution was really a hunger strike. A people famished are never safe, especially when there is a well-fed and well-compared class in authority over them. The lack of nutriment will drive men and women insane, filling them with the fury of wild beasts.

The autocrat set out to change the map of Europe by establishing his dominion in foreign lands and over alien races. He has succeeded only in bringing ruin and famine everywhere. In Russia the oppressed people are rioting for bread. No hungry man can work, and there is no inducement to labor if toil is to earn not even a scant subsistence. The civilized world, the people who have enough and to spare, who have never felt the iron heel of autocracy grinding them into the dust, should be charitable in their judgment of the rioting masses in Europe. The history of the French revolution read today wins the sympathy of humanity for the people who stormed the French strongholds of power. History is simply repeating itself, and in the years to come the lawlessness rampant in Russia and Germany today will be regarded in a vastly different light. It was never designed by Providence that some of His creatures should starve to death while others roll in luxury.

President Wilson is the head of a great nation, but he knows the people from whom he has come and who have made him what he is today. He feels for the leaderless mobs in Europe as none of the crowned rulers or statesmen over there possibly can. He asks the American Congress to appropriate one hundred million dollars to feed the hungry across the ocean. In one of those phrases that are likely to live in history he says that it is 'food, not force,' that is required to restore internal harmony in the countries cursed by what are really struggles for bread. Bolshevism will spread westward unless stamped out at its source. To employ force against it will tend to fan it into a still higher flame. Food will soothe the starving populace into contentment. President Wilson's remedy is the logical solution of the problem.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

THERE IS GOVERNMENT by autocrats, government by the people, and government by machine guns.

* * * * *

AT LEAST the prohibition law in the United States cannot be regarded as a temporary measure for the duration of the war.

* * * * *

RUSSIA'S home brand of warfare is as barren of results as the variety she put up when her armies were in the big scrap.

* * * * *

THE ARMISTICE may have brought peace for the Allies, but in Germany the fighting spirit that has been universal for ages still survives.

* * * * *

EVEN AT THIS early date it begins to look as if Ald. Turner will be one member of the Council who will do things of real benefit to the city.

* * * * *

ALAS for the dreams of mortals! In the countries where the ex-kaiser hoped to plant German kultur nothing is visible to the naked eye but ruin, desolation and famine.

* * * * *

KITCHENER denies the charge that the school board is advertising for a German teacher, probably resenting the imputation that one would be sufficient for a city of its requirements.

* * * * *

DUBLIN offered President Wilson the freedom of the city, but the courtesy has not been accepted. Perhaps Mr. Wilson believes there is not enough to go round or does not fancy the brand.

* * * * *

THERE IS something eminently satisfactory about a constitutional prohibition law as proposed in the United States, instead of one that can be juggled from time to time by political parties.

* * * * *

LET THE HOCKEY games go on. Canadian manhood, energy, initiative, in fact every admirable quality demonstrated by our soldiers in the late war, had their start on the athletic fields at home.

* * * * *

AT LAST the Government of Ontario has decided to take over the dispensing of liquor for medicinal and other lawful purposes, instead of leaving the work to favored vendors who were cleaning up fortunes.

THE HUNGER MAP OF EUROPE

At the Potsdam conference in July, 1914, the German Emperor, saying that he was planning a world empire, exhibited a map drawn in accordance with his dream. Paris, London and Washington were German cities and nearly all the world was tributary to him. Beside him Cyrus, Alexander and Julius Caesar were good figures. With sword and torch he began his work; after four years it is completed, and the result is shown in a map published in the United States Food Administration, entitled the "Hunger Map of Europe."

The war's cost in human life cannot yet be estimated with reasonable certainty. Some statisticians say 15,000,000, and other 20,000,000. The map shows twenty times as many people in Europe battling with famine, and half of them even now in its grip with little hope of outside help. In the next six months more people in Europe may die from hunger than have perished in the four years of war.

No attempt is made to classify the food conditions of Germany, Austria, and Hungary, but all the remaining countries of Europe and the Near East are considered. Beginning at a point in Russia on the Siberian border, about half way between the northern extremity and the Caspian Sea, a line should be drawn southwest to Albania on the Adriatic. All north of this is now in the grip of famine. This includes the northwestern half of Russia, excepting a little fringe around Archangel, Finland, Poland, Bohemia, and the south Slavic peoples. Armenia also is in this class.

The other half of Russia, and Rumania and Greece are classified as "approaching the famine point." Italy, Bulgaria, and Turkey have a serious food shortage. Serbia and Belgium are destitute, but are now receiving American aid. France, the United Kingdom, Ukraine, Spain, Portugal, Norway, Sweden, Holland and Denmark are classified on the map thus: "Present food supply sufficient, but future serious."

A rough estimate would put the north Russians, Finns, Bohemians, and Armenians, and other small allies now suffering famine, at 135,000,000. The three great allies whose condition is not so serious would make up 125,000,000 more; and these are, perhaps, 40,000,000 in the neutrals. Excepting Ukraine and Denmark, none of these can live until next harvest without help.

The map presents a tremendous fact beyond the power of words to picture. It will stand as Wilhelm's monument till Time shall be no more. But looking at it, we must realise our immediate duty. Those stricken peoples are calling to us for food. The end of the war does not release us from responsibility to feed them.

WIT AND WISDOM

When Words Fail.

William Howard Taft said in an address "Before the hideousness of the Hun language fails us.

"Yes, the man who would try to paint the Hun finds himself in much the same position as the clergyman who was playing golf.

"This clergyman was just making a difficult put when the caddie joggled his arm.

"The cergyman, red with rage, looked at his caddie a long time and finally stammered: 'You—you—naughty caddie!'"

So Parisian.

The heroism of France has made the French language popular, says Argenout. On this head there is a story illustrating the tact of M. Jusserand, the French Ambassador. A Senator at a luncheon said to M. Jusserand:

"Take—cer—cake woo voo-ly—I mean—er—passy-moi aill voo play—er—"

M. Jusserand laid his hand on the Senator's shoulder and in his excellent English said:

"My dear, sir, my very dear sir, do, please, stop speaking French. Your accent is so Parisian that, positively, it makes me homesick."

Worth More.

"Four dollars? But you only wanted $2 for this anecdote last week."

"Then it was about Julius Caesar. Now, as you notice, it is about Gen. Foch."

Det—I had nine proposals at Manley last summer.

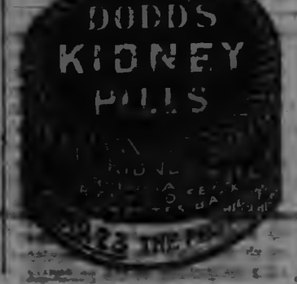
Wife—"John, there's a burglar at the silver and another in the pantry eating my pies. Get up and call for help."

Mub (at window)—"Police! Doctor!"

How queer the newspapers look without war maps! We should familiarize ourselves with those old maps now, before the peace conference begins to roll boundaries around.

FEMININE LOGIC

The young lady across the way says she saw in the paper that the increase in the railroad men's wages is not to be retroactive and it was hardly reasonable to suppose it would continue forever.



TODAY'S STORY

A genteman given to habits of extravagance found himself in the bankruptcy court and was severely questioned by the presiding official.

"At what precise date did you first find yourself in trouble?" asked the judge.

With an air of the utmost perplexity the gentleman gazed around the court until his wandering eyes fell upon the anxious countenances of his creditors; then with a genial wave of his hand in their direction he said, pleasantly:

"Oh, you must mean these gentlemen's troubles. I can't say I've had any myself."

And, on thinking the matter over, the judge agreed with the bankrupt's opinion.

SOME OTHER THINGS

(By Walt Mason)

Oh, pardners, let us not forever discuss the war and what it cost; it is not wise or sane or clever—we're all convinced war was a frost. We'll have to turn our faces forward, and think of things that should be done and not be always gazing warward or making faces at the Hun. While we are resting in the gloaming, we may thrash out the facts once more, and give the Teuton another combing, and tell old tales of bones and gore. But in the daytime we're expected to put up nineteen kinds of grass; in war days were much neglected and now reforms should come to pass. The story of the past is written, it cannot be erased by men; words can't restore the countries smitten, or make the dead towns live again. All fellows should be up and doing while daylight hours with us abide; the evening is the time for chewing such muslin as great wars provide. There's now a great demand for labor, in wareroom, workshop, mill and grange, but when the men of sword and saber come back there may be quite a change. Then he who did persistent talking all day, around the village pump, will lose his number and go walking and keep on till he hits the dump.

Occasionally we see a man who looks as if he had tried to preserve his dignity in alcohol.

LESSONS IN RIGHT LIVING

(By Dr. W. A. Brady.)

A regular, ethical, orthodox, that is to say thoughtful and observing reader of this column writes:

"In your column recently appeared the astonishing statement that children of the poor are about as well nourished as children of the middle classes and the more cultured upper class. • • • The miasus taught school a few brief years ago, and kid sister teaches now, near Mulberry street, New York City. Those kids drink prodigiously of a rank red red wine, even for breakfast. They subsist regularly on a diet of soda crackers and pickles at noon, for their mothers work out, as a rule. Young tots, many of them. If malnutrition isn't the descriptive word, then what is?

"Prices of good things to eat are astounding, or our children we use three quarts of grade A milk a day, at 23 cents a quart—69 cents a day. Butter—ye gods, butter has started more bolshevik talk in our household at 75 cents a pound than Trotsky could wisk for!. And only yesterday the farmer lady informed us that eggs may be purchased at the nice, round, comfortable price of 80 cents a dozen.

"There are hundreds of thousands of heads of families drawing $18 to $20 a week. Fresh eggs, fresh milk and real butter have a fat chance of gracing the table in a home on that basis!"

Oleomargarine at half the price of butter is a perfectly satisfactory substitute for butter at war prices. Children who receive as much as a pint of fresh, clean raw milk (raw milk, I say, and not pasteurized or heated milk) lose nothing from such substitution.

Eggs never will be worth more than 40 cents a dozen compared with the market prices of fresh fish and meats. Eggs are meat.

Children old enough to take a reasonably varied diet of solid foods—that is, children who have cut any teeth—can do very well without milk at war prices, provided they have bread and oleo, fresh vegetables or fruits, and some kind of fresh meat or fish daily.

Malnutrition is the word for the Mulberry street child that subsists on wine, pickles and crackers. Fortunately, the poor in most cases do not follow that regimen.

Softening of the Brain.

"What are the symptoms of softening of the brain? Is it prevalent among young people? . . . S. A. W."

Sorry, but I am just out of symptoms. It's against the rules of this department to state symptoms. Softening of the brain is a popular name for general paralysis of the insane (paresis)—in which disease there is no softening, but rather hardening of the brain and spinal chord. Paresis sometimes occurs in young persons, but is more generally observed in persons 40 or more years of age, being a sequel of syphilis, acquired or inherited.

I Give Up.

"Please tell me what is ailing me. I have no energy and cannot take any interest in anything.—D.M."

Unfortunately, I broke my second sight glasses this morning and so I am unable to determine what is ailing you. You might try the outja board or something if you can't reach a doctor.

CONCERNING WOMEN

Fourteen out of the forty-eight American states have granted full suffrage to women.

Women now have a voice in the full 213 electoral votes of the twenty-two states in which they may vote.

A Portland, Ore., hotel has two Chinese girls in native costume answering calls and paging guests.

New York state has more than 3,000,000 women over 21 years of age and eligible to vote.

Two states, by act of their legislatures, Arkansas and Texas, have granted women the right to vote in the primaries.

Chinese girls wearing kimonos are being employed to take charge of the tea rooms in many of the larger New York hotels.

At the close of the war more than 5,000,000 British women were doing 1,701 different kinds of work previously followed by men.

Linna Bresette and Alice McFarland, factory inspectors in Kansas, plan to carry on a rigid campaign against industrial concerns in that state who persist in hiring child labor.

How To Save Coal

Have weather stripping on all your window casings. Put storm windows on the north side of the house. The warm, comfortable cold winter homes in the northwest are a great lesson in that respect.

Shut off any rooms that do not need heating. You will be just as well off without them; better, in fact, as they will then call for less work.

Sift your ashes from the stove and sift those from the furnace, too. From each sifting you will get enough coal to run the furnace overnight.

Don't burn coal in open fireplace. 90 per cent. of such heat escapes through the chimney. You may love your cheery open fire. It is a sacrifice to give it up perhaps. But, compared with the sacrifices of life and love that the brave families overseas are making, it is really nothing to renounce this pleasure. Burn wood in your open fireplace when you need the cheer.

A controlling interest in the New York National League baseball club was sold yesterday by the estate of the late John T. Brush to a syndicate of New York sportsmen for one million dollars.

The British troopship Empress of Asia passed through the Panama Canal yesterday en route to Vancouver with 1,400 discharged soldiers.

FARMERS ARE IN ANGRY MOOD

SAY THAT NAMES OF ORGANIZATION, UNITED FARMERS, IS IMPROPERLY USED.

Toronto, Jan. 16 Next week the United Farmers are going to get out "The United Farmer of Ontario," and in the meantime Charles C. Nixon is going to continue publication of his "United Farmer." From statements of both sides the probabilities are that both parties will then seek legal aid to restrain the other from using the term "United Farmer."

If possession is nine part of the law Editor Nixon has a good running start on the farmers' organization, for he has the name registered. On the other hand, Secretary J. J. Morrison, of the United Farmers, decribes Nixon's action as "moral misappropriation," and hopes that the law will take cognizance of the fact that his the idea of the new farmers' weekly.

"We have not yet decided what action we will take," declared Mr. Morrison. "but we are going to go right ahead with our farmers' paper. Mr. Nixon's paper cannot stay in the field, because it is catering to the very people he has angered by appropriating our name."

"Will you seek an injunction to restrain the use of the name 'United Farmer?' " "I don't known what we will do yet."

Editor Nixon sticks by his original statement that his "United Farmer" is in the field to stay. By advertisement in the daily press he replies to an ad. of the United Farmers and says that the "Canada Farmers' Publishing Syndicate will continue to give Ontario farmers the truth."

TO DARKEN HAIR APPLY SAGE TEA

Look Young! Bring Back Its Natural Color, Gloss and Attractiveness

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, streaked or gray. Mixing the Sage Tea at home though is troublesome. An easier way is to get a 50-cent bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound at any drug store all ready for use. This is the old time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients.

While wispy, gray faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark glossy, soft and luxuriant.

DRUGGISTS TALK ON LIQUOR LAWS

IN SESSION AT OTTAWA TAKE UP RECENT LEGISLATION.

Ottawa, Jan. 15.—The vexatious question of liquor legislation as it affects the druggists of the Dominion is among several under discussion by members of the executive of the Canadian Pharmaceutical Association, who are meeting in session at the Chateau Laurier.

The conference which is being attended by representative members of the profession from the Atlantic to the Pacific is the first of the kind held since the outbreak of the war.

Up to the present the druggists as a whole have taken the stand that they will not become liquor vendors, although they are permitted by law to fill doctors prescriptions.

Another subject under consideration is that of securing more uniformity of regulations now in effect in the different Provinces. These at present are such as to cause much inconvenience to druggists who wish to remove from one Province to another and it is desired that measures be taken to place all on a standard basis.

The slogan of the minor leagues, after informal conferences in New York yesterday, is "no compromise" in their fight with hte majors for the abolition of the draft.

JUDGE RUDDY CHAIRMAN

Of Conciliation Board That Sat at Gananoque

Gananoque, Ont., Jan. 16— The Board of Conciliation and Investigation composed of Judge R. Ruddy of Whitby, chairman; Dr. E. L. Atkinson of Gananoque representing the Steel Company of Canada at Gananoque, and Fred Bancroft of Toronto for the employes, concluded its session here, and a report has been sent on the the Department of Labor.

An agreement was reached which provides increases in hourly rates, piece work rates, double time for Sunday work, and time and one-half after regular hours. The organization involved was the Amalgamated Association of Steel, Iron and Tin Workers of America.

The Western Ontario Dairymen's convention is meeting at London.

GETTING THE SOLDIERS BACK INTO CIVIL LIFE

Mr. H. J. Daly, Director of Repatriation, Is One of the Busiest Men in Ottawa

The Repatriation Committee is the busiest Committee in Ottawa. Mr. H. J. Daly, Director of Repatriation, is an outstanding figure in the business and industrial life of Canada, and is bringing to the discharge of his duties, efficient methods and a comprehensive grasp of the fact that the demobilization of our soldiers, and the re-adjustment of industrial conditions of our most vital task that can engage the activities of the Government, and the energies of individual citizens.

The first work is to get the soldiers home. There are two methods of demobilizaton. The fighting corps will be brought back as units under their own officers. Some re-organization will occur to ensure that each unit shall, as far as possible, be composed of men from the same locality. The remainder of the Canadian army will e demobilized in standard drafts of 500 men.

There is no post discharge pay now. What was known as post discharge pay is now called "War Services Gratuity."

The Department of Labor, in its scheme of a single employment agency from one end of Canada to the other, is setting up employment offices in the urban centres with a population of 10,000 or more, and in the smaller places where the need for one exists. The plan calls for 64 offices throughout Canada, of which 20 are already in existence.

This scheme provides for opportunities for employment, mobility of employment and for expansion of employment on behalf of the returned men.

Each local employment office will be in charge of a superintendent, with a staff of interviewers, record clerks, stenographers and others.

In addition, there will be attached to each office a number of salesmen. This is a resmarkable innovation in handling the business men of the district, striving to sell them the services of the office, and encouraging them to use the employment office exclusively for their labor needs.

Another interesting feature, following British experience, is the Advisory Council of Employers and Employees, in connection with each local office.

Such a representative body, giving aid to the superintendent, will prove indispensable, especially when a strike or lock-out is declared, or is impending.

At the winter ports of disembarkation, Governmental and Voluntary Organizations do everything possible to care for the returned men. Women and children dependents of the soldiers are specially cared for. At St. John there is a Women's Reception Committee, composed of representatives of 15 local organizations, which work in conjunction with two secretaries of the National Y.W.C.A. Halifax has a Creche Committee, consisting of 11 women who have been active in local war work. Every assistance is given returning men at both ports. Children are cared for; baggage is located; sandwiches, hot tea and coffee are provided.

There is a Red Cross nurse on each committee to give assistance to either women or children who require her assistance. First aid supplies and extra clothing for babies are always on hand.

There is an Empergency Hospital with accommodation for 30 women at each port, as well as a room where babies can be cared for during the wait between boat and train. Any woman requiring monetary assistance receives a gift of the amount necessary from the Canadian Patriotic Fund. In cases of sickness, provision has been made with the local hospitals.

Each train carrying unaccompanied women and children has on board a graduate nurse, whose salary and travelling expenses are paid by the Canadian Red Cross Society. This nurse has been selected and enrolled by the Canadian Graduate Nurses' Association.

Adequate arrangements are being made to receive women and children at their home stations, to extend to them such temporary hospitality as may be necessary, and to do everything possible to see that they are established in comfortable homes. Several organizations may desire to do parts of this work, but it was found advisable to name one Dominion-wide organization to become responsible for the efficient performance of these functions.

Arrangements have been made for the Canadian Patriotic Fund to accept this responsibility, and to supervise the arrangements for the welfare of the returning dependents of the soldiers. In order to carry out this impotant duty in the best possible way, it is necessary that all other organizations should co-operate.

Victory bonds continue to sell at strong figures on the Toronto market.

Soldiers Home — THE SALVATION ARMY — Coming Campaign

"First to Serve— Last to Appeal"

The Record of
The Salvation Army
In Peace and War

Fifty-three years ago a man so loved the world and his fellow-man that he consecrated his life to the relief of distress and the service of the Master.

The world scoffed at his Salvation Army toiling to raise outcasts from the gutter, but General Booth lived to see scorn turn to reverence, and when he died, kings sent their representatives to his funeral.

His greatest memorial is the Salvation Army laboring in 63 countries, speaking 40 languages, serving behind the trenches since the twelfth day of the war, with Huts, Hostels, Rest Rooms, in addition to the work among soldiers' families here at home.

And now comes the crisis. With the homecoming of 300,000 soldiers, and all the many problems that involves, the additional strain on the Salvation Army will be enormous. But the Salvation Army faces the mighty task ahead, confident that the necessary funds will be forthcoming.

The work the Salvation Army will be called upon to do is a vital factor in Reconstruction. Notwithstanding all the work the Government has undertaken, including the granting of pensions, there is still need for the organized effort and the uplifting influence of the Salvation Army, and, with confidence, business men's committees ask your earnest support of the

Salvation Army Million Dollar Fund
January 19th to 25th

Human Evidences of the Work

Here a returning soldier sees his baby for the first time. In the Salvation Army Maternity Home the mother received the best of care and medical attention. The Salvation Army Lassies found her struggling along without help. Two lives in all probability saved.

Picture a discharged soldier, out of a job. He is unable to provide maternity attendance for his wife. Imagine his relief when he finds the door of the Salvation Army Maternity Home is open to her.

Multiply these cases by hundreds and thousands and you will not be wide of the mark. Then consider the case of other mothers—

Who would deny the right of even the "love child" to enter the world surrounded by the loving care of the Salvation Army workers, nurses and doctors in the Maternity Home?

Among the Soldiers' Families

A soldier at the front received a letter from the Salvation Army to say that his wife was getting along nicely after a severe illness in which she had been found alone in the house. The letter did not tell how the Salvation Army Lassie had scrubbed floors, set the house in order, and nursed the woman back to health.

The wife of another soldier was unable to keep her home together and look after the children. The Salvation Army workers found her, too proud to ask for help, but too proud to accept guidance and assistance with the kind words lovingly offered.

Many soldiers will find it hard to settle into civilian life. Distress among soldiers' families is inevitable, but while the home can be kept intact there is a solid foundation for the Salvation Army to build upon. The soldier will be helped to find a job. The children will be clothed so that they can go to school. Food will be forthcoming. And there will be that Cleanliness which is next to Godliness, the spirit which actuates the work.

The Salvation Army is one of the organizations whose objectives extend beyond material comfort. Everything it does is ultimately directed to the extension of the Kingdom of Christ.

It approaches very practical problems in a very practical way, and achieves RESULTS. If you approve of its aims—spiritual as well as material—you will gladly give your help to raise the fund, without which much suffering must remain unrelieved—suffering among those particularly who offered their lives a living sacrifice to our comfort and protection.

PASTOR SAYS HAVELOCK IS ENTITLED TO HIGH SCHOOL

Rev. James Skene Sets Forth His Arguments in a Letter to the Standard.

Rev. James Skene, pastor of Knox Presbyterian Church, Havelock, believes that village should have a high school and states his case in the following letter to the Standard:

As the "Win the War" cry has now lost its charm, is it not time that as citizens we devote our energies in other directions?

The New Post Office and Hydro Electric are both worthy objects, but of still greater importance is our educational privileges, which up to the present, as citizens, we have been somewhat lax and have failed to reach that goal that some of us desire to attain, namely, the transformation of our Continuation School to that of a High School.

Continuation schools have not to any great extent brought about the results or fulfilled the expectations for which they were created. Instead these schools are simply High Schools doing the same or similar work, fitting youths for the teaching profession and for the entrance to the Universities and professional colleges. That being the case why should we not have a High School?

I will humbly submit a few reasons why we are entitled to have a High School:

1—Doing the same work as High Schools having two or three masters.

2—The qualifications for such schools as Havelock and Lakefield are the same as those for High Schools.

3—The population of Havelock is 1500 or more, equal if not larger than Norwood and Omemee combined, each of which have a High School.

4—An increasing number of outside pupils, which would be greatly increased with the prestige of a High School.

5—A High School would draw its fair share of maintenance funds from the County which even now would amount to $500 or more in addition to what was received and would not for the present increase or incur any extra expense.

6—There is no valid reason why a High School and Public School should not be conducted in the same building. Before the Model schools were started in 1885 it was deemed best to separate the Public and High Schools, but these have now been abolished.

7—On the basis of the attendance Havelock could claim the right of having the Continuation School made a High School. The following have a smaller attendance than Havelock and are drawing much larger grants: Rockland, Vienia, Pork Dover, Omemee, Port Rowan, Newcastle and others. The attendance for Havelock school for the current year will reach 50 at the least and none of the above schools have so many.

8—If a High School we would then have representation on the Entrance Board.

If our expense in the way of heating, caretaking, and other details total $3400 and one third of our pupils were from outside points, we would be entitled to $1200 of a grant or about $700 more than we are now receiving.

I have advanced a few reasons they are in perfect harmony with law and order, trusting that as citizens we may show readiness to examine without impatience all sides of the questions and a willingness to follow where truth leads and courage to follow up a true ideal.

MORE OFFENCES ON THE STATUTES

SOCIAL SERVICE WORKERS PLAN ADDITIONAL WORK FOR THE LEGISLATURE.

Toronto, Jan. 16.—Social service workers are in session here. The committee on legislation made it an offense: 1, Registration of male and female at hotels as man and wife. 2, Passed a bylaw protecting all female employes under 21 from seduction by employers. 3, The corruption of children. 4, Bylaw raised the age of consent for girls from 16 years to 18 years. The committee is striving to pass a bylaw which will censor the lip reading of the moving pictures.

Henry Challis of Kent Bridge has been missing since December 30th, when he purchased a ticket to Chatham. He had quite a sum of money on him.

Premier Lenine has begun to lose faith in the future of Bolshevism.

German gold reserves are to be transferred from Berlin to Frankfort.

Korea will make protest to the Peace Conference against annexation to Japan.

Toronto Teachers To Get Increase

LIKELY THAT MINIMUM SALARY WILL BE PENED AT $800.

Toronto, Jan. 16 — Salaries of teachers in Toronto's High and Public Schools are to rise again this year if the teachers have their way.

Requests have already been made to the trustees for favorable consideration of a revision of the salary schedule. Trustee C. A. B. Brown has a motion before the Board of Education at the next meeting to commit the board to a minimum of $800 a year for the female teachers in the Public Schools and he is confident that it will carry.

Last year several of the trustees made an attempt to fix an $800 minimum, and they almost succeeded. This year there is little doubt that it will be fixed at that figure.

The present minimum is $700 and the maximum is $1400, but the climb is weary and slow for the annual increment is only $50. If the annual raise were $100 it would induce some teachers to stay on the staff.

High school principals and assistant masters have also asked for salary revision but instead of making any specific demand they have asked for a conference with the trustees in regard to the cost of living and the expense of maintaining a home under present conditions.

LANDED AT ST. JOHN

Word has been received by Mrs. Thomas Jackson, Bolivar street that her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Arnold Jackson, has landed in St. John, N. B. Pte. Arnold Jackson, is at present in a hospital in England.

ADVERTISE IN THE REVIEW.

KNOX CHURCH CONGREGATION HAD MOST SUCCESSFUL YEAR

Progress Made in Every Branch of the Work and Financial Statement Shows a Balance on the Right Side of the Ledger.

The annual meeting of Knox Church was held last night. The various reports of the years' work were very encouraging. The Session report, which was read by Mr. M. N. Clark, recorded 22 baptisms, 15 marriages and 37 funerals. Suitable reference was made to the distress caused by the epidemic of influenza. There was also an expression of thankfulness that the year 1918 had ushered in the dawn of peace.

Missionary Reports.

The activities of the various missionary societies of the congregation were well presented by Mrs. J. Allen for the Women's Missionary Society, Miss Clara Ross for the Goforth Mission Club, an Miss Cora Clarke for the Junior Mission Band. Mr. Wm. Mott reported the missionary givings Sunday collections to be $866. The total missionary givings of the congregation through the weekly collections, the Sunday school and the missionary societies is over $1200.

Sunday School Flourishing.

The reports of the Sunday school indicate a healthy condition. This very important branch of the work of the church is under the care of Mr. M. N. Clark, and his efficiency is manifest in the results obtained. The work is seriously handicapped for the lack of a place of meeting for the intermediate school, which would give the teachers good facilities for presenting the lessons to their classes. At present this part of the school meets in the gallery of the church, and, while good work is being done, the teachers and officers are anxious for improvement in the near future

The Primary Department, which is under the efficient direction of Miss A. Macdonald, is a bright feature of Knox Sunday school work. There is an enrollment in this department of not less than 144. These are cared for by a staff of six young women. The adult department owes a great deal to its quartette of teachers, namely, Mrs. W. Roger, Mrs. A. Kensie, Mr. Turnbull and Mr. A. Kenzie.

The reports of the Young People's Guild, of the choir and of the Ladies' Aid were all of a meritorious order.

Red Cross Work.

Amongst other activities, the claims of the Red Cross Society and the Prisoners of War Fund were not forgotten by several of the organizations. The Ladies' Aid, the Volunteer Bible Class, the Y. P. Guild, the Bereah Bible Class, the Brotherhood and Intermediate School all reported a share of work done for these interests. The Ladies' Aid remembered the soldiers with Christmas boxes. The Brotherhood and the Intermediate School have each of them a Victory bond to their credit. The Volunteer and Berean Bible Classes contributed to the Red Cross and the Prisoners of War Fund. The latter class has the fine record of raising throughout the year the sum of $150 for military relief work, while their grand total reaches the proud figure of $292.

Has Balance on Hand.

The report of the church treasurer, Mr. T. Carpenter, was very encouraging. For the first time in years Knox Church has a balance to its credit in its current expense account. This satisfactory condition is directly due to the liberality of the congregation The income for current revenue amounted to $5136.

Mr. Carpenter in reporting the Building and Interest Fund stated that the income for the year just closed was $2733.00. This amount is a high tribute to the liberality of the congregation and a few of their friends. Mr. Carpenter reported that the indebtedness on the church mortgage now stands at $10,300.

The Anniversary Services which were held on Dec. 15th, proved very successful. Able discourses were given by Rev. Principal Gandier. The thank-offering contributed amounted to $1635. The grand total for the year exceeds $10,000.

Memorial for the Fallen

A committee was appointed to deal with the matter of securing a suitable memorial for the men of the congregation who enlisted for active service. The members of the committee were Messrs D. Hamilton. Dr. McCulloch. H. J. Cameron, A. McKenzie and Mesdames Macdonald, Roger and Smith.

Messrs Trussler, Hamilton, C. Huffman, Carpenter, Roy and Coulkshanks were appointed as managers for a three year term.

Dr. McCulloch was appointed as the church representative on the Board of Nicholls Hospital.

A music committee was appointed being composed of the following: Mrs McCammon, Mrs. Carpenter, Miss Caldwell, Mr. J. F. Morrison, Mr. Croft and Mr. McCammon.

It was decided to introduce a new hymn book for general use on the first Sunday in June.

The meeting closed with prayer and the benediction.

BREAK A CHILD'S COLD BY GIVING SYRUP OF FIGS

CLEANSES THE LITTLE LIVER AND BOWELS AND THEY GET WELL QUICK.

When your child suffers from a cold, don't wait; give the little stomach, liver and bowels a gentle, thorough cleansing at once. When cross, peevish, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally, if breath is bad, stomach sour, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the clogged-up, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again.

If your child coughs, snuffles and has caught cold or is feverish, or has a sore throat, give a good dose of 'California Syrup of Figs" to evacuate the bowels, no difference what other treatment is given.

Sick children needn't be coaxed to to take this harmless "fruit laxative." Millions of mothers keep it handy because they know its action on the stomach, liver and bowels is prompt and sure. They also know a little given today saves a sick child tomorrow.

Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company."

BORDEN, SIFTON AT CONFERENCE

WILL PROBABLY REPRESENT CANADA SITTING FROM TIME TO TIME.

Ottawa, Jan. 16.—There is much satisfaction in the capital over the news from Paris that Canada is to be directly represented at the peace conference. Sir Robert Borden from the first, with the backing and approval of the Canadian Government, has strongly urged that the Dominion should be given equal status in the conference with the small allied nations and in addition should have their representatives upon a panel from which the British delegation would be drawn. On both these proposals Sir Robert, it is known here, received the support of Lloyd George. Sir Robert felt strongly that Canada, having made such sacrifices and having played such an important part in the war, should be directly represented on this, the most important conference in the world's history.

There will be five British delegates, who will be alternated and at times Canada will be represented on the delegation of Great Britain.

While there is no official announcement it is believed the two Canadian delegates will be Sir Robert Borden and Hon. Arthur Sifton. This may delay their return until the spring. Sir George Foster and Hon. C. J. Doherty, however, are expected home shortly after the opening of Parliament.

FARM TRACTORS DUTY

Ottawa, Jan. 16.—Remission of duty on farm tractors under $1,400 in value ceases on February 7, unless the order in Council granting the remission is further extended. The question of extension has been given some consideration, and, it is expected, will be officially before the Cabinet within a few days.

Pensions

CANADA'S yearly pension bill is estimated by the Minister of Finance at $30,000,000. This is a minimum figure. How is this vast fund to be administered? To whom will pensions be paid? Everyone is asking these questions. Here is the official answer.

The Organization

A huge organization has been built up to handle pensions promptly, smoothly, fairly.

At its head is the Board of Pensions Commissioners. This Board is to be developed as a civil rather than as a military body. It consists of three men, each appointed for ten years, each devoting his whole time to his duties as a Commissioner.

The Head Office of the Pensions Board is at Ottawa, and there are seventeen branch offices in the principal centres throughout Canada. An important branch is in operation in London, England.

These local branches receive applications from soldiers' dependents for pensions; send "Visitors" to call on pensioners in their homes; hold medical re-examinations; handle complaints.

The Board keeps a representative travelling from coast to coast interviewing pensioners and addressing organizations interested in their welfare. He has already conferred with more than 30,000 pensioners.

At present 60,000 pensions are being administered by the Board.

A Pension—What it is

A pension is not a gift, gratuity or reward for service done. It is compensation—money paid as a right by Canadians, through their Government, to offset in a measure the handicaps suffered in war by their fellow-citizens a debt that the country owes to our returned men, and to the dependents of those who have fallen.

It is in this spirit that Orders-in-Council governing pensions are framed. It is in this spirit that the Board of Pensions Commissioners administers these Orders-in-Council.

To Whom Payable

Pensions are not awarded for service.

Broadly speaking, any soldier or sailor who was disabled during his service is entitled to a pension provided medical treatment fails to restore his full normal capacity.

The amount of the pension is based on the extent of the physical handicap he has suffered.

The physical condition of the disabled man is described on his discharge from the service by a Medical Board. Pension is awarded according to the amount of disablement from which he is then found to be suffering.

The percentage of handicap has been carefully and thoroughly worked out for every disability. It is both accurate and fair.

The relationship between the Medical Board and the pension applicant is that of doctor and patient. Every opportunity is given to have the man's condition judged from his point of view.

Amount of Pension

The pension is awarded to a soldier or sailor so that he can live in decent comfort, despite his handicap.

The money he may be able to earn, or the money he earned before the war, does not affect the amount of his pension. The extent of his handicap alone in the general labor market is considered.

Every man who has increased his income by Vocational Training will not have his pension decreased or discontinued.

The amount of the pension varies also according to the soldier's rank; but his trade or profession is not considered. The minimum pension for a totally disabled unmarried soldier or sailor of the lowest rank is $600 a year.

Pensions to Dependents

Widows of soldiers or sailors who have died during or as a result of service, are entitled to pension so long as they do not remarry.

Children of soldiers or sailors are entitled to pensions up to the age of sixteen, if boys, or seventeen, if girls.

Pension is awarded to the parents of a soldier or sailor according, (a) to the degree of their dependency on the deceased soldier and, (b) according to their needs.

A complete schedule of the pensions granted to disabled soldiers and sailors, and to their dependents, will be sent to anyone interested. Apply to Board of Pensions Commissioners, Ottawa.

CANCELLING BACON CONTRACTS WILL REDUCE PRICES IN CANADA

Sir Thomas White Cables England for Definite Information on This Department of Canadian Trade.

Ottawa, Jan. 16.—Sir Thomas White has cabled England for official information on the statement that the British Government had placed an embargo on Canadian shipments, and that contracts for pork and pork products have been cancelled. The Canadian Government has no official information on the subject.

Sir Thomas stated that any difficulty which existed was not one of credits.

While there is no direct information, it is believed here that the difficulty is that the British Government has on hand a surplus of meat supplies. Expecting a continuance of the war, the British Food Board piled up big reserves of bacon, hams, lard and other meat supplies. These supplies, it is believed, are in danger of being spoiled and accounts for the action along with the natural transportation congestion of British ports.

Mr. Catto of the British Ministry of Food, located in New York is expected here this week and will have a conference on the subject, when there will follow an official statement.

One effect in Canada, it is believed, will be a reduction in prices. According to the cost of living commissioner the stocks of pork on hand in cold storage warehouses amounts to 28,291,29 pounds, including 15,008,897 pounds still in process of cure. 12,762,447 pounds sweet pickled, 3,343,355 pounds dry salted, 2,479,570 pounds fresh unfrozen and 4,697,060 pounds frozen pork. Comparative data indicate this to be 3.8 per cent. more than a year ago.

President W. E. Matthews, of Matthews Blackwell Limited, stated today that he had no reason to believe that the contracts had been cancelled.

"On the contrary," he said. "I have every reason to believe that they intend to execute contracts now in effect. The situation is that the old country has on hand large reserves and finds it inadvisable to defer receipt of packing house products for which it has contracted. In order to do this the authorities have asked us to defer shipments until they use up a part of the large stocks they have on hand. They're doing a little house cleaning, as it were, getting straightened up."

The Olympic is expected to reach Halifax about 7 o'clock tomorrow morning with 5,000 Canadian soldiers.

CANADA ENTERING UPON A PERIOD OF EXPANSION

Work of Construction Can Be Carried on Without Confusion so far as Manufactures Are Concerned.

Investigations carried on through Canada by agents of the Dominion Government disclose the fact that the task of replacing Canada on a peace footing so far as manufactures are concerned, can be accomplished with little confusion, and that a period of exceptional prosperity and activity lies before both Canada and the United States.

Canada, according to the Department of Labor, is entering upon a period of expansion greater than at any time in her history. There is no anxiety concerning the attitude of the manufacturers of the country, who realize that they must take full advantage of their opportunities and minimize the difficulties of transition from war to peace conditions. Immeasurable opportunities, embracing every department of industry, confront the Canadian manufacturers, and with the passing of the need for conservation, the demand for goods of all kinds will increase.

Deferred construction programmes involving the expenditure of scores of millions of dollars, will be proceeded with in the spring, and industrial plants in all part of Canada are awaiting only for labor to inaugurate large schemes for expansion. Stocks are low and the call for manufactured goods will come from every quarter. The demand from abroad will be enormous. Europe must be reconstituted and rebuilt, and with the release of shipping for commercial purposes, trade with other parts of the globe will be stimulated.

Price levels, it has been ascertained, will be generally maintained. Any possibility of a precipitate fall is precluded by the world-wide demand. No sudden readjustment of wages is anticipated. General stability, with slow and steady realignments to meet new conditions is the evident tendency throughout the country.

In order that all manufacturers may be better able to take advantage of these opportunities, the Dominion Government is giving them every assistance. It has re-endorsed the principle of using goods made in Canada, and has undertaken to stimulate public interest in the movement.

By establishing Industrial Research Bureaux it affords valuable aid to existing industries and will foster the creation of new ones. By its programme for the construction of useful public works it will absorb the products of many factories. It has stimulated the building industry by instituting a credit of twenty-five million to be drawn on for housing development, and it has inaugurated an important ship-building programme. It is providing employment for thousands of men on the Government Railways. It is establishing employment offices through the country to aid both the employer and the employe.

The opportunities abroad have not been forgotten. The Government proposes to establish credits for work undertaken by manufacturers and producers in connection with the rehabilitation of the devastated regions of Europe, which will enable manufacturers to finance contracts on a cash payment basis, and which should lead to a large share of the business coming to Canada.

A system has been begun for the compilation of accurate details of imports with the object of indicating the directions in which trade may be developed. A trade mission to London, and a Canadian trade Commission with headquarters in Canada have been established for the fostering of commerce and industry. Important machinery is being built up by which the Government will co-operate with the manufacturer in every possible direction.

NO MORE PRIVATE SNAPS IN LIQUOR

SALE OF INTOXICATION TO BE TAKEN OVER BY GOVERNMENT.

Toronto, Jan. 16.—Private licensed vendors of liquor in Ontario are to be abolished at the coming session of the Legislature. Instead of the seven agencies in operation throughout the province for the sale of liquor, the Government has decided to take over the business itself. It hopes that by so doing the abuses which made the existing system unsatisfactory will be done away with. Under the new plan customers will be ensured of a supply of pure liquor and private gain will be eliminated.

Announcement of this radical change in the administration of the Ontario Temperance Act was made yesterday by Sir William Hearst. At the same time he made it clear that it is not the intention of the Government to take a vote on the Ontario Temperance Act in June of this year as provided in the act. Instead, the vote will be taken as soon as practicable after the return of the soldiers.

Postpone Vote on O. T. A.

"On investigation it was found," said Premier Hearst, "that it would not be possible to secure satisfactorily the votes of the men overseas," the Prime Minister explained in reference to the securing of the opinion of the electorate, "and it would be unfair to have a vote on so important a question without the soldiers having a full opportunity of expressing their views upon it. For these reasons the act was brought into force without a vote and provision was made in it whereby a vote would be taken when the soldiers return. It was expected at the time the act was passed that the war would be over and the soldiers back in time to permit of a vote being taken in June, 1919. It is clear now that the soldiers will undoubtedly not all be back by that time and that the taking of the vote will have to be postponed. The Government proposes that as soon as practicable after the soldiers return a vote shall be taken, and the whole electorate of the Province be given ample opportunity to say by their ballots whether or not they desire the Ontario Temperance Act to be continued in force. The necessary amendments to the act will be made at the coming session."

Vendors Affected

There are seven vendors situated in different parts of the Province, who will be put out of business under the new system. They are: T. Ambrose Woods, Ltd., and J. G. S. Cornnell, Toronto; W. Cleland, Hamilton; J. W. Rigney, Kingston; L. N. Bate, Ottawa; E. B. Smith, [illegible] and Donald Fraser, Windsor.

It is apparent from the foregoing statement that rumors current in recent weeks that instead of asking the people to say whether they were [illegible] or not, as the act provides, the Government would submit a plebiscite to find if the electors favored the system of beer and wine license, is incorrect. The Prime Minister stated explicitly that the electors will "be given ample opportunity to say by their ballots whether or not they desire the Ontario Temperance Act to be continued in force."

War Workers Must Still Carry On

LETTER TO PROGRESSIVE CLUB SHOWS NECESSITY FOR CONTINUING WORK.

The following letter has been received by the president of the Peterborough Progressive Club, which shows there is still need for the Club to continue their work:

Can. Serbian Relief Com.
95 King St. W., Toronto,
January 14th, 1919.

Dear Miss Peck,—

We would be very grateful for underclothing, socks and other warm clothing. Some organizations in Toronto, which, like yours, have been doing hospital work, are now, under the auspices of our committee, doing work for the Serbians. We ask for warm clothing, blankets and soap. Children's stockings would be splendid.

The parcels would be addressed: "For Serbia," Queen Mary's Needlework Guild, 83 King street west, Toronto.

During the years of the war the Serbians used up bedding, carpets and curtains to patch their clothes and now they have nothing left to mend their rags. I am sure you could not work for people more desperately in need.

Yours very truly,
EDITH MOWAT,
Cor. Sec. C. S. R. C.

A meeting held by the Progressive Club yesterday, Wednesday, the 15th, it was decided to send $25.00 to the Women's Auxiliary of the G. W. V. A.; $25.00 to the last appeal which the Canadian Field Comforts' Commission are sending out; $100.00 to the appeal of the Salvation Army and $100.00 to the Serbian Relief and about $25.00 worth of made socks. The Club has wool on hand for children's socks and material they intend making up for the Siberian children.

We hope next Wednesday afternoon, the 22nd, of January, our members will make a point of coming to the rooms and helping in this urgent cause.

"Help Her to Help Them."

A window card carried an actual photo of Salvation Army girls at work in the front line trenches, where, at the entrance to a dug-out, two comely lasses wearing tin hats and box respirators, are rolling dough for pies. Again is used the slogan "Help her to help them over there—over here."

In addition to these main features of the Publicity Campaign, the committee is sending out thousands of folders describing the war work of the Army and outlining its plans to bring the boys home again and re-establish them in civil life as well as to care for those dependant women and children who have been the main sufferers from the war.

BUILD HUTS ON STREETS LIKE THOSE USED IN ARMY

Salvationists Plan Novel Feature for Their Million Dollar Drive Which Opens Next Week—Harry Lauder to Speak in Toronto

The way in which the Salvation Army served soldiers at the front will be shown in Toronto during the "drive" next week. Seven army huts will be erected in various parts of the city. Salvation Army lassies will serve doughnuts, tea and coffe to returned soldiers free of cost, and to the genera public for whatever the public pleases to drop into the till. The huts will be exact replicas of those overseas.

Two of these huts will be placed on the law in front of the City Hall, one at Temperance and Yonge streets, one in Parkdale, one on St. Clair avenue, one in North Toronto and one at Danforth and Broadview.

Salvation Army meetings will be held in the huts at noon and at night there will be sing-songs just as provided for the fighting boys. Returned soldiers in Toronto still in uniform will make these huts temporary recreation places and perhaps the atmosphere of the war zone will be created.

During the campaign Salvation Army bands will provide music whenever the occasion demands it. All the bands of the Army in Toronto will be available for processions.

Lauder at Massey Hall.

The Drive will be inaugurated by two great meetings in Massey Hall on Sunday next. The Campaign Executive Committee, of which Lieut.-Col. W. S. Dinnick is Chairman, has been successful in securing the support of Harry Lauder in giving zip to the money-getting campaign, which will last throughout the work.

Mr. Lauder will address the meeting in Massey Hall on Sunday afternoon at three o'clock, his subject being "The Reconstructive Philosophy of a Plain Man." It is expected that Sir Edmund Walker, Honorary Treasurer of the Fund, will preside. Mr. Laude will be accompanied by his life-long friend, Dr. George Adams, pastor of Emmanuel Church, Montreal. Dr. Adams is a host in himself and will also give an address on that occasion. He returned from overseas in July. He went with Harry Lauder to visit the grave of Mr. Lauder's only son, who was killed in action.

In the evening a consecration meeting will be held in Massey Hall at seven o'clock. It will be a distinctly Salvation Army meeting with Commissioner Richards in charge.

The publicity committee has issued for general distribution throughout the country, some attractive literature. One of the most appealing of the colored posters depicts the Salvation Army lassie, steel-helmeted and khaki-clad, standing in the forefront of some picturesque ruins with a plate of appetizing and edible dough-nuts in her hand. Below her, the figure of soldiers with a "Life-preserver" into which he has bitten, in his hand, and a smile of complete satisfaction on his face. He is pointing to the young lady dispenser of the delectable commodity and the inscription, which denotes the observation that has escaped him is, "Oh, Boy! that's the Girl!" and we are admonished to "keep her on the job."

Another striking appeal somewhat sadder in tone illustrates the scene at the bedside of a wounded soldier. The Salvation Army lass, bib-frocked and wearing the regulation poke bonnet and a Red Shield band on her arm, is sitting at the bedside ministering to the bodily comfort of the stricken man, and also offering spiritual consolation. There is subdued background, showing the figure of the Saviour. The wording below the picture is "Help her to help them over there—over here."

CANADIAN HORSE WINNER OF RACES IN MICHIGAN

Phyllis Admiral Won the 2.24 Trot in Straight Heat on Mt. Clemens Ice Track

Mt. Clemens, Mich., Jan. 16.—The opening day of the big winter race meeting at Clinton View Park was marked by ideal weather, so much so that it played havoc with the ice track, but did not interfere with a splendid program of racing.

The start was considerably delayed owing to accidents to the various contestants. A large crowd turned out and the attendance was marked by the appearance of many of the Grand Circuit followers and many from Canada and New York.

The first race was called the 2:24 trot, in which the Canadian mare Phyliss Admiral sold at first choice and justified the confidence of her backers, although she had keen competition throughout. In the first heat Heartless led to the three-quarters where she was overhauled by Phyllis Admiral, and in a strenuous stretch drive managed to finish in front. Phyliss led in the second heat and Heartless went to a break and Travel Onward and E.K.S. took up the battle, but could not quite reach. The third heat was Phyliss' all the way.

In the 2:30 pace Louis Gratten, Freddie Gratten and Linda C. sold nearly even. In the first heat Louis Gratten stepped in her boot and made a break at the three-quarter pole, where Linda C. headed her and led until the stretch, where Freddie Gratten, driven by Nat Ray, made a whirlwind finish and won the heat. Louis Gratten again led until the back stretch, when her sulky wheel collapsed and she finished far outside the flag, but under the rule permitting the judges to place a horse owing to accidents of that nature, when racing over ice she was placed last, and in the third heat she led to the quarter, with Linda C. accompanying her, with Freddie Gratten closing on both leaders fast, but could not quite catch the flying Louis in the fastest heat of the race, 2.17¼, which was a remarkable mile considering the sloppy condition of the track at the time.

LAWN BOWLERS HOLD SESSION

WILL START CAMPAIGN SOON TO SECURE NEW MEMBERS.

There was a meeting of the members of the Lawn Bowlers Club in the office of J. A. McKone, principal of the Peterborough Business College, last night to consider the question of obtaining suitable quarters in which to bowl during the winter months and during rainy weather in the summer season.

While nothing definite was done in connection with organizing for this purpose at last night's meeting, it was decided that those present would institute a campaign for the purpose of adding members to the roll of the club, and it is expected that before long a suitable place will be chosen and this popular pastime indulged in with as much enjoyment as on the greens.

ALL SAINTS' CHOIR AT PROTEST. HOME

Last evening the choir of All Saints Church, accompanied by the Warden, Mr. T. H. Hooper, and his wife, attended the Protestant Home. The evening was spent in praise. The choir sang anthems, choruses and several of the members contributed songs to the great delight of the inmates. At the close tea and light refreshments, fruit, etc., was served by the choir, and all were unanimous in the hope that the day would not be long before another one would be paid. The inmates all seemed happy and pleased with the home and were loud in their praises of the way they were treated. One man said the superintendent was just like a mother to them all.

Blessed is the man who can repeat the ten commandments after coming in contact with an icy sidewalk.

Some Pages For History Of Sport

From the dawn of history man has evolved games in which balls of various kinds figure, and this instinct seems to be universal. When the first pale-faces invaded the New World they found the Indians amusing themselves with a ball game which the French afterward lacrosse. Baseball, which is a development of the older games or "rounders" and "town ball" for ball, which was first played by the English with the head of a captured Dane as the ball; cricket, billiards, tennis, golf, hockey, polo, bowling, basketball, and various other games, are played with balls.

Youngest of the popular ball games is basketball, which passes its twenty-eighth birthday this year, having been invented in 1891 by Dr. James Naismith, then director of physical trafning at the Springfield, Mass., Training School, but later with the University of Kansas. It was twenty-seven years ago yesterday, on January 15th, 1892, that the first match basketball game was played at Springfield between two class teams. In the previous month, at a meeting of the faculty of the Springfield school, the need of some new form of exercise was discussed. It was agreed that there was a demand for a sport that would provide plenty of action without brutality, and which would serve the purpose of scientific physical development. Dr. Naismith gave much thought to the problem, and soon evolved the game of basketball. The first contest demonstrated that the new sport had a powerful appeal. Goals were then made of iron hoops from which nets were suspended. The latter were at first woven as to hold the ball, but later it was found desirable to change the nets so that the ball could drop through to the playing floor. Basketball is essentially a winter sport, and has been introduced in Europe and South America with great success.

McAuliffe-Gilmore Battle

Jack McAuliffe defeated Harry Gilmore in 28 rounds at Lawrence, Mass., on January 14, 1887. The bout was for the lightweight championship, then held by McAuliffe, and was one of the most desperate ever witnessed in a Massachusetts ring. The men fought with skin-tight gloves for $500 a side and the championship belt. Both men had to assimilate a lot of punishment and several times it looked as if the title was due to change hands. Gilmore devoted much of his attention to Jack's optics, and McAuliffe was scarcely able to see when he landed a punch which flattened out and broke Gilmore's nose. Harry's backers then tossed in the sponge, but the victor was in little better condition than the vanquished. A little later in the same year McAuliffe fought his famous 74 round draw with Jem Carney, the English champion, when Jack was saved from defeat only by the interference of the press cr...

FARMERS WANT GOOD ROADS

REALIZE HOW MUCH GOOD HIGHWAYS MEAN TO THEM IN THEIR BUSINESS.

Farmers now recognize the value of good roads as they never did before. They are voting for bond issues to pull the country districts out of the mud. Many were both startled and pleased by the news from Illinois, when the $60,000,000 bond issue for good roads went through by a vote of three to one in the cities, while throughout the country districts the vote was six to one. That is evidence that the antagonism of the farmers of America has given way and that they want good roads now, and the right sort of roads for heavy-duty truck work. Years ago it was different, for the farmers then felt that in aiding the construction of good roads they were only preparing roads for "those city fellers" to fly over with their racing cars. Now the farmer uses the automobile and the motor truck, and both are as necessary to him as the telephone, rural free delivery, and other features which have entered into his life and made life more worth while. The farmer wants good roads and he wants them even more than does the city man, as is indicated by the vote in Illinois. Old-time tourists will recall their work of early days in trying to convert the farmer to good roads. The opposition was oftentimes picturesque, for the farmer did not then use automobiles, and roads of dirt and clay, even though muddy, were "plenty good enough" for his horses. With the coming of the automobile he did his work upon the roads with more zest as he took up the motor car himself, and, when motor trucks came into use and so found their value, the farmer started hauling his produce to market by truck to save time and expense. Then the necessity of hard roads became pressing with him, and today there is no better good roads worker than the self-same farmer. He it is who is going to benefit in more ways than one, for the rural free delivery is coming in, and to have good roads means that he will secure immediate results from his service through the passing of the rural routes by his very door. And the rural free delivery man is using automobiles, and good roads means prompter delivery of mail. His own use of a motor car means comfort in going to the city with his family. Thus the farmer gains the benefit of going and coming, and while it has taken some time to show him by actual practice the necessity of roads, he is now a believer, and, being such, becomes a worker far more forceful than any other class.

REDUCE SALARY LIST TO $11,000

NATIONAL LEAGUE MAGNATES TAKE ACTION AT NEW YORK MEETING.

New York, Jan. 16.—National League baseball players will receive an unpleasant surprise with their 1919 contracts as a result of the magnates' action in adopting a club salary limit of not more than $11,000 per month. This is the most radical financial retrenchment attempted by a major league in many years, and will prove a startling upset to those diamond stars who may have expected a continuation of the high salaries and long-time contracts of pre-war days.

Under the new regulation, which was adopted by a vote of six to two, the maximum monthly salary limit during the playing season must not exceed $11,000, plus the manager's salary. This will make the seasonal payroll foot up approximately $66,000 for a playing period of about five and a half months. With a club roster of 22 players the average will be $500 per player per month. The new rule also carries a penalty, in the form of a fine of $5,000 for every infraction of the rule.

Salary limitation was the outstanding feature of all-day sessions of the National League and the National Association of Professional Baseball Clubs. The minor organizations finally agreed upon the form of their request for the lifting of the draft regulations, and the senior major leaguers went on record regarding a number of proposed changes which they desire the American League to jointly adopt at the special meeting of the two leagues to-morrow, as well as several additional alterations of their own by-laws.

NEBRASKA VOTES

amendment had become an assured fact by action of the Nebraska legislature, steps were taken by the temperance forces in New York, with a view to bringing about enforcement in the Empire state at proper time.

Washington, Jan. 16.—Legislatures of 35 states, one less than the required three-fourth, have ratified the prohibitional legislation amendment. Several states assemblies now in session are expected to take action today, with a probable race between Nebraska, Missouri, and Minnesota as to which will be the thirty-sixth on the list.

Ratification was completed by the legislatures of five states, Iowa, Colorado, Oregon, New Hampshire and Utah, making a total of twelve in two days. Of the 45 states that have taken action, only fourteen have certified their action to the federal state department. They are Virginia, Kentucky, North Dakota, South Carolina, Maryland, South Dakota, Texas, Montana, Delaware, Massachusetts, Arizona, Georgia, Louisianna and Michigan.

The amendment under its provisions, becomes effective one year from the date of its final ratification. Additional legislation by congress is necessary to make it operative, and ground work for this already has been laid. The legislation will prescribe penalties for violations of the amendment and determine how and by what agencies the law shall be enforced. If ratification is completed this month, many of the states of the country will become permanently "dry" next July 1, the date on which the special war-time prohibition recently enacted by congress goes into effect. This law prevents the manufacture and sale of intoxicants for beverage purposes, and remains in force until the demobilization of the nation's war armies is completed.

Have YOU any idea what that decision is costing you—even if you live? Of course, if you die the cost is much GREATER.

Read the following facts and then decide for yourself:

The premium you would pay for $1000 of insurance at age 40 WOULD BUY YOU nearly $4000 of insurance at age 21.

The premium you pay for $1000 of insurance at age 30 WOULD BUY YOU nearly $2400 at age 21.

The premium you pay for $1000 of insurance at age 25 WOULD BUY YOU $1440 at age 21.

Besides, while you may be insurable at age 21 you may not be insurable AT ANY PRICE at the other ages mentioned.

"I've had rheumatism off and on for several years, especially in damp weather, and I would ache in every joint in my body almost like a sore tooth. My suffering was so great at times that I could hardly bear it and it seemed like the more I suffered, the worse I got until I finally had to lay off from work for a whole month on account of it.

"It just beats anything I ever saw how Tanlac begun to relieve my troubles right from the start. Almost every sympton of rheumatism has gone, my appetite is fine, I sleep like a log at night and have gained ten pounds in weight. My own experience proves to me that Tanlac is one of the greatest medicines ever made, and I recommend it to others."

CANADAIN POET

Frederick Wright, late of the London, England, Daily Telegraph, whom the late W. T. Stead described as one of the keenest journalists in the British Empire, says in an article on Mr. MacDonald's poetry: "A young giant has arisen .... In Wilson MacDonald Canada has produced a poet of the first water."

"Among the selections given was the 'Song of the Snowshoe Tramp,' a spirited yet gentle and musical lyric which was received with great enthusiasm when read last year at a gathering of the Geological Society. Mr. MacDonald is an effective reader. The haunting melody in his lines and all their meaning and suggestion are emphasized and interpreted by a singularly musical voice and harmonious rendering."—Vancouver News-Advertiser.

"His ideas are almost limitless; his logic at all times keen; his knowledge of human nature thorough, and best of all, his religion, which seems to permeate the whole of his poetry, is sane and well-balanced."—From The Kingston (Ont.) Standard.

"'The Song of the Prairie Land' treated of the most familiar subject to a Western audience, yet to all who heard this wonderful poem the prairie ought to have a new beauty after listening to the poet's subline description of the great expanse the utter loneliness, and the wind night sounds familiar to all who have dwelt on the plain."—Regina, Sask., Province.

The late Daniel Welton, M.A., D.D., L.L.D., of McMaster University, Toronto, said: "If Wilson MacDonald never writes another poem than his poem 'At the Modder River,' his name will go down in Canadian literature."

"He was more than wonderful: he was superb."—Winnipeg Telegram.

"He has talent enough in his ten fingers to enable him in time to buy out half a dozen decent real estate firms in this city. But far and beyond the mercenary, Wilson MacDonald is a great, a true, a sublime Canadian."—Regina, Sask., Mirror.

Rev. A. C. Watson, M.A., Ph.D., of Chicago, says: "I haven't a single doubt but that he has surpassed the whole present generation of poets. His poem 'To the Whip-poor-will' very favorably bears comparison with Shelley's 'To a Skylark.'"

"One of the most wonderful artists in his particular line we ever had knowledge of."—Lethbridge, Alta., Herald.

"Talent fairly exudes from him."—Macleod, Alta., Spectator.

"In his productions there are nobility of expression, purity of diction, and flights of fancy which give him a foremost place in the ranks of Canadian poets."—Everton A. Miller, M. A., Classical Master, Winnipeg Collegiate.

Sir Thomas Lipton said after meeting Mr. MacDonald in Winnipeg, Can.: "One of the most wonderful men I have ever met."

"A Canadian poet, inspired by Canadian themes of whic hhe writes inspiringly, Mr. Wilson MacDonald strikes a distinctly different note and reaches a plane not often attempted and less often attained."—Vancouver World.

"WE HAVE NO FEAR FOR FUTURE" SAID MINISTER OF LABOR TO CANADIAN CLUB

Address of Senator Robertson on Industrial Outlook for this Country Bright with Optimism—Labor Is Not Likely to Suffer nor Business to Languish

Col. Duncan Walker, President of the local branch of the Canadian Club introducted the speaker of the evening and stated that his address would be of great interest at a time such as this when labor conditions were engaging so much attention from public men, the press and the people in general.

In commencing his address Senator Robertson stated that the problems which faced the country today were of an importance to Canada second only to the great task of helping to win the recent war which this dominion had so nobly fulfilled. The most pressing of these related to the demobilization of the fighting forces, the repatriation of the soldiers and the responsibility which rested with the people and the government of carrying out these tremendous contracts with the least possible dislocation of labor, industry and trade.

He quoted figures to show the magnitude of the work involved in successfully demobilizing and returning to their native land the men of Canada's army. There are 280,000 soldiers, 50,000 dependents and 20,000 members of the Royal Air Force to be brought home to their native country and re-established in industrial and social life. It addition to these there was at the time the armistice was signed 200,000 munition workers serving in connection with war industries many of whom were and will be compelled to look to other sources for employment. In other words one out of every fifteen of the entire popnlation of the Dominion were dependent in some capacity upon employment or service arising out of the war and the task of averting a sharp dislocation of labor conditions was a heavy one.

Two and a half months before the signing of the armistice the Workmen's Civil Re-establishment Committee got down to the task of anticipating the inevitable conditions described above. Investigation and information furnished by the larger munition plants revealed the fact that all employes with the exception of 67,000 of the 200,000 engaged in civil war work would be retained in their positions when the manufacturers turned their attention to ordinary work. The prospect while it might have been much worse was by no means bright and yet so well was the task engineered and carried out that on January 1st there were only 15,000 men in the country seeking employment, 6200 of whom were to be found in the cities of Montreal and Toronto. Elsewhere in the Dominion labor absorbed men faster than they were laid off.

As far as women were concerned there was little noticeable difference, owing to the fact that Canada had not found it necessary to employ them in unusual capacities to such an extent as had England and other European countries.

No Room for Chinese

In connection with the exodus of aliens from this country, the speaker felt that it was for the best. They showed a disposition to return temporarily to their own lands and it was quite satisfactory as it made it easier for ex-soldiers to get employment.

Some time ago on account of the scarcity of labor in France it was found necessary to bring 60,000 Chinamen through this country and transport them to Europe. When the war was over the proposal was made to the Canadian Government that as Canada was supposed to be

PROSPEROUS DAYS FOR CANADA AHEAD

"We need have no fear for the future."

That was the keynote of the address delivered by Senator Robertson, Minister of Labor in the Union Cabinet, at the Canadian Club Luncheon at the Empress Hotel last night, an address that sparkled with optimism from start to finish, not the optimism of the dreamer but of the men who knows the past and present and who is in a position to speak with authority on the future. Neither employer nor employed has reason to worry. Any labor or industrial depression that may follow the return of peace will be only temporary and the best days for Canada are yet to come. The employers are doing their part to save the situation by keeping as many of their staff as possible at work.

Senator Robertson explained in detail the demobilization plan of the government and the information which he disclosed was a revelation to his audience, a complete rebuttal of all criticism that has been heard from a certain section of the press. What the Government is doing to take care of the helpless victim who by reason of his service has contracted tuberculosis or whose mind has been affected by the shocks incident to his service was another gratifying item of information furnished by the speaker. Canada, the claim was made has done, and is now doing more for the fighting force than any other Allied country and even at that the debt the nation owes its heroes can never be fully discharged.

There are prosperous days ahead. By next spring there will be work for all. There is an exodus of aliens from Canada and this helps the employment problem. There is not likely to be any immigration for some time but in the course of two years or less there will be so much work in Canada that this foreign labor will be required and the men who are returning to Europe today will be the best possible advertisement of Canada as a desirable place of residence.

In a word "We need have no fear for the future."

HEARTY WELCOME GIVEN SOLDIERS

"OLYMPIC" DOCKS AT HALIFAX WITH SEVEN THOUSAND MEN ABOARD.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Halifax, Jan. 17—The transport Olympic with seven thousand returning soldiers aboard, including two thousand for Ontario points, arrived off the harbor at daybreak and docked about ten thirty amid enthusiastic welcomes from the ships and the crowds on the waterfront. Ontario men disembarked about noon and proceeded to the trains, all scheduled to leave before six this evening.

The scenes at the reception to the Olympic here today rivalled the rousing sendoff given these men according to the cables at Southampton, England, when they left. Scores of immigration, military and naval officials swarmed up the gangways as soon as the vessel tied up and the work of disembarkation of the big "ship's company" proceeded quickly. Half an hour later the men for the Maritime Provinces which are the first to disembark, started down the gangway to the shore and were quickly seized by their admiring friends.

New Armistice Treaty Is Signed

Amsterdam, Jan. 17.—The armistice between the Allies and Germany has been extended, the agreement to that effect being signed at Treves late Wednesday, according to a Berlin despatch.

NO BOLSHEVISM AMONG TROOPS

OFFICER SAYS DISCIPLINE IS GOOD NO WAS IN WAR TIME.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Halifax, Jan. 17.—"There is no Bolshevism among the Canadian troops," declared an officer who has had considerable opportunity for studying the Dominion overseas soldiers. Discipline today is as good as it was before the armistice was signed. There was no drunkeness and no looting and while Canada's army on the Rhine wants to get home as soon as possible, there is no discontent or chafing.

"DIVINE JUSTICE" SAYS NEWSPAPER

BERLIN PRESS SO REGARD TRAGIC FATE OF SPARTACAN LEADERS.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Berlin, Jan. 17.—Virtually the entire Berlin press regards the fate of Dr. Karl Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemberg the Spartacan leaders as having "something of divine justice in it," as Tages Zeitung phrases it. Of Dr. Leibknecht the Lokal Anzeiger says: "He brought his fate upon himself."

Continuing its comment the newspaper says: "The murder of Rosa Luxemberg shows how tremendous must have been the indignation which has seized the people of Berlin as a result of the criminal activities of the Spartacus. Such summary judgments have ordinarily been foreign to the German manner of thinking."

The press in general deplores the lynching of Rosa Luxemberg, but declares she fell a victim to the basest passions which she herself had awakened. Die Freiheit alone tries to lay the responsibility upon the government.

Free Transport For Dependents

London, Jan. 17.—The Canadian Association Press learns that dependents of Canadian soldiers will now be returned to Canada at public expense. Some two months back the business of repatriating these dependents was undertaken by the Canadian military authorities. This work has now been again placed in the hands of C. Smith, the Immigration Commissioner, who conducted it during the time of the submarine.

YEOTES BROS. ARE LOSERS BY BLAZE IN POOL PARLOR

FIRE LAST EVENING DID DAMAGE TO EXTENT OF $5,000.

GOOD WORK BY THE BRIGADE

NEW CHEMICAL APPARATUS WORKS SATISFACTORY IN ITS FIRST TEST.

A fire which might easily have resulted as disastrously as did the Neill conflagration of a year ago broke out in the stock room of Yeotes Bros. store and pool parlor at 337 George street at 8:15 last night. It was extinguished before it assumed dangerous proportions, but the proprietors of the business claim that the damage to their stock will reach the neighborhood of $4000 or $5000.

Louis Yeotes noticed smoke coming from the ceiling of the shoe shine apartment, and at once dispatched one of his employes to fire box 25 from which the alarm was rung into the department, and the brigade was on the scene of the trouble in record time.

Mr. Yeotes with considerable difficulty, on account of the dense smoke rolling up from the stock room which was situated under a staircase, made his way to the third floor where his family reside and assured himself of their safety.

Upon arrival the fire brigade made use of their chemical engine, and after breaking through the floor of the bowling alley were able to extinguish the fire without the use of water.

Used New Apparatus.

Chief Grange states that this is the first occasion upon which the brigade have had an opportunity of using the motor driven chemical apparatus. It did good work last night without entailing the tremendous damage which always follows the use of water and more than justified the action of the city in purchasing it. Had water been turned into the building the damage would have amounted to more than the price of the big car.

Mr. Louis Yeotes heartily commended the work of the fire brigade last night. He stated that they seemed to arrive on the scene the minute the alarm was rung in, and their work was exceptionally effectual. The only loss entailed results from the effects of the fire and smoke, and he stated that the use of the chemical engine saved him a great deal of money.

Had the fire occurred in the night it is probable that the entire block in which the store is situated would have burned and would have resulted in loss of life.

Mr. Yeotes states that he reduced his insurance on the place some time ago on account of the raise in rates, but declared that he will lose no time in replacing it. The insurance carried on the stock amounted to $5000. The origin of the fire is unknown, although in the store room, in addition to tobacco and other supplies, there was kept a stock of matches, which may have become ignited and caused the blaze.

A Free-for-all Smoke.

A considerable crowd collected in front of the store last night, and when the cans of tobacco, cigars, pipes and boxes of cigarettes found their way on to the streets several men who were never known to smoke anything more pretentious than a clay pipe were seen sauntering about sporting choice cigars.

SPARTACAN LEADER KILLED WHILE TRYING TO EFFECT HIS ESCAPE FROM CAPTORS

Dr. Liebnecht's Lieutenant, Rosa Luxembourg, Set Upon by Angry Mob and Shot to Death Passing of Leaders May Break Up the Radical Party.

HON. G. D. ROBERTSON
Minister of Labor who spoke in Peterboro last night

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Berlin, Jan. 17.—Dr. Karl Liebnecht, Spartacan leader, has been shot and killed while trying to escape while he was being taken to prison. Rosa Luxembourg, Dr. Leibknecht's chief lieutenant, was also shot dead after being beaten into unconsciousness by a crowd at Berlin.

When it became known yesterday that Dr. Liebknecht and Rosa Luxembourg were at the Hotel Eden in the Western part of the city a crowd rapidly congregated and stormed the hotel lobby. Both were spirited to the side entrance, out the mob forestalled the attempt of the troops to have Fraulein Luxembourg. She was beaten into insensibility and then thrown into an automobile by the crowd which intended to take her to prison.

A few blocks down the street the machine was halted by a second mob and when the presence of Fraulein Luxembourg became known, a man jumped on the running board of the car and shot her through the head. The body was dragged from the automobile and thrown into the canal.

In the meantime Dr. Liebknecht was hurried into another automobile by officers and troops and the car was headed for the Moabit prison. While going through Tiergarten the machine was halted by a punctured tire. While waiting, Dr. Liebknecht made an attempt to escape and was shot dead by the soldiers.

When Dr. Liebknecht was arrested at the home of a relative on Mannheimer Strasse yesterday morning he steutly denied his identity. After being escorted to the Eden Hotel he was searched and his monogram, K. L., was discovered on his shirt.

The Dead Leaders.

Karl Paul August Friedrich Liebknecht was born at Leipsic, in 1871, graduated from the University there and was a Socialist all his life, and a radical opponent of Germany's militist policies. Several years before the war he charged that the Kruppe and many military officers conspired to bring on a war with France. The name of the Kaiser and Crown Prince were mentioned and several officers were convicted of receiving bribes.

When the great war opened he refused to serve in the army and spent many months in prison. Finally he served with a German engineer battalion in Russia, and was injured there. He continued his attacks against German militarism, however, and in May, 1916, was arrested and sentenced to four years' imprisonment. He was released in October 24, 1918, and took a prominent part in the destruction of the German monarchy, but would not enter or recognise the Ebert Government.

Under his leadership the Spartacans, or radicals, developed a reign of terror in Berlin for about three weeks, but were defeated by the loyal troops, which finally effected his arrest.

Rosa Luxembourg was formerly principal editor of the Socialist Verwaerts, and also opposed the war from the start. She was reputed to be more Anarchistic than Liebknecht, and even opposed the calling of the Constituent Assembly which her fellow leader favored.

Soldiers Arrested.

The officers commanding the troops escorting Dr. Liebknecht and Rosa Luxembourg when these two radical leaders were killed, have been provisionally arrested, according to a Berlin despatch received here which adds that all persons implicated in the incident will be severely punished.

NATIONAL COUNCIL OF WOMEN SHUN THE HUN FOR ALL TIME

Local Branch at Meeting Yesterday Receive Copy of and Endorse Strong Resolution Adopted at Session of National Executive in Kingston

The January meeting of the local Council of Women was held yesterday afternoon in the Y.M.C.A. The main features of the meeting were the president's report of the National Executive, held last week in Kingston, and an interesting address on "Immigration", given by Miss Lancaster.

Mrs. Harstone reported an extremely kind reception by the Kingston ladies, who had also made thoughtful arrangement for every part of the two-day session. Very little time was found for social gatherings as the Agenda was long and contained important business.

Perhaps the main feature on the Agenda was the discussion of the attitude of the International Council of Women toward the enemy countries. It was shown beyond any doubt that the International Council of Women had been absolutely inobeyance since war broke out, their attitude being the same exactly as that of any of the other great international associations.

The resolution adopted at the end of the discussion was simply a reaffirmation of the resolution passed at the annual meeting of the National Council of Women in Brantford last May, excepting that the signing of the armistice was made impossible to be explicit in their statement.

The resolution passed was as follows:

"Whereas, the object of the National Council of Women is to further the application of the Golden Rule to society, custom and law, and whereas the German nation has often broken the Golden Rule and expressed no repentance for this action; therefore, it is not possible to contemplate that Germany and her allies, while they are unrepentant, should continue to participate in the work of a society whose object is to secure the enforcement of a law which they have broken, and therefore this Executive Committee requests the president of the International Council, after peace is signed, to call a meeting of allied and neutral Councils only, since the National Council of Women of Canada is unwilling to be associated with the women of the councils of Germany and her Allies."

Lord and Lady Aberdeen.

Another matter which took some time to dispose of was a resolution from the Toronto local Council asking that the sub-executive of the National Council be asked to secure from the state attorney of New York City a statement of the findings in regard to money collected by Lord and Lady Aberdeen for Child Welfare Work in Ireland, and that this financial statement be published in the Canadian press. Also, if these charges are proved to be of such a character as to discredit the work of Lord and Lady Aberdeen, that the National Council should take action on the findings of this report.

The evidence brought forward in answer to this resolution was sufficient to dispel any suspicion regarding the work of Lord and Lady Ab-

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH"

FRIDAY, JANUARY 17, 1919

SENATOR ROBERTSON'S MESSAGE.

SPEAKING with the conviction of a man who is sure of his ground and not as a politician attempting to make out a case for his party, Senator Robertson, the Minister of Labor in the Union Cabinet, spoke at the Canadian Club luncheon last night. No such cheering message has been brought to this city since the cable flashed the news of the signing of the armistice. Senator Robertson's optimistic address should dispel anything like timidity on the part of capital, and the unrest that has for some time prevailed in the ranks of local labor. Col. D. Walker, the president, and Mr. J. V. McElderry, the secretary of the Canadian Club, who brought the Minister of Labor to this city, are entitled to the thanks of the community. The Canadian Club has justified its existence. There should be a new feeling of security, a brighter outlook for all classes in the city, now that the Minister of Labor has been heard. His address later in the evening in Labor Hall was just as cheering as his message to the Canadian Club.

Labor has no reason to feel uneasy. The workingmen of this country are better off today than they have ever been. The deposits in the savings banks and the records of the sales of Victory bonds prove this. Even if there be an industrial slackness for a short time, this does not necessarily mean that the average wage-earner is to suffer.

But in only two provinces of the Dominion, Ontario and Quebec, where hundreds of men were engaged in the making of munitions, is there likely to be any congestion of labor, and at the most this can be only temporary. In the Prairie Provinces nothing of the kind is probable, the people being engaged largely in agricultural pursuits. Shipbuilding is the main industry in British Columbia and this work will be carried on with greater vigor than ever. In the Maritime Provinces there has been in the coal mines such a dearth of labor that the men returning to this section of the Dominion from overseas will be absorbed as fast as they arrive.

The Government is doing its part to take care of the returned soldiers. There is at present a demand for fully ten thousand workers in the lumber and mining industries, and special agents are out securing these workers. The Department of Public Works will resume operations, in fact has already done so, to a degree. The aid which the Federal Government has and will extend to the provinces to carry on the work of house building and road construction will help to solve the unemployment problem.

The employers of the Dominion, too, are doing their part. At the meeting in the Labor Hall Senator Robertson cited as an instance the case of the C. G. E., which plant he visited yesterday afternoon. There he found the company engaged in the manufacture of goods for which there is no immediate prospect of sale, their purpose being to keep at work as many of their hands as possible.

Senator Robertson predicts for Canada in the near future such an era of prosperity as this country has never known. Some way or other his remarks carried conviction to his auditors. The mild pessimist and the outright calamity howler have been counted out by the Minister of Labor.

NOT A POLITICIAN, PERHAPS.

SENATOR ROBERTSON, the new Minister of Labor, may not be a politician, as he asserts, but it must be said on his behalf that he has all the symptoms of a high brand of statesmanship.

A NEWSPAPER'S RESPONSIBILITY.

AN ENTHUSIASTIC MEMBER of the Board of Trade, one of the most public-spirited of the younger men in the city, accuses The Review of attempting to breed discord between his organization and the members of the Trades and Labor Council. He bases his charge upon the report which appeared in these columns yesterday of a meeting of the latter body. At that meeting it was alleged by a delegate who had attended a session of the executive committee of the Board of Trade that the latter were attempting to freeze out the Labor men by boosting the membership fee.

Fortunate it is for the newspapers that they are neither legally nor morally responsible for the events which in the usual course of duty they record. The report objected to was a faithful representation of what actually occurred at the meeting in question. If any wrong inferences were made they were not made by this paper, but by the delegates who listened to the report of one of their own number who is a member of the Board of Trade in good standing and who holds an important position in the Trades Council.

The Review expressed no opinion on the issue involved, and declines to be held responsible for what it simply recorded. It would be just as unfair to accuse a newspaper of condoning the crime of murder if it reported such an occurrence as to hold it as accepting any opinion to which it gives currency.

LIGHT FROM THE PROPER SOURCE.

THE PUBLIC by this time have reason to suspect that the Examiner has been opposed to the war policy of the Government ever since the days when it resisted to the extent of its capacity the plan of drafting reinforcements for the men who were in such sore straits overseas. Since the signing of the armistice our contemporary has deemed it the part of wisdom to carry on its campaign of fault-finding with the Government because of imaginary tardiness in getting the soldiers back home. Transport conditions, too, have been made texts by our neighbor for the weaving of what are simply covert political discourses. These conditions are regrettable, but it is only fair to place the blame where it belongs. The Government of Canada is in no sense responsible. The British Admiralty is the party to censure if there is justification for anything of the kind. In misplacing the blame, let us charitable believe that the Examiner goes wrong owing to a lack of information and not really with malicious intent.

Criticism is useless, unless, in a measure at least, constructive. The Examiner never submits a suggestion of this kind. If it has a policy on the demobilization of the nation's fighting force any better than the Government plan as disclosed by the Minister of Labor in his address before the Canadian Club, then it owes it to the county to give that plan to the public.

We trust that our contemporary received new light on the work of the Government after hearing Senator Robertson. But it is doubtful. It has placed itself on record as willing to take its ideas only from the leader of the Opposition, with whom in that position the party would not dare to face the country again in a general election.

THE BOLSHEVISTS.

IN HIS ADDRESS, both before the Canadian Club and at the mass meeting later, Minister of Labor Robertson said that there was little danger from the Bolshevism movement in Canada, although something might be heard of it in large centres such as Toronto.

While the Senator was speaking, the Trades and Labor Council in Toronto was holding its annual election of officers. There were two tickets in the field, the moderates and the radicals. In view of Senator Robertson's expressed opinion it is peculiarly interesting to note that the orthodox Laborites won out.

ETERNAL FITNESS AT LAST.

SINCE THE ORGANIZATION of the Department of Labor a matter of sixteen years ago there have been two Ministers in charge besides the present incumbent. For some reason or other, that has never been made quite clear, both governments appeared convinced that the only competent man for the position must of necessity be a lawyer. Hon. Mackenzie King, the first man to hold the office, had nothing but an academic knowledge of labor conditions, and perhaps even that much cannot be said of Hon. T. W. Crothers, who recently resigned from the Cabinet.

The incongruity of such appointments was slow in forcing itself upon the administration. There was always friction between Labor and the Department while such conditions existed. The workingmen of the country were skeptical about entrusting their welfare to a professional man who could not be expected to have anything like a personal interest in their affairs. How, for instance, would the farmers of the country take it if a doctor or a lawyer were in charge of the Department of Agriculture and essayed to address them on the subject of raising wheat or livestock, when the only knowledge he had of such matters was gleaned from books? How would the legal fraternity feel with a manufacturer in the Department of Justice? What would some business men think of putting a blacksmith in charge of a piano factory or a printer at the head of a plant engaged in the making of shoes?

At last there is a Labor man in charge of the Labor Department, and between Labor and the Government more friendly relations have been established. Senator Robertson was Labor's choice for the position. He has risen from the ranks of the workers themselves, he is at present a member of a Labor union, and his fellow unionists have confidence in his leadership. That was evidenced at the public meeting last night when the Minister was given a respective and attentive hearing. There was at ime not so long ago when such gatherings too often assumed the proportion of a riot. But there was nothing of this spirit of opposition manifest last night. The Labor men of the city are all the better for what they heard at the meeting. Hope has been revived and uneasiness dispelled. Senator Robertson returns to Ottawa with the best wishes of all classes in the city.

Russia Disturbs The Conference

(New York Commercial)

In England opposition to interference in Russia has grown strong and this policy find favor in America. Italy is indifferent and probably prefers to see the great Slav Empire weakened by internal strife while she deals with the claims of her Jugo-Slav neighbors. Japan hopes for a free hand in northern Manchuria and eastern Siberia. France is deeply interested in putting Russia on her feet because Russia has been her ally and owes her hundreds of millions of dollars. She therefore opposes giving the Bolsheviki representation at the peace conference, while England and America seem ready to let them participate in the proceedings.

For all except France the easiest way is to let the Russians fight out their own disputes. If the Bolsheviki win, Russia will not figure as a great power for mony a long year. The danger for Europe lies in German influence in Russian affairs and the possibility of German intervention and eventual conquest. If Russia is to be let alone it would be wise to make Poland strong enough to act as a buffer between her and Germany. The Russian problem will be a troublesome issue at the peace conference. France is logical in saying that the Allies cannot make a contract with crime.

In Germany the Bolshevist, or extreme Socialist, uprising seems to be only a flash in the pan. The German people can read and most of them desire a chance to rehabilitate their fortunes. They may repudiate their internal war debts and divide the land of the great landowners and the crown, but they know that they must pay war damages either in money or territory, and the longer anarchy prevails the worse their position will be. They realize that they have lost the war, but they put the blame on the imperial government, the Junkers and their weak allies. They believe that their army was victorious in the field because the war in the west was fought on foreign soil. They remain conscious of military power and feel sure that a new Germany or a Teutonic confederation will regain strength and prestige within a quarter of a century.

Germany will not look to the west or over the seas for territorial gains and trade domination in our time. Her star of hope is in the east, where Russia lies prostrate and will be at her mercy if the Entente Allies and America keep their hands off and Poland does not form a serious obstacle. By conquests and the promise of still greater acquisition Bismarck welded the discordant German states into a great military power. Greed will again unite them if they see in Russia an easier victim than France proved to be. France dreads to face a greater Germany on the Rhine and therefore opposes the idea of abandoning Russia to her fate and Germany.

TO KEEP THE RECORD STRAIGHT

(Wall Street Journal.)

There is a whining persistency about German appeals to the United States to grant them a clemency they never showed in the hour of victory, and one which would have been further from their thoughts had they finally won success in their monstrous enterprise. That there may be no misunderstanding, that sentimentalism shall not be allowed to prevail over common sense, it is timely to state what Germany's international relations were, less during the war than in many years preceding.

As one of all nations Germany directed her diplomacy to keeping her neighbors in hot water. She was fomenting quarrels all over the world. The record, indeed, is one of continuous and consistent perfidy, based on the erroneous assumption that she could profit more by the ruin than the prosperity of her international customers.

To this end she did everything possible to embroil France with Spain; to maintain a dangerous state of unrest in the Balkans; to cause bad feeling between Italy and Greece; to stimulate Turkish misgovernment; to keep open the difference between Russia and Japan; to drag Japan into a conflict with ourselves; to keep the discontent in French Canada and to keep our hands full with needless disputes in Central and South America.

It may never be known how much the acrimony of the situation in Ireland was fostered by German intrigue solely to embarrass the British Government, to whose true freedom of the seas Germany owed her maritime commerce, as the late Albert Ballin wonderingly admitted, with a characteristic German reflection upon English folly. German missionairies in India did all they could to stimulate unrest there, helped by a small but articulate element in Bengal suffering from too much western education. In a time of world peace, in Egypt, one of the best governed dependencies in the world, gratuitous trouble was made for the British rulers through German agents.

It is needless to speak of Kiauchow, and similar mischievous efforts in China. Even Australia and New Zealand were not forgotten in the mischief-making German Pacific possessions, and it was by propaganda from German West Africa that an attempt to raise the Boer question afresh was almost successful. There is poetic justice about the way in which the Boers and the British colonies extinguished German possessions on the African continent.

And Germany has not changed. The more it is changed, the more it remains the same thing. The clumsy campaign to create bad feeling at this time between ourselves and the British is sufficiently obvious. Germany is unrepentant, dead to any sense of honor or of shame, and prepared to resume the role of the world's trouble maker on any opportunity. What would a league of nations do with such an incurable mischief maker as one of its principal members

PROPOSES A MEMORIAL

Editor Review: The generosity of the best of our city papers is always very marked in giving valuable space to the opinions of correspondents, and of late some subjects treated have caused much diversion of opinion. May I claim your indulgence to make a suggestion which I am quite satisfied will be welcomed by those interested, will not cause any division of opinion either by the leaders or the rank and file, and will be gladly taken up by the various larger centres all over the Province, as it is very desirable that the idea should be a purely Provincial undertaking.

The suggestion is to erect a suitable monument to the memory of the very great number of its members who made the supreme sacrifice for freedom, justice, liberty and homes. And I would suggest that bearing in mind that nearly 70,000 Orangemen participated in this momentous struggle, that it would be particularly appropriate that all Past and present Grand Masters of the Grand Lodge of British America, the Past and present Grand Masters of the Grand Orange Lodges of Ontario East and West the Past and present Grand Masters of the Royal Black Knights of Ireland be a committee to take such action as is determined to be best, and that H. C. Hocken, M.P., be the acting chairman, and that he promptly call a meeting in Toronto (as lonb central and the capital of the Province) for formulating plans and organization.

Let us strike the iron while it is hot, remembering that it was a long time after the occurence before a monument was built to the memory of the fallen and the commemoration of the honor due to the veterans of 1866 for their gallant deeds at Ridgeway and elsewhere. I am quite confident that every Lodge will do its duty and every man of us do his bit.

Hopefully yours,
LT.-COL. A. E. BELCHER,
Ex-President the Veterans of 1866.

LARCHMONT HOME AT BELLEVILLE

Editor Review: It may interest your readers to know that our boys have volunteered in such large numbers that scarcely any, of suitable age and physique, remained to be drafted. When conscription was introduced into Canada, over 600 were with the Canadian contingents and many have given their lives for "England's honor and England's truth."

One served as chaplain with a Canadian brigade; another, taking a college course when war broke out, obtained a commission and went overseas as a lieutenant. After some time in England, he reverted in rank so that he might get to the front.

In order to complete our Roll of Honor, former employers of our lads are invited to communicate to the Larchmont Home, Belleville, the names of those known to them who have enlisted in the army or navy. If possible, the regimental number, battalion, or battery, should be given. Any information will be greatly appreciated by the management of the Home.

Our large premises in Liverpool, England, containing 120 beds, have been at the free disposal of the Government for wounded soldiers since 1915.

A. Drummond, Superintendent.

THIS WEAK, NERVOUS MOTHER

Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Her Health.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I was very weak, always tired, my back ached, and I felt sickly most of the time. I went to a doctor and he said I had nervous indigestion, which added to my weak condition kept me worrying most of the time and he said if I could not stop that, I could not get well. I heard so much about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound my husband wanted me to try it. I took it for a week and felt a little better. I kept it up for three months, and I feel fine and can eat anything now without distress or nervousness."—Mrs. J. WORTHLING, 2842 North Taylor St., Philadelphia Pa.

The majority of mothers throughout overdo, there are so many demands upon their time and strength; the result is invariably a weakened, run-down, nervous condition with headaches, backache, irritability and depression—and soon more serious ailments develop. It is at such periods in life that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will restore a normal healthy condition, as it did to Mrs. Worthling.

PADEREWSKI AND SOME OF HIS IDEALS FOR POLAND

The New President of the Liberated Country Has Big Plans for the Welfare of His People so Long Oppressed.

As soon as Paderewski learn that the armistice had been signed, he took the first steamer, S.S. Megantic, for Europe, in order to be nearer the scene of action.

The great pianist had been travelling in the United States an unofficial Ambassador for Poland.

When asked what sort of a settlement of the Polish question he expected, Paderewski was most willing to talk and gave the following interview to Silas Tobenkin, a U. S. journalist also travelling to Europe on the S.S. Megantic.

"There can be but one settlement of the Polish question—a just settlement," Paderewski said. "If the Polish question is not settled now and forever, the war, with its appalling sacrifices, has been in vain—a failure. A just settlement of the Polish question means a strong Poland, not a small Polish state of the polish territory which was held by Russia prior to this war, but a Polish state embracing all Polish territory in Central Europe, a union of Russian, German and Austrian Poland. Such a state must include within its boundaries the Kingdom of Poland (in Russia), Galicia, West Prussia, (Dansig), part of East Prussia (Allenstein), the province of Posen, upper Silesia, Austrian Silesia (Teschen), the Polish districts of the present government of Grodno (Bielsk, Bielostok) and Lithuania, the latter an autonomous nation within the Polish state. Such a Polish state will have a population of 40,000,000."

No Other Way.

"There is no other way out. There can be no half-way solution of the Polish problem. It is either a strong Poland and stability in Europe or a weak Poland and the eternal featuring of the old wound. For look at the map: In a strong Poland, the kind I have outlined, the kind we are asking, Poland gets a gateway to the sea. Danzig will be our seaport. The River Vistula, a Polish river, until now tributary to Germany, takes on new life. It connects directly with the Baltic. It links Poland with the world. It is the greatest stimulus to Polish commerce and industry.

"On the other hand, see what happens if, instead of a strong Poland, with an outlet to the sea, we get a weak Poland, with no direct avenue to the ocean. Poland is then once more dependent upon its two principal neighbors, Russia and Germany. Russia is torn by inner strife and civil war, and for a generation or two will itself be helpless. Poland, therefore, must turn to Germany for help. For geographical advantage is on Germany's side. She is nearer to Poland than England, nearer than America.

"If, when peace comes, Poland emerges out of this world cataclysm a small, weak state, with no seaport, then Germany has won the war. A weak Poland means that Germany's old diplomacy and cunning have triumphed. German diplomacy before the war with regard to Central Europe in a nutshell was this: It wanted Central Europe, from the Baltic to the Black Sea on the east and to the Adriatic Sea on the west, to be divided into small, weak states, having their own petty kings, but taking their civilization, their commerce and industry and Kultur from Germany. A weak Poland, a Poland dependent upon Germany for ta approach to the sea, is a Poland controlled by Germany. A strong Poland, with Danzig as its door to the world—and Germany loses its option on Central Europe."

No Personal Ambition.

"What sort of a Poland are you looking forward to—republican or monarchical?" Paderewski was asked.

The Pianist opened his eyes wide and looked quizzical.

"I have no ambition to be King. All this talk is absurd—it is too silly to be dignified with a serious denial. True to any country's traditions, I am a republican—always was one!" he replied.

"There is, however, just one word of advice on the matter of government that I can give my compatriots. It is my advice that Poland shall have a government similar to tha of its neighboring countries. If Russia and Germany are republican, let Poland be republican. If Russia and Germany go back to monarchy, then Poland had better have a monarchy. Our trouble in the past has been that Poland was in advance of the governments of the neighboring states. For four hundred years Poland has been self-governing. A king never meant much to us; the Diet ruled, and her very progressiveness was the cause of our country's downfall. While Russia was stepped in Byzantism, Poland was following the civilization of the West. She was ahead of her neighbors in humanistic ideals. This liberalistic tendency set Russia, Germany and Austria dead against her; and ultimately broke the Polish kingdom into fragments. We want for Poland a steady, normal existence. And such an existence can be best attained by not adopting a mode of government that will be the antipodes of that of its neighbors. She must not strive to be an exception, but go with the crowd and at an equal pace."

To this question: "what will be the answer of the New Poland to the Polish peasant's clamor for land?"

"He'll get his land," Paderewski responded quickly. "I said a little while ago that it is advisable for Poland to have a government similar to that of its neighboring states. That includes not only the institution of administration of law and justice, the method of instituting social and economic reforms."

The Jewish Question.

"There is practically no Jewish question in Poland," the Pianist asserted.

"For eight centuries the Jews have formed practically the merchant class of Poland, thus forming a part of the Polish middle class. The Polish nobles were too absorbed in political struggles and in war, on the one hand, and were deterred by custom, perhaps, on the other, from engaging in commerce. The peasants were too primitive to develop a commercial or middle class of their own. The Jews filled in the gap. They are the commercial element par excellence.

"There never has been a program in Poland. And if in isolated and rare instances some string resembling a feud had arisen between Jews and Poles, such a feud was without exception incited either by Russian or German agents for some definite and sinister purpose."

When reminded of the frequent dispatches from Poland during the war, telling of bitter persecutions and horrible atrocities practised by the Poles upon Jews, Paderewski replied:

"Yes, I read those dispatches. There certainly was a lot of suffering and [illegible] war zone on civilians of all classes. But that these cruelties were perpetrated by Poles upon Jews as Jews does not seem credible to me."

THE SALVATION ARMY HOSTEL, LONDON, ONT.

In connection with the work of re-patriation with the Salvation Army is establishing at points throughout the provinces hostels. These are comfortable lodging houses, where good accommodation is afforded at most trifling prices. In fact the applicant who is without money is taken in and cared for just the same. The enter prise puts in service accommodation, nothing like as expensive as the regular hotel, and yet infinitely comfortable. Peterborough, as a result of the Big Drive now on, may have one of these hostels established here.

HIGHER SALARY FOR CLERGYMEN

BAPTISTS TALK OF RAISING $15,000 TO INCREASE STIPENDS.

Toronto, Jan. 17.—A determination to take immediate action in raising the salaries of home missionaries was displayed at the afternoon session of the Baptist annual convention yesterday. Addresses were delivered by both ministerial and lay delegates calling for definite steps to be taken toward putting the resolution into practical effect. Ex-Mayor Urquhart and Mr. James Ryrie presented a motion proposing that the increases in minister's salaries to the minimum of $1000 should be the first charge upon the funds of the church and should have precedence over any other advance movement. This motion was laid on the table until the convention had heard Rev. Dr. Farmer on the forward movement program. The convention adopted the resolution of the Finance Committee, suggesting immediate action in the raising of the salaries of pastors to $1,000 with house and means of transportation.

Need $15,000 More Income

One delegate wanted to know how the convention intended to carry out its resolution to raise the 90 pastors salaries to $1000. To do this they would require $15000 increase in the income of the Home Missions Board. It would mean a large increase in the budget.

Pastors' Salaries Are Far Too Low

Toronto, Jan. 16.—Baptists of Ontario and Quebec met for their thirtieth annual convention in Jarvis Street Baptist Church yesterday. The convention opened with a ministerial session in the afternoon, when the chief subject under consideration was "Rural Problems."

Rev. Dr. Cousins, Secretary of the Home Mission Board, presented a resolution from the Finance Committee, recommending that the board take immediate action to increase the minimum salary of ministers to $1,000 with house and transportation.

Dr. Couming said that there were 117 pastors who were receiving less than $900 per year, and some were getting as low as $600. These conditions, he said, were compelling men to seek service in other churches: many had gone to the United States and some were driven from the ministry by the privation of the country pastorate. He said that a substantial increase in salary was an essential to a strong pastoral leadership.

Other States Besides California to Seek to Have Plebiscite

San Francisco, Cal., Jan. 16—Following the obtaining here of an order temporarily restraining Governor William D. Stephens from signing ratification of the Federal prohibition constitutional amendment, it was indicated today that similar action may be taken in certain other States. It was said at the office of the California Grape Growers' Association that such action is possible in twelve other states.

The States, acording to the association, are: Arkansas, Colorado, Maine, Nevada, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Oregon, Ohio, Utah, Washington, Missouri and Nebraska. In these States, it was said, all legislative actions can be under the law referred to the people, and that in many of them the people have sixty day in which to take a referendum.

EAT LESS MEAT IF BACK HURTS

Take a glass of Salts to Flush Kidneys if bladder bothers you.

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acid in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.

Self-Abnegation

(By Mrs. F. A. Calder.)

"If thy right hand offend thee, cut it off."—St. Matthew xviii:8.

My soul, if aught there be
Of earth that clings to thee
With down-draught weight,
Be it right hand or eye,
Sever the sinful tie
Ere yet too late.

Daily not, or delay,
Cast it this hour away,
Nor count the cost;
For it were untold gain
Heaven's glory to attain,
With all else lost.

Even though, perchance, it prove
What most you prize and love
On earth below,
Yet should one shade of guile
Taint thy heart's love the while,
That love forego.

'Tis better life to win,
Though maimed thou enter in
To bliss on high,
Than for some transient toy
To forfeit endless joy
Beyond the sky.

Let not thy courage fail,
Thy Maker knows thee frail,
And strength will lend
To aid thee in the fight
If on His love and might
Thou but depend.

Lonely and sad and drear
May be thy pathway here,
Life's sun gone down,
Patience, 'twill soon be o'er,
And thine on yon bright shore
The victor's crown.

Lindsay Merchants Fined for Failure to Obey Law.

Four important cases, of interests to merchants in general, were heard in Lindsay Police Court Wednesday morning, one before Magistrate Bradford and three before County Magistrate Moore. Messrs. Daman Ball, of Lindsay, Bradley of Dunsford, Northey, of Eenelon Falls, and T. C. Devitt, of Bobcaygeon, were charged with selling Health Salts without affixing the inland revenue war tax stamp, all four being fined the lowest possible fine of $50 and costs.

Charges were laid by J. W. Bickle, of Cobourg, Deputy Collector of Inland Revenue, who was deputed to make an inspection of the stores in the town and county.

Messrs. Ball and Devitt pleaded not guilty and in these cases evidence was taken and convictions obtained.

NATIONAL COUNCIL

ordeen; their collecting of money was stopped because it was found necessary to stop all charitable collections not strictly for war purpose. No court proceedings whatever were taken, and Lord and Lady Aberdeen left the country entirely of their own volition.

At the close of the discussion, the president of the Council bringing in the above resolution, expressed herself as completely satisfied that the evidence produced, entirely cleared the the matter up, and she accordingly withdrew the resolution.

Two Letters.

Space will not allow the printing of the evidence, but the following letters are two of several which could be produced:

Dear Mrs. Cummings:

I have interviewed Hon. Edwin P. Kilroe, Assistant District Attorney of New York City, who is in charge of the investigation of certain charitable organizations collecting money in and about the city of New York, during the past year, and was informed by him, that his office had no evidence whatever, in any way, impugning the honor and integrity of Lord and Lady Aberdeen, or either of them, and that the stopping of their collections did not reflect in any way, upon their personal integrity, and that all activities of a similar nature were stopped at the same time.

I am authorized to make this statement by Mr. Kilroe and you may have the same verified, by telegraph, if desired, addressing him at the office of Hon. Ed. Swan, Criminal Court building, New York City.

Yours, J. J. CURTIN.

To Mrs. Sanford.

Another letter to Mrs. W. E. Sanford, of Hamilton, is as follows:

British Military Attache,
New York Office.

Mrs. W. E. Sanford,
Hamilton, Ont.

Madam,—In answer to your question, I beg to state that the Marquis and Marchioness of Aberdeen and Temair left Canada of their own volition, on the conclusion of their highly successful mission to this country, which was the collection of funds for the Women's National Health Association of Ireland.

From figures and statements submitted to this office it would appear that Lord and Lady Aberdeen were instrumental in sending to Ireland nearly $100,000, and that this money was raised at an extremely low outlaw, Lord Aberdeen himself standing most of the expenses of his trip to this country.

The British Assistant Provost Marshal in New York paid Lord and Lady Aberdeen the respect of aiding them in every way possible, as he would any other distinguished Britishers visiting this country, who, like themselves, have done good work for the Allied cause.

I am, Madam,
Sincerely yours,
(Sgd.) N. G. THWAITES, Lt.-Col.
British Assistant Provost Marshal,
New York City.

BOARD APPOINTS A COMMITTEE

TO LOOK INTO MATTER OF MORE SCHOOL ACCOMMODATION.

There was a special meeting of the Board of Education held last night to consider the urgent question of greater public school accommodation. After some discussion it was decided to appoint a committee composed of Chairman Deane, Dr. Neal and Messrs. E. G. Patterson, A. A. Fowler and J. M. Greene to investigate the circumstances and report back to the Board as to the exigencies of the situation and the best methods of dealing with it.

This is a question which has been up for discussion quite frequently of late and the convening of a special meeting to again discuss the situation and the appointment of the committee would indicate that the members of the Board intend losing no time in taking some definite action

School Trustees Ask For Salaries

Payment of trustees was favored by the Toronto Board of Education last evening by a vote of 9 to 7. The Minister of Education will be asked to provide the necessary legislation.

Trustee Dr. Hunter, the mover of the motion, said the members of the board gave a great deal of time to the work of the board, which occupied a large portion of their time, and it was due to them that they should be paid.

SALVATION ARMY LEADERS EXPLAIN OBJECT OF DRIVE

Commissioner Richards Tells What Will Be Done With the Money the People Are Asked to Contribute in the Campaign Which Opens Next Week.

In addition to the Minister of Labor, Peterboro, last night, had another distinguished visitor in the person of Commissioner Richards, commander, in Canada, of the Salvation Army. He came in connection with the million dollar drive which is being instituted by the organization of which he is the head in this country, and the local objective of which set at $30,000.

It was unfortunate that Commissioner Richards arrived upon an evening when there were so many meetings being held in the city. There was the Canadian Club luncheon, the assembly in the Labor Hall, addressed by Senator Robertson, and the meeting of the Board of Education. Many of those who attended these functions would have been glad of the opportunity of hearing the executive head of the Salvation Army, but in spite of such d stractions, there was a good attendance at the Council Chamber to hear the message of the Commissioner.

The Commissioner's Address.

Mr. J. A. Aylmer presided during the first part of the evening as Mayor Duncan did not arrive from the luncheon until about 8.30.

Commissioner Richards was the first speaker. He outlined the social work which the Army have been doing in the past in connection with war activities and stated that in the program which it was proposed to carry out with the aid of the funds, derived from the million dollar drive, there were four planks. The first was "across the seas," the second, "returned soldiers and their dependents," the third, "hostels for the returned men," and the last, "social service."

Under the first head he included work in the demobilization camps of England. Under the second, the care of soldiers, their wives and dependents and the task of re-establishing them in civil life. The formation of maternity hospitals and care of the widows and orphans.

He told of the splendid record of the Army in connection with relief work in the past and recounted several cases where the mother in many instances a soldier's widow with a family of little children while in receipt of an ample pension or separation allowance as the case might be, was making the very worst use of the money and was leaving the children to shift for themselves. The Salvation Army invariably made it a point to right these abuses.

Maternity hospitals had been established in a great many of the cities of the country, in which mothers were cared for while their families were being looked after by a district nurse. Every child must be considered an asset to the country and in New Bealand a mother was given a grant of $5 as a recognition of the birth of every child whether born in wedlock or otherwise. If this were true then it surely was to the advantage of the country that the mother who was in many cases the victim of the most abject poverty should be given every attention and the best of medical and hospital treatment.

Rescuing the Fallen.

In connection with the social service part of the program the speaker established a strong case. The Salvation Army is recognized as the greatest organization in existence as far as reaching out the helping hand in that direction is concerned. Added to this it has had fifty years' experience in carrying out social and moral reform work and is especially adapted to handle the peculiar and distressing situat on which has arisen on account of the absence of men from their families during the war. In collaboration with the government, the Salvation Army has established a great number of orphanages and homes for children who, while in numberless cases, not orphans, are practically dependent upon the state for their rearing.

Commissioner Richards was a pleasing and unassuming speaker and his words were endowed with that ring of sincerity which so quickly commends itself to the auditor. He was accompanied on the tour, which he is making of the cities of the province, by two of his staff—Col. Marchen, Divisional Commander for Eastern Ontario, and Brigadier Morris, Field Secretary for Canada east.

Peterboro Will Respond.

Mayor Duncan, who presided during the latter part of the evening, assured the speaker of the evening that the city would make a liberal response to the Army's appeal for funds in the Red Shield Drive. He suggested that Peterborough as an important centre would be an excellent place in which to establish one of the homes he had been describing. The Commissioner had his secretary make a note of His Worship's remark.

Ex-Alderman Dobbin, Alderman Turner, Mrs. W. R. Morris, Ex-Mayor Buller and Messrs. H. Rose, W. Stocker, Hugnson Johnstone, Weller Stocker and others voiced their appreciation of the good work accomplished by the Army and their good wishes for the campaign.

The following communication from General Booth and a telegram regarding a meeting held yesterday in Toronto in the interests of the Red Shield Drive, were read as follows:

Cabe From the General.

Wish you God-speed and every success in your efforts to enable the Salvation Army play its part in meeting Canada's soldier needs. For the sake of the soldiers we look to the Dominion to maintain the splendid reputation it has made of generosity during the war.

BRAMWELL BOOTH.

Word From Toronto.

A large gathering in the Egyptian Room of the King Edward Hotel was address by Tom Moore, the Labor leader, who was frank enough to say that while no plan was perfect in the minds of Labor which would deal with such problems as now confronted Labor, yet Labor was thoroughly behind the Salvation Army in its present effort, and that under the conditions which at the present time existed, no organization could do the work as well as the Salvation Army, and his organization, therefore, had the full sympathy and help of Labor.

Sir Edmund Walker gave a charming talk, as also did Mr. Warburton, Colonel Dinnick and Mayor Church and the gathering altogether was enthusiastic and un que.

GROWING! GROWING! GROWING!

What is $4.00 today? It is a question of purchasing power. What will $4.00 buy at present prices? Just over one third of a barrel of flour. Before the war flour was selling at $5.00 a barrel.

No one can say just how much more the purchasing power of the dollar will be in 1924, but you can see that the four dollars you put into War-Savings Stamps now, will grow, not only in number, but in value.

Your investment in War-Savings Stamps is like the snowball rolling down a slope. You give it a start and it grows by itself!

Your four dollars becomes five, and every dollar will be worth more.

Whether you buy one W-S.S. each day, or each week, or each month, or only two or three in a year, your money is growing, growing, GROWING all the time.

Those who cannot invest $4.00 at a time, can buy Thrift Stamps at 25 cents each. Sixteen of these on a Thrift Card will be accepted as $4.00 in exchange for a W-S.S.

MINISTER OF LABOR ADDRESSES BIG MEETING OF WORKINGMEN

Ssys That Capt. Burnham in Parliament Has Always Proved a Staunch Friend of the Wage Earner—Utmost Harmony Between Speaker and Audience.

"I have found Capt. J. H. Burnham a staunch friend of the working men," remarked Minister of Labor Robertson at the mass meeting in the Labor Hall last night, a gathering that taxed the large hall to its capacity.

This remark was made in reply to a question asked by Mr. James R. Runnett, following the advice of the speaker to send to Parliament men who were friendly to the cause. Mr. Runnett wanted to know whether in the opinion of the Senator it was advisable to select a man who had risen from the ranks himself or some member of a profession.

Senator Robertson declared that it made no difference what a man's position was or what his political bearings so long as he was a friend of the workingmen as shown by his private and public record. Ten men in Parliament, elected by labor could achieve wonders. It was not necessary for Labor to have a majority in order to carry their point or achieve their object in any particular case.

Senator Robertson gave an account of what he has himself been able to accomplish even though he was the lone labor man in the Senate, that branch of the Government which is popularly supposed to be moribund. He secured a semi-monthly pay day for the railroad workers of Canada after that measure before his public career commenced, had been twice passed by the House and as often killed in the Upper Chamber. One of the first converts to his way of thinking was the late Senator Mackenzie Bowell.

Senator Robertson had also been able to secure the operation of the McAdoo award in the railway business of Canada. This means an eight hour day and a minimum wage. The most of the members of Parliament are disposed to be fair to the workingmen if Labor's case is put squarely before them.

Recounting further what he had been able to accomplish on behalf of labor, Senator Robertson told how, when the lumbermen and miners of the country asked the government to supply them with ten thousand men, one of the terms insisted upon before any effort was made to grant the request was that the existing rate of wages and working conditions should prevail. A considerable portion of the Senator's address at the Labor Hall was the same as that delivered at the Canadian Club luncheon earlier in the evening, a full report of which appears in another column. He repeated his assurance that the labor situation is not as serious as some imagine. The government purposes to install a chain of employment bureaus, one of which will be opened in this city. The building trade will be revived by the assistance given by the Federal Government to the provinces for the erection of houses and the railways of the country are anticipating their repair work by putting in early orders for ties and other material.

The Senator advised labor to follow the example of the workers in the United States and not ally itself with any particular political party.

At the close of his address the Senator answered a number of questions which brought out a vast amount of interesting information. A returned soldier in the audience asked how it was that some veterans were receiving a pension of only $8 a month and this elicited an explanation of the present pension laws.

T. Tooms, who favored a minimum wage and an eight hour day Senator Robertson replied that the Federal Government could only adopt these in industries which they chartered such as the railways. Private industries, in Peterboro or elsewhere were under the jurisdiction of the Provincial Legislature.

President A. J. Bolwell of the Trades Council, who presided at the meeting asked the Senator why the Government refused to grant conciliation boards to settle disputes with its own employes while instituting such methods in the case of private corporations. He was informed that the Civil Service Commission was really a standing board of arbitration and had precedence in such matters.

"What is to be done with the alien enemies now in Canada?" asked Hugh Robertson, a returned soldier.

The Senator replied that this problem is to be settled by a conference of all the Allies and the Canadian Government will be guided by the decision arrived at. If the Conference decides that every alien be returned to their native countries then back they shall go. In that event the Department of Labor can in fifteen minutes supply the name and address of every alien in the country, this information having been secured by the general registration of the population last summer. That was one benefit arising from this work. Still greater benefits would have followed if the war had lasted longer.

Addresses were made by President Bolwell, who introduced the speaker, and by Secretary Stevens. Mr. Jos. Begley and Aldermen Morrison and Gainey. Senator Robertson complimented the workingmen upon their success at the recent municipal election.

A vote of thanks to the Senator, moved by Messrs Begley and Stevens was carried by a rising vote.

WE HAVE NO FEAR

suffering from a scarcity of labor we absorb 40,000 of these Celestials, for a year, at the end of which time the allied governments would find it convenient to continue them on their return journey to Asia.

"You haven't seen any sign of them and are not likely to," said the Minister of Labor.

Praises the Employers

Senator Robertson referred to the splendid manner in which the employers of the country had seconded the efforts of the government in meeting the acute post-war labor situation. They had in many cases continued men upon their pay-rolls whose services could have been dispensed with and showed every disposition to do their utmost towards averting the crisis.

The Shrinking Dollar

Four years ago, the speaker reminded his auditors, the compensation of the working man was by no means excessive. Today he is receiving more and yet in proportion to the increased cost of living his wages are lower today. In no country of the world during the last four years has there been less labor trouble and agitation than in our Dominion. In concluding this phase of his address Senator Robertson appealed to the employer to aid the workman who had felt the pinch of war time more acutely than any other class.

How Men are Brought Home

Next the speaker dealt with the plans which had been made for demobilising the Canadian army. Canada had been divided into 22 dispersal areas and the soldiers were sent home in units comprising 500 for each of these districts. Trains composed of 10 coaches and a requisite number of baggage cars stood waiting at the point of debarkation and upon these the men for each area made their homeward journey thus eliminating the confusion which would be inevitable if the work were not carried out in a methodical manner.

The men were met by representatives of the different associations carrying on social war work and in speaking of this program which was arranged by the repatriation committee Senator Robertson stated that there were 50,000 women dependents of soldiers who had never seen Canada before who had to be met and sent to the homes of their husbands and in connection with this work there were Rotary Clubs in 21 cities which had offered the use of their members' automobiles in transporting them from the depots to their destinations.

As there were five departments of the Government which were directly interested in the carrying out of the work of returning the soldiers and their dependents to their native land and of re-establishing the former in civilian life it had been decided in order to prevent confusion and overlapping to form a Repatriation Committee with H. J. Daly of Toronto as its director and place it in charge of the work. The results of this arrangement had been highly satisfactory and were in no small measure due to the organization and executive ability of Mr. Daly.

In dealing with the return to civil occupations of our soldiers the speaker pointed out that it was an impossible to do this by giving him a change of clothes as it was to make a trained fighting man by handing him a uniform. He then outlined the measures which had been adopted in regard to the discharge of the soldiers; the last medical examination to determine the degree of his disability or to assure that he would not in the future make application for a pension without justification and the varying amounts of post discharge pay according to the length and scene of service. He stated that Canada was giving a more liberal pension than any other country and in connection with caring for maimed and otherwise incapacitated men was according her veterans better treatment than other nationalities. Hospitals and homes in which certain cases would be segregated and treated in the best manner possible had been established and everything was being done to show in a slight degree the gratitude of the Canadian people to their defenders.

An Optimistic Note

Dealing with the immediate future of Canada the Minister of Labor struck a cheeringly optimistic note. He had no fears for the people from the viewpoint of labor, industry and commerce. The workingman of this country had demonstrated his ability to save and serve when he subscribed to the last war loan in a measure which established an $87 per capita record as compared with the $55 standard reached by our American neighbors. When the spring came there would be an abundance of work for everyone and to back up this statement the speaker reasoned that we are bound to develop an extensive foreign trade with the nations of Europe which formerly exported nearly all the manufactured products required in this country. These nations with the exception of England are now incapable of supplying sufficient goods manufactured and natural, for their own use and the United States and Canada were in a fortunate position which would permit them to step into the breach.

Public Works Planned

In order to further guard against a shortage of employment the Government is commencing to carry out extensive public works which will require the services of a veritable army and the railroads of the country have placed contracts for the manufacture of rolling stock and other material which would ensure the employment of 40,00 workmen for nine months. There is the Land Settlement scheme by which returned soldiers can secure desirable land in the west and the east, upon the most reasonable terms and this will account for the absorption of still more available labor. The question of the construction of better highways in the country was discussed by the speaker. Road building while very necessary was not a pressing necessity and for that reason it had not been proceeded with during the war as extensively as previous to its outbreak. This work will now be resumed upon a considerable scale and will require a great deal of help. Seven counties east of Peterborough included in the Eastern Ontario Good Roads Association, will with the arrival of spring, commence the building of 526 miles of new highways.

Senator Robertson felt that there will be no great tide of immigration for a few years and that in the meantime Canada will have ample time to readjust herself to the new conditions.

No Danger from Bolsheviki

He felt that the people need entertain no fears as to Bolshevism becoming a menace in Canada. He condemned it in the strongest terms and expressed the opinion that no one who has any stake or interest in this country can hold Bolshevik ideas. The soldiers who fought to overthrow tyranny in Europe will not countenance such a system at home and in support of this view, pointed out the action of the G.W.V.A. in Vancouver in refusing their support to the radical laborites of that city when they endeavored to enlist the sympathy of the returned soldiers in a recent campaign to carry an arbitrary and unjust point.

While feeling that there was no danger from this European menace Senator Robertson asserted that it was the duty of the press of the country to denounce it at all times and point out the terrible results which would follow its spread to our Dominion.

Col. Duncan Walker expressed on behalf of the members of the Canadian Club their appreciation of the splendid address of Senator Robertson. He assured him that he had imparted a vast amount of interesting information and had cleared up many points in connection with the post war conditions.

STOP DANDRUFF! HAIR GETS THICK, WAVY, BEAUTIFUL

GIRLS! DRAW A CLOTH THROUGH YOUR HAIR AND DOUBLE ITS BEAUTY.

SPEND A FEW CENTS! DANDRUFF VANISHES AND HAIR STOPS FALLING OUT.

To be possessed of a head of heavy beautiful hair, soft, lustrous, fluffy, wavy and free from dandruff, is merely a matter of using a little Danderine.

It is easy and inexpensive to have nice, soft hair and lots of it. Just get a small bottle of Knowlton's Danderine now—all drug stores recommend it—apply a little as directed, and within ten minutes there will be an appearance of abundance, freshness, fluffiness and an incomparable gloss and lustre, and try as you will, you cannot find a trace of dandruff or falling hair; but your real surprise will be after about two weeks' use, when you will see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—sprouting out all over your scalp—Danderine is, we believe, the only sure hair grower, destroyer of dandruff and cure for itchy scalp, and it never fails to stop falling hair at once.

If you want to prove how pretty and soft your hair really is, moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair—taking one small strand at a time. Your hair will be soft, glossy and beautiful in just a few moments—a delightful surprise awaits everyone who tries this.

The moderate laborites defeated the radicals for the control of the Toronto Trades and Labor Council.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of Pte. G. F. Wicker, killed in action, January 17th, 1917.

I heard one call, he said;
Mother, weep not for my death;
Twas to guard our home from hell,
Twas to make thy joy I fell.
Praising God and all is well.
What if now thy heart should quail
And in peace our victory fail,
If low greed in guise of right
Rout and rive they gathered might
And in thy power mankind to save,
Fail and perish on our grave."
On my grave whose legend be Fought with the brave and joyfully
Died in faith of victory.
Follow on the way we won
Thou hast found not lost thy son.
By father and mother.

AWAY!

By James Whitcombe Riley)

Cannot say, and I will not say
That he is dead. He is just away!

With a cheery smile and a wave of hand,
He has wandered into an unknown land,

And left us dreaming how very fair
It needs must be, since he lingers there.

And you—oh you, who the wildest yearn
For the old-time step and the glad return—

Think of him faring on as dear
In the love of There as the love of Here.

And loyal still, as he gave the blows
Of his warrior strength to his country's foes—

Mild and gentle, as he was brave,
When the sweetest love of his life he gave

To simple wings; where the violets grew
Pure as the eyes they were likened to

The touches of his hands have strayed
As reverently as his lips have prayed

When the little brown thrush that harshly cheered
Was dear to him as the mocking bird:

And he pitied as much as a man in pain
A writhing honey-bee wet with rain.

Think of him still as the same, I say:
He is not dead—he is just away!
By sisters.

What a politician says is one thing and what he does is another.

WHY NOT AIR THE CHARGES MADE AGAINST HAL CHASE?

He Is Entitled to a Hearing and Fans Have Been Kept Too Long in Doubt.

Early in August last, while the Cincinnati Reds were playing on the Polo Grounds, Christy Mathewson, manager of the Cincinnati club, suspended Hal Chase, his captain and first baseman, for the season, and made grave charges against him. Mathewson at the time said Chase never would play league ball again.

It now is more than five months since charges were made against Chase of [illegible] against the Cincinnati team, of which he was a member, and it seems high time these charges be proved or that Chase be declared innocent.

Chase already has started a suit against the Cincinnati club for salary he lost through his suspension. He also claims that salary owed to him before the period of his suspension never was paid him.

Hal Chase's long career has not been strewn with roses. He never had the disposition or perhaps the temperament to bring the full fruits of his remarkable ability to teams with which he has been associated. Chase has been wrong a great many times, and his attitude frequently has incensed men who were his admirers and friends. But Chase has some rights.

Long in Service.

Hal has been no ordinary player. Though still retaining his boyish face and manners, he is today the veteran player of baseball. Among active players, only Leon Ames, the Cardinal pitcher, was in baseball when Chase broke in with the Yankees on the old Hilltop grounds in 1905. Few dispute that he is the greatest first baseman that baseball ever developed, and of modern players he was excelled only by Cobb, Ed. Collins, Speaker, Wagner and Lajoie.

He has been manager of a team in the largest city of the country, and has been batting champion of the National League. All this being so, it is no more than simple justice that the charges against Chase be either proved or dismissed.

This is no brief for Chase, and if the Cincinnati club has conclusive evidence that he bet against his own team he summarily should be dismissed from baseball. In the early days of the sport a handful of players were caught tossing games were ejected without ceremony. The punishment meted out to Craver, Hall, Devlin and Nicholls in 1877 was so severe that no players have tried to tamper with any games since then.

For that reason it is hard to believe that Chase attempted to throw any games last season. Chase has many faults, but no one ever called him stupid. Even when he harbored one of his grouches Chase never lost his head.

Veil of Secrecy.

The Cincinnati club and the National League, too, always have seen fit to throw an air of secrecy over the Chase matter. The accusations against Chase never have been made public, and only bit by bit the evidence against Chase came to light.

Much of it is said to come from Giant players. One of the accusations against Chase is that he told Larry Doyle during a game, "Come on, get these fellows out (Cincinnati batsmen) so we can get out of here."

A remark of that sort does not smack of good team morale, but one needed only to be a casual visitor at the Polo Grounds last August to know that the great majority of the games were played with such a sentiment prevailing. Players realized that the game only was being permitted by the tolerance of the war department, and the motive of most players was to get nine innings over as speedily as possible.

If the Giants did consider Chase a crook it is significant that he played first base with the informal team of Giants which the New York players kept up after Labor Day. They played week-end games at Dyckman Oval and other nearby places.

The most damaging thing against Chase, however, is that a man of the integrity of Christy Mathewson made the charges against him. Mathewson is not the type of man to make charges against a fellow player, furthermore, a player who starred in New York at the same time that Marty was at his great, unless he gave the matter much thought and was sure of his ground. Mathewson considers the charges against Chase so grave that he said last season he did not see how Chase could return to league baseball.

John Heydler, president of the National League, said the Chase matter would be one of the first he would take up upon his elevation to the league presidency. However, the schedule meetings, the National Commission controversy and other things have taken up Heydler's time, and the Chase case still remains undecided. It is hoped that immediately after the joint meetings of the two leagues this week Heydler will render a decision on a case which has dragged entirely too long.

SHE KNOWS HORSES

Elizabeth Daingerfield, director of the Haylands thoroughbred breeding establishment near Lexington, Ky., is the most successful woman breeder of thoroughbreds in the United States. Price McKinney, who has owned some of the great horses of the American turf, recently declared that Miss Daingerfield knew more about horses than any man he ever knew.

When Maj. Daingerfield, who had been at the head of the castleton stud owned by the late James B. Keene, died a few years ago, Miss Daingerfield, his daughter, succeeded him, and that the thoroughbreds from the keen establishment following Maj. Daingerfield's death maintained the same high average as during his life showed that Miss Daingerfield had a genius far beyond other members of her sex.

Miss Dangerfield has devoted the best part of her life to the study of the thoroughbred. She knows the eccentricities, the weaknesses and the strength of the race horse.

MAJOR AND MINOR LEAGUES APART

EACH TO GO OWN WAY NOW AND MAKE OWN ARRANGEMENTS.

New York, Jan. 17.—The major and minor baseball leagues, parties to the national agreement, the foundation of the professional end of the national sport, broke relations after a stormy meeting here.

The Magna Charta of organized baseball was, figuratively speaking, torn to pieces, and the two great combinations will in the future be bound together by an elastic agreement which will permit them to operate with comparative independence.

No prediction was made as to what effect proceedings will have on the professional game and the players, but leaders of both factions professed to be highly satisfied with the sensational turn affairs had taken when temporary arrangements were completed shortly before midnight.

Under the tentative agreement which was entered into the major and minor leagues are to respect the contractual, territorial and reservation rights of each other, with the provison that no minor league club shall claim the right to more players at any time than the maximum roster allowed to clubs in the major leagues. During the playing season this would equal 21 players.

The draft, optional and reservation agreements of the National Agreement, entered into in 1903, are things of the past, and the only way in which the major league clubs can obtain players from the minors will be by direct purchase.

Garry Herrmann, Chairman of the National Commission, in announcing the abrogation of the existing pact, said:

"The National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues requested changes which we could not and would not and would not grant, and when they stated that they would be the happiest men in the world if they were permitted to go their way and attend to their own business arrangements in the future we thought best to permit them to do as they desired."

HOCKEY GAME POSTPONED

Tonight the Peterborough Juniors were to have played the Port Hope team, but the game had to be postponed on account of the soft condition of the ice.

CANADIENS WIN FROM THE OTTAWA TEAM BY 10 TO 6

Senators Were Completely Outplayed Last Night at Every Point of Game.

Ottawa, Jan. 17. — Canadiens sprang the biggest surprise of the hockey season last night when they invaded the Capital and defeated Ottawa by 10 to 6, thus lengthening their lead in the championship race of the National Hockey League.

Canadiens scored a lead on a fluky goal thirty seconds after the commencement of the play and though Ottawa came back strong and nearly tied it up in the second period, they fell short of the mark and then exploded. Canadiens making a runaway of the contest until they were ahead at one stage by a score of 10 to 2. Jack Darragh then started Ottawa on a whirlwind finish and they scored four in succession, but the Canadien lead proved far too big and the red-shirted habitan's skated off the ice with a safe margin to their credit.

The Senators started with all their regulars on the ice and everyone apparently feeling fit. Canadiens, on the other hand, were without the services of Joe Malone, and Bert Corbeau was battered up to suchian extent that he only played in a portion of the match. In addition the ice, which was fast for a few minutes, but which, owing to the presence of the big crowd, soon grew sticky, ought to have favored Ottawa.

Big Crowd Disappointed

The locals had a great crowd of supporters on hand in the hopeful expectation of seeing them draw up on Canadiens in the championship race, but they fell down lamentably and with the exception of the last few minutes, played ragged hockey throughout. Canadiens outskated, outshot and outgeneralled Ottawa all through the piece or at least until they had made the outcome certain. "Newsy" Lalonde and his team mates giving a wonderful all-round exhibition.

Ottawa got away from the wire to a disastrous start, and this, no doubt, had a great deal to do with their collapse in the most important fixture of the season. Thirty seconds after the first sound of Referee Pulford's whistle, "Newsy" Lalonde shot and a low, slow shot caught Clint Benedict asleep at the switch, and, much to the amazement of the crowd lodged in the back of the net.

Canadiens have always been superb front runners and this goal, clever or lucky as the case may have been, inspired the visitors with confidence and enabled them to lay the extra man back on the defense forcing Ottawa to carry the offensive so desperately until the Senators cracked under the strain. The breaks were certainly against Ottawa and had it not been for Benedict's temporary lapse, the verdict might have gone to the red, white and black. On the night's play, however, Canadiens were far the better team.

Another big factor in the clean-cut victory of the French-Canadian was the phenomenol goalkeeping of George Vezina, who gave one of the greatest exhibitions ever seen here. During the first period, when Ottawa coming back determinedly after Lalonde's heart-breaking goal, had chances galore, Vezina must have stopped twenty shots; he picked them off [illegible] Denneny, Darragh and Cleghorn, baffling all the attempts of the home team to score through. Long shots seemed "pie" for the Chicoutimi boy, and when the Ottawas did get in close he skated out and easily blocked them.

Ottawa Applauds Vezina

Vezina continued this remarkable work in the second and third periods until even the most rabid Ottawa supporters were giving him a hand. He is undoubtedly a marvel.

Despite the fact that the ice was sticky and that Canadiens established in the second period a lead that assured them the victory, the hockey was at all time interesting. Canadiens, particularly Pitre, Vezina and Lalonde, giving spectacular exhibitions. It was also fast when one took into consideration the condition of the playing surface, though the only redeeming feature from an Ottawa standpoint was the stirring finish which Eddie Gerard and his team mates administered.

Referee, Harvey Pulford. Judge of play, Charlie McKinley. Umpires, Joe Wallace and Alf. Livings. Time—J. M. Walker. Scorer, J. Larkin.

Have YOU any idea what that decision is costing you—even if you live? Of course, if you die the cost is much GREATER.

Read the following facts and then decide for yourself:

The premium you would pay for $1000 of insurance at age 20 WOULD BUY YOU nearly $4000 of insurance at age 21.

The premium you pay for $1000 of insurance at age 30 WOULD BUY YOU nearly $2500 at age 21.

The premium you pay for $1000 of insurance at age 35 WOULD BUY YOU $1440 at age 21.

Besides, while you may be insurable at age 21 you may not be insurable AT ANY PRICE at the other ages mentioned.

TEST CASE WON BY LABOR MEN

JUSTICE DEPARTMENT GRANTS STAY OF PROCEEDING IN WINNIPEG CASE.

Winnipeg, Jan. 17—On instructions from the Department of Justice at Ottawa proceedings were stayed in the case of Michael Charitoniff, charged with having banned literature in his possession.

Charitonoff was formerly editor of the banned Bolshevist weekly, Robotchyjharod, in Winnipeg. He was sentenced October 14 last in the Winnipeg Police Court to three months in jail and a fine of $1000. A new trial was refused and the Winnipeg Trades and Labor Council obtained for Charitonoff a writ of habeas corpus, and obtained from the Court of Appeal an order for a new hearing of the case before Magistrate MacDonald. The case has been adjourned several times awaiting instructions from Ottawa. Today on receipt of these instructions, the Crown Prosecutor entered a stay of proceedings.

The Trades and Labor Council here state that this is a test case. Their success in the appeal means, thinks Secretary Ernest Robinson, that Labor will be able to demand the release of all political prisoners in Canada.

PREMIER GOUIN MAY LEAD PARTY

RUMOR NAMES HIM AS SUCCESSOR TO SIR WILFRID LAURIER.

Quebec, Jan. 17.—The political pot is boiling in the Quebec Provincial field, and rumors are floating around as thick as a Piccadilly fog. Of course it is hard to tell yet what sort of a stew is to be scooped out of the pot when the time comes, but politicians who are well posted have very interesting and at the same time plausible tales.

One of these says that Sir Lomer Gouin, the present Prime Minister of Quebec, is to have the Provincial arena to enter the Federal field. Lomer Gouin would become the leader of the Liberal Opposition at Ottawa, replacing Sir Wilfrid Laurier, but this is not considered as serious in well-informed circles.

Sir Lomer Gouin would become a member of the Liberal Opposition at Ottawa for the present.

Now, as to the leadership of the Quebec Provincial Liberals, rumor has it that the Hon. Dr. Beland would take it, resigning his seat in the Federal House to this end.

But this will not meet the ideas of all the Liberal leaders in Quebec, as there is a strong indication that Hon. L. A. Taschereau, at present Minister of Public Works and Labor in this Province, has an eye on the Premiership of Quebec, and he has strong support among a certain element, both in the House and also in the ring of political workers.

At any rate, what changes are to be made in the political world of Quebec will, according to every indication, occur within a very short time, probably soon after the session of the Provincial Legislature, which meets on Tuesday next, January 21st.

Salvation Army Is Free From Scandal

The Salvation Army is one of the most efficient agencies working for the social up-lift that we have in Canada. It is a widespread organization reaching every remote corner of the Dominion, and spending in its charitable branches a great deal of money.

No one has ever heard of any scandal connected with the spending operations of the Canadian Salvation Army. Its financial concerns are directed by an officer, who for 20 years was a chartered accountant, and who is an expert in business matters. This officer holds to "strict accountability" every service of the Army which has to do with the handling of funds. This business efficiency is a guarantee that the $1,000,000 which it is hoped to raise to further the Army schemes of demoblization and reconstruction, will be paid out in a manner intended by the public.

RUSSIAN BOLSHEVIK READY TO MAKE PEACE WITH ALLIES

Ask That Their Regime Be Respected and That Their Confiscation Policy Be Regarded as Lawful Measure.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Jan. 18.—Foreign Minister Litvinoff of the Russian Bolshevik Government, has made several proposals on behalf of the Soviet regime, through the medium of a friendly emissary, for the opening of peace negotiations with the Entente, according to the Evening Standard today. The main conditions of the Bolshevik are that their regime be maintained intact and that their confiscation of property and money be recognized as lawfully-enacted measures.

EX-KAISER NOW LOOKS LIKE A MAN SEVENTY YEARS OLD

Ill and Aging Fast—Guards Around Castle More Vigilant Than Ever Since Rumors That Attempt Would Be Made to Kidnap the Exile

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Amerongen, Holland, Jan. 18.—William Hohenzollern's illness which manifests itself principally in the form of chills, is being aggravated by his constant worriment, the effects of which are plainly visible in his features and his general physical condition. Former German Emperor ooksl to be perhaps fifteen years older than when he crossed the frontier of Holland. Although he is only about to complete his sixtieth year, his appearance suggests a man of seventy.

Guards around the castle are maintaining the strictest vigilance in consequence of revival of rumors that an attempt might be made to kidnapp the ex-Emperor. The ex-Emperor, who had always been acustomed to smoke a considerable number of cigarettes daily, has now become a greater consumer of tobacco than ever.
